BRITISH-FRENCH UNDERSTANDING ON GERMANY AND ITALY REPORTED

France Said to Have Agreed to Accept Present Sanctions; Britain to Support Regional Security Pacts in Europe.

MOVE FOR HEAVIER PENALTIES PUT OFF

England to Wait Until After French Elections — Ethiopia Protests That League's Delay Aids Aggressor.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, April 18.—With Italian troops pressing on along the last 175 miles to Addis Ababa and League of Nations peace negotiations an admitted failure, Great Britian and France reached an "armistice" of their own today, agreeing to postpone discussions of additional League penalties against Italy until after the French elections April 26 and May 3.

As a result the special session of of the League Council called for Monday will be asked merely to adopt a resolution deploring the continuance of the war in Ethiopia and declaring existing sanctions against Italy will be maintained.

The French-British understanding was reported as the League Conciliation Committee of 13 assembled and adopted a report admitting the failure of the committee's peace efforts.

The agreement, according to French sources, resulted from talks betewen Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, and Joseph Paul-Boncour, Frencn Minister of State.

Reported Agreement.

It was understood that France had agreed to accept, for the present, the continuation of existing sanctions against Italy in return for clearly-defined British support of the recent French proposal for regional non-agresssion pacts in Europe, instead of the bilateral treaties proposed by Germany to replace the Locarno treaty which Reichsfuehrer Hitler denounced in remilitarizing the Rhineland.

Britain has been staving off French demands for action by the Locarno powers against Germany and pressing for League action to end the war in Africa. France has been demanding that the Rhineland situation receive first consideration and, to obtain a united front against Italy, has advocated the lifting of League sanctions.

Before the agreement Britain had been expected to demand stronger penalties against Italy at the scheduled Council session.

Promise From Aloisi.

The Conciliation Committee met for an hour today, and it was understood Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Premier Mussolini's delegate, had promised the French that he would refrain from making any provocative remarks when the Council members state their countries' attitudes toward the war in Africa Monday

Salvador de Madariaga of Spain, president of the Conciliation Committee, reported that the jurists appointed to investigate charges that Italy was using poison gas had reached no definite conclusions. It was decided to send their "findings" to the governments of the belligerents to permit them to make such observations as they desire.

De Madariaga's Report.

Reporting on his peace negotiations, De Madariaga disclosed that Italy had agreed to an immediate opening of negotiations for cessation of hostilities but preferred that an armistice should be accompanied by peace preliminaries, instead of preceding these talks.

"The Italian delegation," the report said, "believes these negotiations can only be based on realities as they exist after six months of military operations. In starting conciliation, the Committee of Thirteen doubtless accepts that there is this situation and facts and that it should not ignore them."

After proposing direct negotiations with Ethiopia, to be held at Lausanne with the Committee of Thirteen being informed of developments, the Italian delegation expressed the hope that the "results of these negotiations would permit Italy to resume with the League of

SPANISH WORKERS' UNION DEMANDS SOVIET REGIME

Nationalization of Banks and Basic Industries Called for—General Shot at—300 Fascists Jailed.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, April 18.—With its objective a Soviet regime for Spain, the General Workers' Union tonight presented to the Government 18 "basic requests by Socialists which must be given immediate consideration."

The extremists' demands were made while the Leftist Government, under Premier Manuel Azana, campaigned to suppress Fascism, which Communists and Socialists charged was responsible for the recent series of disorders.

More than 300 Fascists were said to be in jail.

The first of the Workers' Union demands was for the re-establishment of commercial and diplomatic relations with Russia. The document was drafted as the "resolutions" customarily adopted for May day, but was presented in advance of that date "so that preliminary steps may be taken without delay."

Following the first points, concerning relations with Russia, the demands were:

Nationalization of banks and basic industries.

Appropriation of lands and other belongings of the nobility.

Supreme control of all industries by the workers.

Punishment of employers paying salaries insufficient for "decent living."

Revision of all existing social legislation.

Intensification of collective farming.

Establishment of a 48-hour week.

Government subsidies for unemployment relief.

Regulation of interest rates on loans to abolish "usury."

Reduction of "excessive" urban rents.

Abolition of farm rents.

Elimination of all fees and the provision of free text books for workers entering schools.

Revision of all laws enacted by Parliament.

"Humanization" of the penal system.

"Republicanization" of the army and judicial system and the state administration.

Revision of the law on public order, particularly in reference to the law against vagabonds.

Punishment for those who suppressed the Socialist rebellion of last year.

Reports of fresh disorders, including the attempted assassination of an army general, seeped into the capital tonight through a strict censorship.

Gen. Luis Orgaz, one of the most prominent Spanish military men, was arrested tonight and sent to Guadalajara prison. There was a general belief the action was in connection with disorders Thursday, in which three were killed when shots were exchanged between paraders and spectators.

Gen. Orgaz was arrested in June, 1932, in connection with an alleged plot against the Government of Spain. Two years later the Supreme Court withdrew charges of sedition against him and he was freed.

Gen. Carlos Bosch arrived in Coruna to officiate at the court martial of a soldier for alleged participation in a political clash. He was unpacking his bags in a hotel room when two men, posing as police officers, opened his door and fired at him. The General dropped to the floor and was uninjured. The attackers fled.

In Castillo, Seville Province, workers seized mines and filled the shafts with water. A councilman shot and wounded two workers in San Vicente, Logrono Province, in a dispute over a building permit.

MILITARY EXPERTS PROPOSE FLOOD TO DEFEND BELGIUM

'Water Line,' Antwerp to Ghent, Suggested in Case of German Invasion.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 18.—A triple-defense plan in case Germany invades Belgium was reported today to have been drawn up in London by the British, French and Belgian general staffs.

The military experts of the three nations have been in conference in the British capital under the provisions of the Locarno treaty and by the instruction of the signatory nations which became alarmed at Germany's re-militarization of the Rhineland.

The three-way plan, as outlined in the newspaper Intransigeant, provides:

1. A "water line" from Antwerp to Ghent, along which Belgium would be flooded;

2. The extension of all facilities of Belgian airfields to the British air force as soon as there is a warning of danger;

3. The completion of the Belgian fortified line, prolonging France's chain of steel and concrete forts, to block any invasion through Luxembourg.

PAPAL OFFICIAL FOUND HANGED ON STEAMER

Police Theory Is Msgr. Crespi Ended Life; Had Breakdown After Spanish Turmoil.

By the Associated Press.

GENOA, April 18. — Monsignor Tito Crespi, auditor of the Papal Nunziature at Madrid, was found hanged in his cabin aboard the steamer, Merauo, when it docked today from Barcelona. Msgr. Crespi was former papal representative in Mexico, banished in 1926.

Police and steamship officers said they were unable to establish for certain whether he committed suicide, but stated they were inclined to that belief. He had been suffering from a nervous breakdown because of overwork during the recent Spanish disorders, and was on his way to Rome to rest.

Monsignor Crespi's body was removed to a vault at the City Cemetery, pending receipt of instructions from the Vatican.

Monsignor Tito Crespi as head of the Apostolic Legation in Mexico City was expelled in 1926 when the government put into effect its regulations against the Catholic Church. These regulations included the barring of "foreign clergymen."

Msgr. Crespi was the fourth papal representative to be deported in three years. The government said it found his presence in Mexico "inconvenient."

PARAGUAY TAKES CONTROL OF PRODUCTION AND PRICES

Decree Permits Nationalizing of Industries Handling Articles of Basic Necessity.

By the Associated Press.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, April 18. — The Paraguayan Government made public tonight a decree whereby it will rigidly supervise production and prices of foodstuffs and other articles of basic necessity and is empowered to nationalize industries which make the products directly affecting the necessaries of the people.

By the new measure, President Rafael Franco, who assumed office after President Eusebio Ayala was ousted by the February revolt, applied to a large part of Paraguay's productive commercial activity his totalitarian decree of March 11.

Under that declaration, the revolution and the State were called identical, independent political activities were forbidden for one year and the Government was named the supreme arbiter of social and commercial activities of this nation of 1,000,000 inhabitants.

The new decree not only established control of prices of food and other necessaries throughout the nation, but also empowered state banks and various ministries to monopolize export products and to fix maximum prices.

FATHER OF ELEVEN KILLED IN BAR BY WOMAN PARTNER

Mrs. Inez Wallace, Widow, Says Eli Vidacak, 48, a WPA Foreman, Knocked Her Down.

GETS PISTOL AND FIRES FIVE TIMES

One Bullet Hits Mark — Witness Tells of Fight and Shooting at 1836 South Tenth St.

Mrs. Inez Wallace, 40-year-old widow and tavern proprietor at 1836 South Tenth street, shot and killed her business partner, Eli Vidacak, 48, WPA foreman and father of 11 children, in a quarrel at the saloon last night.

Mrs. Wallace, who lives at 2302 Ninth street and has two sons, told police she shot Vidacak after he had knocked her down. She said the quarrel "grew out of nothing," while others said it was caused by Vidacak's action in hiring a 19-year-old youth four days before, as bartender in the place, after his oldest son, Paul Vidacak, 22, had quit that job.

Paul Vidacak, who arrived at the place just after the shooting, said his father had told him he expected trouble, as Mrs. Wallace liked the younger Vidacak and wanted him to stay at the place, while the father preferred that he work elsewhere, and hired the other youth.

Witness Tells of Fight.

Miss Dollie Conte, 1852 South Tenth street, the only witness to the shooting, said Vadacak appeared to be the aggressor in the quarrel, but that both talked and acted violently after it had been begun.

"Inez was cleaning up, a few minutes before 8 o'clock," she said, "when Eli came in and told her to get out, calling her some rough names. She went behind the bar and started to draw herself a glass of beer, and he pushed the glass away and told her to get her beer somewhere else. She threw the glass at him as he walked away, and he went back and knocked her down twice. I shouted to him to stop, but he paid no attention to me.

"He followed her to the rear, still calling her names, and she picked up a revolver that was on the icebox, put it in her apron pocket, then drew it and fired three shots at him. 'Oh, she said, 'I've shot Eli.' I ran out to get help."

Widow Hysterical.

Police found Mrs. Wallace sitting in the barroom, hysterical. She was taken to the Soulard Street station. She has dark red hair and was wearing a pink cotton dress at the time of the shooting.

Vidacak, shot in the left chest near the heart, died on the way to City Hospital. Three bullet marks on the floor and wall marked the course of other shots, and there were five empty shells in the revolver. So far as police could learn, the revolver belonged to Vidacak.

The Vidacak family lives at 2313 South Eleventh street. Paul Vidacak and two daughters have been employed. The rest of the family nas been living on Vidacak's monthly $65 WPA pay check. The wife said Vidacak had not been at home since their youngest child was born, nine months ago, but had sent his pay check home regularly. The family was on relief until Vidacak got the WPA job, which was with a crew working at Tilles Park, in St. Louis County.

RUMANIA STARTS PROSECUTION OF OUTLAWED "IRON GUARD"

Mme. Lupescu, King Carol's Friend, Leaves Country to Escape Terrorism.

By the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, April 18.—Rumanian authorities started prosecution today of the illegal "Iron Guard" organization which police alleged had recently plotted to assassinate prominent Government officials and financiers. The Iron Guard was outlawed more than a year ago, but it is alleged still to exist under cover with Extreme Rightists as its members.

The last arrests of members were made two days ago.

VIENNA, April 18.—Mme. Magda Lupescu, King Carol's friend, was safely abroad tonight, out of reach of possible vengeance from the "Iron Guard," according to personal friends here. They said she had gone "outside Rumania" for a minor operation and had been in a guarded sanitarium for more than a week.

LOUIS HOWE DIES; SECRETARY TO THE PRESIDENT

Political Adviser of Roosevelt Succumbs in Sleep After Illness of More Than a Year.

CLOSE FRIEND OF EXECUTIVE

Became His Political Mentor in 1910 — Lived at White House Until Removal to Hospital.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Louis McHenry Howe, long a political adviser of President Roosevelt, died tonight at 11:10 o'clock.

Mr. Howe, who was secretary to the President, died in his sleep at the Naval Hospital after having been ill for more than a year. Death was caused by heart and chest complications.

President Roosevelt was informed of his old friend's death when he returned to the White House from the Gridiron dinner at the Willard hotel.

Mrs. Roosevelt immediately telephoned to Mrs. Howe, who is at the Howe home in Fall River, Mass.

Shortly after midnight the White House said that funeral arrangements had not been made.

The announcement of Howe's death was made by Stephen Early, a secretary of the President at 12:20 a. m.

Lived at White House.

Howe's illness was so serious more than a year ago, when confined to his room at the White House, where he lived after coming to Washington with the President, that hope was abandoned.

The 64-year-old Howe pluckily fought for life, however, living for a long period under an oxygen tent. Physicians were amazed by his apparent recovery.

In August last year, when White House repairs necessitated cutting off the electricity and plumbing, he was removed to the Naval Hospital.

President Roosevelt made several visits to the hospital to chat with his old friend, the last only a few days ago.

Career of Howe Who Was Roosevelt's Political Mentor.

In the first elation of his 1932 victory at the national polls, Roosevelt gave chief credit to two men, Howe and James A. Farley. But Howe's part reached back through the years while Farley's covered only the final laps of Roosevelt's progress to the Presidency.

Howe's mentorship began in 1910 when Roosevelt, a Democrat, won a seat in the New York State Senate from a Republican district. Howe, a newspaper correspondent, cultivated the younger man (the reporter was 10 years the senior of the new Senator) and from this association sprang a lasting friendship.

When Roosevelt was incapicitated by infantile paralysis it was Howe, who reinforced the sick man's will to recover, who showed the patient that the future held something more than a wheel chair existence.

When President Wilson called Roosevelt to Washington as Assistant Secretary of the Navy in 1913, Howe went along.

Howe opposed Roosevelt's acceptance of the vice-presidential nomination in 1920, yet, with the decision made, took over the job of selecting campaign aids. Two of the men then chosen, Marvin McIntyre and Stephen T. Early, became Howe's associates in the White House secretaryship when Roosevelt became President 13 years later.

After the 1920 campaign Roosevelt was taken ill. Howe maneuvered Roosevelt's return to the political spotlight and was at his side through two terms as Governor of New York. In those years, 1928-32, Howe held no title. He lived in the Roosevelt home in New York City and had a room in the executive mansion at Albany.

Perhaps the only public appearance in a political setting that Howe ever made was on the platform of the convention hall in Chicago in 1932 when he stood beside Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt as the delegates acclaimed their nominee.

In the first year of the Roosevelt administration, Howe was selected to organize the Civilian Conservation Corps. Purchase of toilet kits for the forestry workers brought charges which caused a Senatorial investigation and Howe appeared before the committee. It ended in

LOUIS McHENRY HOWE

POPE, NEARING 79, SEES END OF HIS SPAN APPROACHING

Tells Pilgrims to Return Soon; at His Age He "Can't Make Long-Term Appointments."

By the Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, April 18.—Pope Pius today gave the first indication that he feels himself approaching the end of his span of life. The Pontiff, who will be 79 years old May 31, told a pilgrimage of French religious press writers to "return soon" because, when one approaches 80, he "cannot make long term appointments."

The Pope, who has scoffed at doctors and advisers who, during the last few years, have asked him to conserve his strength, urged his listeners to remember, however, that another would be in his place no matter when they were able to return to the Vatican.

In blessing the press conference members, the Pope referred sadly to the general political situation to which his intimates ascried much of the weariness which has weighed his last few months' activities.

He said that prayer is ever more necessary "in these sad, historical days in which men seek peace but do not know what they seek because they do not even know how to seek it inasmuch . . . as they do not know how to see and to appreciate the word of truth."

Referring to his age, the Pontiff recalled the Roman saying: "When a Pope dies, another is made."

$134 TAKEN IN HOLDUP AT GLEN ECHO COUNTRY CLUB

Armed Man Forces Employe to Get Money From Safe; Guests Unaware of Robbery.

The Glen Echo Country Club, on Lucas and Hunt road, near Henderson road, St. Louis County, was held up at 9:30 o'clock last night by an armed man, who forced Warren Chamlin, an employe of the club, to turn over $134 from the safe in the office on the second floor.

The robber disconnected the telephone before leaving, Chamlin told Deputy Sheriffs, and escaped in an automobile which he had parked outside before entering the club.

There were only a few guests in the club at the time of the robbery and they were unaware of the robber's entrance. Chamlin said the robber was more than six feet tall, weighed about 180 pounds, was bareheaded, and wore a dark topcoat and suit.

AUTOS LIKE GOLDEN SWANS

East Indian Potentates Go in Also for Electric Fans.

(Copyright, 1936.)

BOMBAY, April 18.—The treasures of jewels and precious metals long held by the potentates of India now are being sold and melted down to provide the wherewithal to purchase modern innovations.

Motor car bodies fashioned in the form of golden swans are not unusual in some of the larger Indian cities. The old time punkah fan, the string of which was pulled by a swarthy servant, now is oftentimes operated by electricity or has been replaced entirely by a brightly shining electric fan of the type familiar to all Americans.

TWO MEN HOLD UP SHOE STORE AND FLEE WITH $850

Force Manager to Open Cash Register and Safe —Three Customers in Place Not Molested.

The Feltman & Curme shoe store at 422 North Sixth street was robbed at 7 o'clock last night by two armed men who forced M. E. Fiedler, store manager, to open the cash register and safe, and fled with $850.

A few minutes after the holdup, Raymond Kelly, 4543 Evans avenue, a Police Department chauffeur, sitting in his car at Sixth street near Wash street, was held up by three armed men, the descriptions of two of whom tallied with those of the robbers. They made him get in the back seat, then drove to Dolman street and Lafayette avenue, where they put him out ofthe car and drove away. Kelly was off duty and not in uniform.

Three customers, two of them women, and four clerks were in the shoe store when the robbery occurred, but were not molested. Fiedler told a Post-Dispatch reporters that the two robbers, both well dressed, walked up to him with drawn revolvers, and one of them said "This is a stickup. Keep everyone working as if nothing were happening. If anyone makes a move, he'll get it."

They then forced him to open the cash register near the store entrance, from which they took $50, and then the safe, on the floor beneath the cash register, from which they took $800, and ran out the door, after telling Fiedler to "keep on going back in the store. We don't want any monkey business."

Fiedler said that one of the robbers, who did the talking, was about 5 feet 10 inches tall, wore spectacles, and gray hat, overcoat and suit. The other, about the same height, wore a black overcoat with a velveteen collar, dark blue suit and a black hat. Both men, he said, appeared to be about 30 years old.

The loss was insured.

DR. CHARLES V. GREEN, CANCER RESEARCH WORKER, DROWNED

Fishing Boat Turns Over at Eagle Lake Near Bar Harbor, Me.

BAR HARBOR, Me., April 18.—Dr. Charles V. Green, 34 years old, of the staff of Jackson Memorial Laboratory, cancer research institution, was drowned today in Eagle Lake. His small boat turned over when he was fishing 20 feet from shore.

A woman who heard his cries for help notified Bar Harbor officials and they recovered the body.

Dr. Green was a native of Elsie, Mich., and was a graduate of Michigan State College. He obtained his doctor's degree at the University of Michigan. His widow survives.

ETHIOPIANS REPORTED ROUTED ON HARAR LINE

Half of Force of 10,000 Wiped Out by Italians and Road to City Opened, London Exchange Telegraph Dispatch Says.

PLANES BOMB FLEEING TROOPS

2000 Rifles Captured — Rome Announces Jijiga Is Threatened and Column Is Advancing Toward Addis Ababa.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 19 (Sunday).—The Exchange Telegraph reported today that half of an Ethiopian army of 10,000 men was wiped out in a fierce two-day battle on the Southern front in Ethiopia.

The dispatch said that the road to Harar now was open for the Italians, who captured 2000 rifles and a dozen machine guns.

Italian planes were bombing scattered remnants of the Ethiopian forces to prevent them from reforming, it was reported.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, April 18.—Marshal Pietro Badoglio's troops advanced on two fronts toward the two principal cities of Ethiopia today.

Although official reports were lacking, the best-informed sources said Gen. Rodolfo Graziani, commander of Italy's southern army, had engaged the forces of Ras Nasibu in battle on the Harar line but that the Italians still were a long distance from the city of Harar.

The occupation of Jijiga, controlling the road from Berbera to British Somaliland was thought to be imminent, and as soon as Jijiga is occupied, the Fascists expect to take Harar.

Moving Toward Capital.

While Graziani's men fought what was reported to be the fourth day of a battle for Harar, an Italian column in the north continued to move along the road to Addis Ababa.

Facists here prepared for a great celebration Tuesday, the traditional anniversary of the founding of Rome by Romulus and Remus. Tuesday, they said, would enhance the glories of the Eternal City for, on that day, they predicted, the Ethiopian capital would be in the hands of Roman legions.

A communique from Marshal Badoglio spoke only of the southern army's advance guard having made contact on the Harar front, but well-informed sources said it was Graziani's main column which was threatening the railroad city.

Marine Corps Formed.

While the infantry moved through Ethiopia, the Italian navy went forward with its synchronized preparations against eventualities in the Mediterranean.

Navy officers said they expected all leaves of absence to be canceled and an excellent authority said the Government, always alert to military efficiency, was forming a corps of sailors corresponding roughly in organization and purpose to the United States Marines. Sections of this corps it was said. were being stationed at Spezia on Italy's northwest coast, and at Maddalena, on the Island of Sardinia.

Indications were that the Government expected its armies to win the war in short order, thereby removing the Italian-Ethiopian situation definitely from the sphere of influence of the League of Nations.

Belgian Army Instructors in Ethiopia Resign Again.

By the Associated Press.

ADDIS ABABA, April 18.—The members of the Belgian Military Commission, employed for the last five years by Emperor Haile Selassie to train soldiers and police, were reported reliably today to have resigned again. The relations between the Belgians and the Government have bee nstrained often in the past, and the Belgians tendered their resignations in a body at least once previously since the outbreak of the war.

There are 118 United States citizens in Ethiopia, 58 of them in Addis Ababa. Those in the capital have been offered the protection of the bombproof shelters of the British legation, since the United States legation is undefended.

PRIMARIES SO FAR SHOW VOTER WILL HAVE NO CHOICE

Party Leaders Guarding Against Expression of Popular Sentiment in Preference Votes.

JUST BALLYHOO IN SOME STATES

Indications Are Handful of 'Insiders' Will Dictate Nominees and Platforms of Both Parties.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The presidential preference primaries and the contests for district delegates to the two national conventions have gone far enough for the voter to realize that the leaders of neither party want an outright expression of the mere voters' choice of presidential candidates and platform planks. Despite the remarkable showing of Senator Borah in downstate Illinois Tuesday, there are many indications that a handful of "insiders" will run the shows both at Cleveland and Philadelphia. The Democratic convention, in fact, will most probably be dictated by long-distance telephone from the White House or Hyde Park.

Theoretically the preference primaries and the district contests are avenues for the expression of local and state sentiment. In actual practice this year they have been used by expert manipulators to becloud the issues, to build up mere ballyhoo, and, in several instances, to frustrate deliberately the purpose for which they designed. The effect has been to put the party leaders in a position to direct the conventions irrespective of the wishes of the rank and file who have been conscientious enough to vote in the primaries.

Pennsylvania and Georgia.

The outstanding examples of deliberate frustrations of the purposes of the primaries are the announcement concerning the Democrtic primary in Georgia, where Gov. Talmadge has decreed that presidential aspirants must pay a $10,000 registration fee, and the Republican primary in Pennsylvania, where the "regular" party leaders have said that they will not be bound by the preference vote if it goes to Borah. A milder example is the refusal of Gov. Landon of Kansas to enter any primaries except in California and New Jersey, and in those two states the filling was done by Landon supporters and not by Landon himself.

The next test of Borah strength will be in the Pennsylvania primaries April 28, where he is the only aspirant to file. At first, Borah announced that on the advice of former Gov. Pinchot he felt that it would be hopeless to try for the State's preference. He said that since he had neither money nor organization, it would be a hopeless fight against the "regular" organization, which, true to tradition, wants an unpledged delegation. This Borah decision was changed, however, and he will now enter the fight. This is in keeping with his belief that the voters should have a chance to express their views. But the "regulars," still insistent on an unpledged delegation, refused the contest and baldly assert that they will not be bound by the results. Time for filing closed April 9 and it is now too late for other candidates to file against Borah in the preference vote.

Straw Man in Ohio.

Even the Ohio "regulars" have not been so defiant of the people's wishes. They have at least gone to the trouble of picking a straw man in the person of Robert A. Taft, son of the former President. Borah's only hope in Pennsylvania and Ohio is to record whatever popular support he can get. Even after the Illinois primary, it is difficult to see how he would get many delegates from these states. Popular votes, however, will give him prestige at Cleveland and support in a measure his demand for a liberal candidate and a liberal platform.

Believing that the cards are stacked against him in Maryland, Borah will not enter the Free State primary May 4, where Gov. Nice, who hasn't an outsider's chance for the presidential nomination, wants the complimentary vote of his delegation on the first or second ballot at Cleveland. After that the Maryland delegation will go where State leaders tell them to go. Borah made a splendid showing against an adopted "favorite son" in Illinois, but it would be a different story in Maryland against the Governor.

The Democratic primary in Maryland on the same day has possibilities for testing the conservative opposition to President Roosevelt and the New Deal. Col. Henry Breckinridge of New York, who was an Assistant Secretary of War under President Wilson when Franklin D. Roosevelt was an Assistant Secretary of the Navy, has filed for the preference vote in Maryland, knowing that he will be defeated but hoping that he will pile up a considerable vote from those who want to express their distaste of the Roosevelt program.

Roosevelt's Cues Missed.

The President in his Baltimore speech Monday night at the Young Democratic Club rally got off on the wrong foot. Many Maryland Democrats say he failed to mention the name of the late Albert C. Ritchie, the four-time Governor, whose memory is revered both in Baltimore and throughout the State. Also, the Young Democrats were prepared to "whoop it up" to show their elders that their forces should be considered by the party machine. But the President was so general in his remarks that they didn't catch the cues for applause and cheers.

The Breckenridge candidacy may foil the Democratic tactics to pile up huge preferential "complimentary" votes for the President, such as resulted from the operation of the Kelly-Nash machine in Chicago. Up to now, the Democratic opposition to Roosevelt has been inarticulate. If Breckenridge, a New Yorker, gets a sizable vote, Postmaster-General-National Chairman Farley cannot claim a united party, nor can he say that the votes cast for Breckenridge will go to Roosevelt in November. If local political observers are right in their predictions, the Breckenridge supporters will go to the Republicans in the elections.

Farley Counts the Votes.

Farley, as befits a national chairman, is trying to throw fear into the hearts of the Republicans by claiming the elections even before the conventions. In his latest announcement he is citing increased Democratic registration and arguing that "President Roosevelt is far stronger than his party."

Farly says that the California registration reveals a 519,571 Democratic majority in November, and basing his prediction on increased Democratic registrations in Pittsburgh, claims that Pennsylvania will go Democratic in 1936. He says that the similar increases "throughout the East, Middle West and Far West," tell the same story and disclose "not only the popularity of President Roosevelt but likewise the apathetic attitude of Republican voters to Republican aspirants.'

"This indifference," he concludes, "is heightened by the fact that in most cases the leading candidate for the Republican nomination is carefully avoiding tests of strength in the primaries."

Farley, of course, is referring to Gov. Landon of Kansas, who by cautious negative tactics now has an impressive lead over his rivals. This may be shrewd strategy for obtaining the nomination but it does not arouse enthusiasm among the mere voters. In view of the Republican primaries so far, if Landon does get the nomination, the Republicans will have the task of creating popular support for him between June and November.

MEN TRAPPED IN MINE THOUGHT STILL ALIVE

Rapping Reported Heard by Meen Listening at Tube in Nova Scotia Workings.

By the Associated Press.

MOOSE RIVER, N. S., April 19 (Sunday).—Men listening at a tube which had been sunk in the Moose River gold mine where three men were trapped last Sunday by a cave-in reported they had heard distinct rappings at about 12:30 a. m. today.

Dr. D. R. Sutherland of Middle Musquodoboit, to whom the listeners immediately telephoned, advised them to send a small bottle of cocoa and an ounce of brandy down the pipe line.

The tube had been made by a diamond drill, brought here this week in an attempt to make a hole through which small articles could be sent to the entombed men if they were found to be still alive. It was directed toward the 14-foot level, where the three were believed to be.

Fears for the men's survival, if still alive, had arisen late last night when Minister of MinesM Michael Dwyer said the mine was filling with water.

He based his belief concerning the water on sounds issuing from a diamond drill shaft, saying it indicated that water was pouring into the old workings.

Officials in charge of rescue work said there was little hope of reaching the three men before tomorrow and they feared the men, if still alive, would be drowned when the water reached the 141-foot level.

Dwyer was accompanied here to observe the rescue work by Premier Angus L. MacDonald of Nova Scotia and his Minister of Highways, A. S. MacMillan.

a finding that no wrong had been done.

For a time too Howe spoke weekly on the radio and wrote a number of magazine articles.

Howe was born in Indianapolis, Jan. 14, 1871. Later his father acquired a newspaper in Saratoga, N. Y., and the son became first a Saratoga correspondent for metropolitan dailies and then Albany representative of the old New York Herald.

He married Grace Hartley of Fall River, Mass., in May, 1899. A daughter, Mary (Mrs. Robert H. Baker) and a son, Hartley E. Howe, who followed his father and grandfather into newspaper work, were born to them.

Despite the years of close association with Roosevelt, Howe came into Washington in March, 1933, less known than any other Presidential secretary. He planned the new White House organization but left to McIntyre and Early the dealings with the press and callers. For himself he stayed in the background although he conferred regularly with them until failing health compelled him to curtail his activities.

THREE MORE KILLED IN CROAT UPRISINGS IN YUGOSLAVIA

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia, April 18.—Three Croat peasants were killed today as disorders spread over a wide region.

The killings which followed at least nine others yesterday, occurred near the village of Nova Gradisca where peasants tried to break through a police cordon to chop firewood in the state forest preserve.

More than 100 peasants fought the gendarmes with axes, whereupon the police fired into the mob.

MARTIAL LAW TO KEEP ALIENS FROM COLORADO

Troops to Prevent Importation of Track Laborers, Beet-Field Workers.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, April 18.—Gov. Ed C. Johnson declared martial law today in a strip 316 miles long and a mile wide along the southern border of the State to keep out aliens and indigents.

The Governor said he learned that railroads were shipping in track laborers and that representatives of sugar-beet companies were importing field workers from New Mexico and Texas.

He also asserted that alien sheep herders were being imported.

The Governor ordered Neil W. Kimball, Adjutant General of the Colorado National Guard, to mobilize all guardsmen needed to patrol the strip 316 miles along the New Mexico border. Kimball planned to use 50.

State highway patrolmen, port of entry officers and local officers will be stationed along other State boundaries for the same purpose.

Colorado is the second State to decide upon a border patrol this year. Los Angeles placed its "foreign legion" police along the southern California border to turn back incoming transients without money or jobs.

"We want to get our own people off the relief rolls and at work on all available jobs," the Governor said. "We can never do it as long as alien workers and indigent families keep pouring in from other States."

If officers on the Eastern boundary report too many undesirables, Johnson added, "we'll have to declare martial law along that border, too."

The Governor threatened the use of National Guardsmen to keep out indigent job-seekers and aliens several weeks ago when officials of a beet sugar company were quoted as saying the available beet field labor supply in Colorado appeared inadequate.

Subsequently, Director Paul D. Shriver of the WPA and officials of the state employment service devised plans for taking all necessary beet labor from WPA rolls.

Asked how he expected troopers to distinguish between aliens and persons of Mexican or Spanish origin who are citizens of the United States, Johnson replied:

"We're going to count their money. Our main object is to head off the destitute people from other States who will come here, perhaps work in the beet fields for a few weeks and then go on relief. If we catch a few aliens among them, so much the better, but the big thing is to keep out those who will become public charges."

He said there were already "severel thousand aliens on the Colorado WPA work rolls alone."

Nations an active participation" in world affairs.

The report further said that in rejecting the Italian demands, the Ethiopian delegation interpreted them as meaning the abandonment of the Ethiopian people to the aggressor. The Ethiopians also believed the terms implied a bargain whereby Italy would give its support against Germany in exchange for the lifting of sanctions and the ignoring by the League of Italian aggression.

"Hope for Moment Abandoned."

Italy subsequently modified the proposals to permit the Committee of Thirteen to keep in touch with the direct negotiations and be at the disposition of the two peace delegations, but Ethiopia refused to accept the amended plan.

Finally, the report continued, if the appeal sent March 3 to the belligerents met with replies which permitted a hope for prompt cessation of hostilities and the final restoration of peace, "these hopes must for the moment be abandoned."

Meanwhile the League received a new appeal from Emperor Haile Selassi, who proteste:

"Ethiopia has for seven months vainly awaited measures to put an end to this aggression. Despite the good will of the states which are members of the League of Nations, the sanctions that have been applied have proved ineffectual.

"The time that has been allowed to elapse without the imposition of additional sanctions has enabled the enemy to pursue with impunity his aggression and his flagrant violation of the laws of war."

An addition to the League's problems today was Turkey's remilitarization of the Dardanelles zones, forbidden by the Lausanne Treaty.

Report Lists 19 Reported Bombings of Hopitals and Ambulances.

A list of 19 Red Cross hospitals and ambulances reported to have been bombarded by Italian troops in Ethiopia was contained in an annex to the report of the League of Nations Committee of 13, made public late tonight.

The annex also enumerates 54 alleged bombardments of open towns, 13 poison gas bombardments and six bombardments or burnings of churches.

The report mentions, in addition, numerous atrocities which Italy charges Ethiopian troops have committed. Charges by Ethiopia and other sources of Italian atrocities likewise are cited. The annex concludes with a letter to the Italian Minister by Chairman de Madariaga, stating that the group does not regard the Italian desire to punish alleged Ethiopian inhumanities as any "justification for the use of asphyxiating poisonous gasses."

WALLACE REVERSES ON AAA CHECK PUBLICITY

Asks Senate Committee Head for Passage of Bill to Publish Bigger Payments.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace appealed today to Chairman Smith of the Senate Agriculture Committee for quick passage of the Vandenberg resolution which would require publication of names of individuals who received more than $10,000 a year in Agricultural Adjustment Administration benefit payments.

AAA sources said Wallace's action—a reversal from an earlier position—was prompted by the fact that details concerning several of the larger payments have come to light from various outside sources in recent weeks. AAA officials said they thought accurate information about all the larger payments should be made public at one time, and Smith was reported to have told Wallace he would try to get the measure through the Senate next week.

Although several individuals have made statements about benefit payments they have received, AAA officials have declined to name adjustment contract signers, or to confirm reports of large payments. They said today that some papers relating to benefit payments have disappeared from their files, and that an effort was being made to find those responsible.

The resolution by Senator Vandenberg (Rep.), Michigan, calling on Wallace to furnish a list of those who received $10,000, or more, annually in benefit payments, has been approved by the Agriculture Committee, but has not reached the Senate floor. The House has rejected a resolution similar to this.

Almost immediately, Wallace protested, saying the AAA would have to halt the mailing of past-due checks to farmers to compile the information sought. He said the AAA had consistently refused to give names of contract signers during the existence of the crop control programs. Later Wallace said the AAA had begun a survey of the benefit payments, and he furnished Smith with a broad summary, listing the larger payments, but withholding names of contract signers.

At a press conference last Wednesday, Wallace said a clerical staff was working on the list, and that the names and amounts desired by the Senate could be obtained in five or six weeks. He said, however, that names of contract signers would not be included unless the Senate so requested.

ETHIOPIAN ARMY REPORTED ROUTED ON HARAR FRONT

States minister resident and consul general, remained at his legation with his wife and their two children, with only the American flag and a small detachment of Ethiopian soldiers for protection.

Ethiopian soldiers, retreating from the North, are forbidden to enter the capital area in an order issued by the Governor of Addis Ababa. This is because many of the Emperor's soldiers from the North who come from the remote provinces do not distinguish between Italians and other whites.

Gas masks have been distributed to policemen whose official duties have been increased in order to prevent anyone from firing on Italian planes flying over the city.

MRS. NEWELL EMBLY

WINNER in the annual safe driving contest for women sponsored by the St. Louis Safety Council.

WOMAN FIRST IN THEORY BUT SECOND IN DRIVING AUTO

Mrs. June Walther Wins Small Loving Cup; Trophy Goes to Mrs. Newell Embly.

Mrs. June Walther of 6003 Enright avenue won first place in the written examination on safe automobile driving held by the St. Louis Safety Council on Friday but when the test came yesterday to put her knowledge into practice she finished in second place.

As a result she got a small loving cup. But the large silver trophy for the best demonstration of good driving went to Mrs. Newell Embly of 4166 Lindell boulevard. Third prize went to Mrs. Lydia M. Seibert of Creve Coeur, Mo.

The contest, an annual affair, was held in Forest Park, with most of the events run off on the new express highway between Skinker boulevard and Hampton avenue. There were 46 entrants in all. The drivers had to show that they could stop on a hill and start again without sliding back; that they could drive safely on a street, observing all traffic rules; that they could park their car, get in and out of a garage, and drive in figure eight fashion through a series of barrels. Their cars were also inspected for safe brakes, proper lights, and other safety features.

25 TO 150 ALLEGED POLITICAL OFFENDERS ON TRIAL IN BERLIN

Nazis Trying to Keep Proceedings Secret; Treason Said to Be Charged.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 18.—A strict censorship "in the interests of safety and the state" has been imposed in trials of between 25 and 150 persons on political charges. Court officials including the presiding judge have responded to questions as to the nature ofthe trials with only a shrug of their shoulders. When pressed for a definite answer the judges admitted certain sessions during the last week dealt with political cases. The German public will hear nothing of the trials until the verdicts are announced about the middle of May.

One report is that the defendants are from the Zeitz region where they were alleged to have fostered discontent among industrial workers while another said they were mostly Berlin metal workers headed by Max Uhrig and Alwin Brandes, former leaders of the defunct metal workers' union. The charges against the defendants, of whom 18 are said to be women, are said to be treason by the distribution of subversive literature, attempts to form illegal organizations and in connection with German emigrants.

ANTI-PACIFIST SPEECH BY WOODRING ASSAILED

Socialists Demand to Know What Roosevelt Is Going to Do About It.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The National Affairs Committee of the Socialist party today called on President Roosevelt to say whether or not Assistant Secretary of War Woodring spoke for the administration in his speech at Sarasota, Fla., yesterday in which he denounced those who opposed war as "traitors" and a "disgrace to their manhood."

Woodring, in using the word "traitor," was speaking particularly, according to the committee, of 8900 clergymen who recently declared their unqualified opposition to war.

"What is the President going to do about Woodring?" the committee demanded in a statement. "Woodring goes into Sarasota, Fla., not many miles from which is taking place the trial of the floggers charged with the kidnaping and murder of labor organizers. In his speech he gives aid and comfort and the official blessing to Ku Klux Klan sentiment which seethes through the community of Bartow, Fla., and which may prevent the bringing of the criminals to justice.

"Woodring goes into Saratsota and, by his words, inflames the people of Florida to racial hatred. He feeds Ku Klux sentiment by declaring that 'the pacifist seeks a leveling of races and creeds, sees national boundaries swept away, sees the brotherhood of the white, yellow and black man an accomplished fact.' The Assistant Secretary of War invoked God to aid him in his jingoism and in the defense of the largest military appropriations in peace-time history and in his attack on pacifist and radical groups whom he dubs 'atheistic' and 'Communistic.' Among the atheists he presumably includes the 8900 clergymen.

"These name-calling, race-hating tactics of one of the most important appointees of the President are an aid to the floggers whose attorney was allowed by the trial judge at Bartow to 'identify' Norman Thomas as a 'Communist.'"

Woodring has several times been under fire from liberal groups for his advocacy of larger military appropriations.

"The President," said the committee's statement, "was sensitive to the attacks by Gen. Hagood on the relief policies of the administration. What is the President going to do about the scurrilous, though carefully prepared assault, by his Assistant Secretary of War on civil liberties, on church, student and labor groups, whose support he so ardently woos? The President is making a drive for the labor and liberal vote. The labor and liberal movement today has a right to say 'Woodring represents Roosevelt. What is Roosevelt going to do about Woodring?'"

HAMM KIDNAPING SOLVED BUT GANG CHIEF IS AT LARGE

Federal Officers Seek Alvin T. Karpis for Abduction of Brewer — Three Others Seized.

CRIME SIMILAR TO BREMER CASE

Same Outfit Plotted Both, J. Edgar Hoover Says—Bensenville (Ill.) Postmaster Is Held.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 18. — The kidnaping in 1933 of William A. Hamm, wealthy St. Paul brewer, has been solved at last, but the man described as ringleader in the crime, Alvin T. Karpis, is still at large.

The Department of Justice in making this announcement today said that this kidnaping, like that of Edward G. Bremer, also of St. Paul, was the work of the old Karpis-Barker gang. The solution of the Hamm kidnaping was made known after the arrest of three alleged conspirators.

Karpis is the last survivor of the circle which gathered around Old Kate (Ma) Barker. With him, it is thought, is Harry Campbell, a pal and hanger-on.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, named eight men in the Hamm plot and said "there may be more arrests soon."

Hamm was seized by two men as he left the office of the Theodore Hamm Brewing Co. at noon on June 15, 1933. He was held in a hide-out for four days until $100,000 ransom was paid.

List of Alleged Plotters.

Federal officers said the following plotted and carried out the Hamm kidnaping:

Edmund C. Bartholmey, postmaster of Bensenville, Ill., arrested there Friday as owner of the house in which Hamm was kept captive. Bartholmey's home, identified by Hamm, is two blocks from the Harold Alderton home, the place where Bremer was kept. The postmaster, was ousted at once by postal officials after his arrest.

Jack Peifer, arrested in Minneapolis Friday, where he was said to have served as "finger man" for the kidnapers.

Charles J. Fitzgerald, 60-year-old ex-convict and alleged gangster, arrested in Los Angeles, Cal., Friday, accused of being the man who shook hands with Hamm before two others poked pistols in his ribs. Elmer Farmer, serving a sentence in the Bremer case.

Byron Bolton, also called William Bryan Bolton, now held in St. Paul in connection with the Bremer case.

Arthur (Doc) Barker, eldest of "Ma" Barker's boys, serving a life sentence at Alcatraz.

Fred Barker, killed with his mother in a pistol fight with Federal agents at Oklawaha, Fla.

Fred C. (Shotgun Zeigler) Goetz, reported killed by gangsters.

Alvin Karpis, at large.

Gives Detailed Account.

Hoover refused to discuss details of the investigation which led to the arrests.

"I'm afraid I've said too much all ready," he said.

Hoover in a memorandum gave a detailed account of Hamm's kidnaping, the telephoned ransom demands, and the final payment by William W. Dunn, an official of the brewing company, who drove a partly-dismantled car, marked by a red lantern, out a St. Paul highway. When another car signalled by blinking its lights he dropped the ransom and continued toward Duluth.

Gang Being Eliminated.

Like the John Dillinger gang the Karpis-Barker outlaws are being steadily eliminated.

"Ma" Barker and two of her sons, Fred and Herman, are dead. Herman committed suicide rather than face sentence.

"Willie" Harrison's body was found in a burned barn in Illinois last summer. Joseph P. (Doc) Moran, according to Hoover took a ride on Lake Erie with "a bunch of the boys"—and never came back.

Russell Gibson, alias Slim Gray, were killed in a Federal raid on a Chicago apartment of Arthur (Doc) Barker. Barker was arrested and sentenced to Alcatraz. Others serving long prison terms are Lloyd Barker and Volney Davis. Wynone Burdette and Delores Delaney, trapped in an Atlantic City (N. J.) hotel when Karpis and Campbell fled from police a year ago, are serving five-year sentences.

Postmaster's Wife on "Something Like a Visit" at Time.

BENSENVILLE, Ill., April 18.—The wife of acting Postmaster Edmund Conrad Bartholmey said today she was away on "something like" a visit at the time her husband was accused by Government agents of hiding kidnaped William A. Hamm Jr., of St. Paul, in their home.

Busy with her duties of running the post office in her husband's ead, Mrs. Bartholmey, a leader in the civic and religious activities of this suburban village of 1700 persons, declined to answer any other questions in connection with the Federal Department of Justice's allegations that Hamm was imprisoned in her home after his abduction for $100,000 ransom in 1933.

"I couldn't say," she told questioners.

Neighbors said the Bartholmeys had been active in many of the affairs of this community of small home owners, about 14 miles west of Chicago's loop. Bartholmey had been a clerk in the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad yard offices here, had been a member of an employer-employe board to settle disputes, and had held several public trusts. He was a Democratic precinct committeeman and a member of the school board for four years.

Two "Material Witnesses" Held; Bartholmey Arraigned.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, April 18.—William Hamm, Jr., congratulated the Department of Justice and "its untiring investigators" today in the solving of his kidnaping.

Two of three men arrested in the case were held in jail here, along with two "material witnesses," one of them a woman.

In the county jail here were Edmund C. Bartholmey, acting postmaster at Bensenville, Ill., in whose home agents said Hamm had been held; and Jack Peifer, former St. Paul roadhouse proprietor, reputed fingerman. Bartholmey was arraigned today and bond set at $100,000. He pleaded not guilty.

George F. Sullivan, United States District Attorney, who announced the cases would be presented to a grand jury Tuesday, said he expected the third suspect, Charles J. Fitzgerald, who was arrested in Los Angeles, would arrive here Monday.

Held as "material" witnesses were Morris Reisner, liquor store proprietor who once was a kidnaping victim, and a woman identified only as an acquaintance of Fitzgerald.

DICKMANN WANTS TO BE DELEGATE TO CONVENTION

Thinks He Is Entitled of Recognition as First St. Louis Democratic Mayor Since 1912.

A movement to bring about the selection of Mayor Dickmann as one of the four delegates-at-large to the Democratic national convention was announced yesterday by Assessor Ralph Coale. He said the Mayor believed that as the first Democratic Mayor of St. Louis in 24 years he was entitled to official State recognition by the party.

Eight delegates-at-large, four men and four women, will be chosen by the Democratic State convention in Joplin, May 5. It is the understanding among Democratic politicians generally that the four men had been decided upon before the Mayor made known his ambition. Several days ago Boss Tom Pendergast of Kansas City announced he would support Thomas H. Vansant, a banker of Fulton, for one of the places. United States Senators Clark and Truman and Gov. Park are slated for the three remaining places on the delegation.

If the Mayor finds that he cannot go on the Big Eight he will ask to be named a district delegate for the Eleventh District, Coale said.

STATE LOSES $800,000 INHERITANCE TAX CASE

Probate Judge Arnold Rules for Estate of Mrs. Sophie Franz; Appeal to Be Made.

Exceptions filed by State Treasurer Richard R. Nacy and Attorney-General Roy McKittrick to the report of Frank H. Fisse, as inheritance tax appraiser in the estate of Mrs. Sophie Franz, were overruled yesterday by Probate Judge Glendy B. Arnold. Fisse appraised the net value of the assets listed in the inventory at $1,771,936, from which he computed the State inheritance tax to be $50,821.

The appraisal, however, did not take into consideration the value of 188,333 shares of common stock of Burroughs Adding Machine Co., which Nacy and McKittrick alleged belonged to Mrs. Franz at the time of her death in April, 1930. This stock was not listed in the inventory by the executor, G. A. Buder. Edward H. Miller, Assistant Attorney-General, said the value of the stock when Mrs. Franz died was $48 a share, or a total of $8,839,984, and on that valuation the State was entitled to an additional inheritance tax of approximately $800,000, including interest. The present market value was said to be $29 a share.

G. A. Buder Jr. and Jesse T. Friday, counsel for the executor and some of the heirs of Mrs. Franz, resisted the efforts of the State for an additional tax. They asserted the Federal Court, in effect, had decided in other Franz estate litigation that the stock in controversy was the trust estate property of Mrs. Franz' husband, the late Ehrhardt D. Franz, a St. Louis grocer.

Miller said he would appeal to the Circuit Court from Judge Arnold's decision. He argued that seven of the 10 heirs in 1922 had transferred to Mrs. Franz their interest in the trust estate of her husband, which action had the effect of conferring title in her name.

WOMAN'S SLIPPER HEEL IS CLEW IN CHICAGO KILLING

Found Beside Body of Arthur J. Hewitt, Retired Contractor, Who Was Beaten to Death.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 18.—Betty Honzik, 26 years old, was taken into custody at her home today for questioning in the killing of Arthur J. Hewitt, 60-year-old retired contractor, of Wheaton, who was found beaten to death in an unused passageway between two buildings on the South Side. A heel torn from a woman's shoe was beside him.

Police began a search for another woman when George Richardson, a taxicab driver, insisted Miss Honzik was not the "Jerry" who hastily arranged for him to drive her to Detroit. Another driver also told police Miss Honzik was not the woman known as "Jerry."

Hewitt left his home Wednesday to collect some money due him. His body was identified by Webb C. Hewitt, a son. The skull had been fractured by repeated blows with a heavy instrument.

Cab Driver's Story.

A short time after the body was found, Richardson told police a woman he knew casually as "Jerry," had come to him Thursday night, telling him she had to get out of town. On the way to Detroit, he said, she told him she had struck a man with a ginger ale bottle and believed she had killed him.

He said the drive to Detroit was made in an automobile, supplied by the woman, which later was identified as Hewitt's. She directed him to a shoe shop in Detroit, he said, explaining she had lost a heel while struggling with the man who she said had attempted to attack her with a knife. She left the shop by a rear door while he waited in front, Richardson said. He returned to Chicago alone.

At his home, police found a topcoat belonging to Hewitt. While they were questioning him, a telegram sent from a Chicago station was delivered to headquarters by his employer. It read: "Not necessary to wait until sentence is passed. Count on me any time. Notify me immediately. Betty."

Explanation of Wire.

Richardson said the wire was from a "very good friend" whom he had told he was afraid he might get "into trouble because I had driven what I thought was a stolen car."

Police decided to question Miss Honzik, however, after finding her address in a notebook in Richardson's apartment, along with an unaddressed note reading:

"Am at Superintendent McDonald's office (his employer), Checker Company, 1401 West Jackson, third floor, regarding the Pontiac (the made of Hewitt's car) and Detroit. If Betty comes tell her to come down there if I'm not home yet, as I may need her as a witness—badly."

Hewitt is survived by his widow, two daughters, and two sons. He formerly was president of the Wisconsin Tunnel Co. of Milwaukee and later head of the Midwestern Co., Chicago contractors. He retired from business several years ago because of ill health.

STATLER HEIRS DROP FIGHT, DAVIDSON GETS TRUST FUND

His Wife, Found Dead, in Garage, Left Most of Her Fortune to Him.

By the Associated Press.

RALEIGH, N. C., April 18.—Heirs of the late E. M. Statler today dropped their fight to break the will of Mrs. Elva Statler Davidson, who died of carbon monoxide poisoning. The will gave a major share of her fortune to her husband, H. Bradley Davidson Jr. of Washington.

Attorneys formally withdrew the appeal from the verdict of a Moore County jury at Carthage in February upholding the will of the hotel man's adopted daughter.

Mrs. Davidson was found dead in the garage of her home at Pinehurst late in February, 1935, about two months after she had been married to Davidson. A Coroner's jury decided she died "under unknown circumstances."

By her will Davidson will receive a trust fund set up in Boston, which, according to testimony in the will suit, is valued at $240,000.

The caveat action was brought by Mrs. Catharine Statler of Tucson, Ariz., as guardian of her young daughter, Joan Marie Statler, and by Ellsworth M. Statler, reported to be living in England. The last-named and Joan Marie's father, Marion, who was killed in an automobile accident, also were foster children of the hotel man.

MRS. INEZ WALLACE.

SHORT OF FUNDS, Y. W. CUTS STAFF BY HALF

Activities Curtailed Also Because Campaign Missed Goal by $22,000.

Because the $80,000 financial campaign of the Young Women's Christian Association fell short $22,000 last February, it has been necessary to drop five executives and 16 employes, half of the staff, to balance the budget, Mrs. Herman Duhme Jr., president, announced yesterday.

The top three floors of the four-story downtown building will be closed this summer, beginning June 1. The first floor, the gymnasium and swimming pool will remain open, and the employment service will be continued, but the cafeteria will be closed. During the summer the "Y" will concentrate on its camp at Montebello. The second floor will be reopened for the autumn and winter, but classes will be curtailed and many club activities will be suspended.

The Phillis Wheatley branch for Negroes will be closed, except for its dormitory, during July and August, and the Carondelet branch will be closed except for the health educational service, the swimming pool, and gymnasium.

Mrs. Richard H. Buffum, general secretary, was the chief executive to go during the retrenchment. She resigned, along with Miss Gladys Heath, younger girls' secretary, Miss Amy Erb, building and maintenance secretary, Mrs. Louise Fulton, health education secretary, and her assistant, Miss Agnes Rapp. Miss Lois Diehl, former program secretary, was appointed to replace Mrs. Buffum, who had been with the organization seven years.

The "Y" residence at 714 Walton avenue was sold two weeks ago and the 77 women living there were given notice to move by next Tuesday.

WOMAN RUN DOWN BY STREET CAR DIES

Mrs. Mollie Jansen Was Hit When Trying to Find Coin She Had Dropped.

Mrs. Mollie Jansen, 50 years old, 3136 Allen avenue, died at Barnes Hospital last night of injuries suffered Friday night when she was struck by a street car while trying to recover a coin she had dropped in the safety zone on the northwest corner of Grand and Washington boulevards.

She was waiting for a southbound Grand car, on her way home with a friend after having seen a movie, when she dropped a 50-cent piece as the street car was approaching. As she stooped over to pick up the rolling coin, the street car hit her. An autopsy showed she suffered a broken neck, fractured right hip, and concussion of the brain.

The motorman on the street car said he was Benjamin La Brock of 2133 South Jefferson avenue.

Mrs. Jansen was president of the George R. Jansen Transfer Co., 216 Elm street, but took no active part in the business. The company was founded by her husband, George R. Jansen, who died 19 years ago. Surviving are a son, George L. Jansen, secretary of the company, and a daughter, Mrs. W. T. Grund, whose husband is vice-president and treasurer.

PETER MARINER OUT AT ARTISTS' GUILD

Resignation Accepted by Vote of 32 to 15; Was Hired to Sell Members Works.

Peter Mariner, who was hired last November by the Artists' Guild Galleries Association to promote sales of members' works, is out of a job today.

The association, by a vote of 32 to 15, accepted his resignation yesterday after a dispute in the organization which started two weeks ago when a questionnaire was sent out seeking the opinion of members as to the advisability of retaining him for next year at his original salary of $150 a month.

Mariner—born Joe Pelkey—attributed the necessity of resignation to his inability to get along with some of the controlling members of the organization, whose pictures he had not been overly successful in selling.

"I suppose it was just a case of incompatibility of temperaments," he said last night. "But I intend to carry on some place else in the city. These artists who are producing worthwhile pictures need representation and the work I've carried on has been a healthy movement for the city."

He charged that the questionnaire sent out by the Executive Committee of the association had presented an unfair picture of his activities and created a situation which practically forced him to resign. "The questionnaire stated that my total sales were only $288, whereas they were really close to $1400," he said.

Mrs. Jessie Beard Rickly, chairman of the association, denied that that the questionnaire was intended to reflect on the young salesman and insisted that all figures presented were correct.

"Nothing was meant in a personal way," she declared. "Mr. Mariner came to us as a personality of which we knew nothing and we simply felt that the membership had a right to know facts on which to form an opinion of him.

Sat Up Nights Worrying.

"I am quite disappointed that things have turned out as they have. We gave him every co-operation—in fact, many of us sat up nights worrying about how to get money together for his salary. The whole thing was a sort of experiment and I feel that a majority of the artists are interested in carrying on the work as it has been started—with proper direction."

She said she was not in a position at this time to say what direction future activities would take, or whether the circulating library of pictures, as inaugurated by Mariner to take effect next autumn, would be operated. Under Mariner's plan, subscribers to the library at $10 for an eight-month period—would obtain various pictures painted by local artists to hang in their homes for periods of one to two months.

MOTHER SUES FOR CUSTODY OF FREDDIE BARTHOLOMEW

Says Actor Son Was Taken From Her in England "On Pretext" by His Aunt.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, April 18.—Freddie Bartholomew's mother began a legal fight today to regain custody of her acter-son. She filed an affidavit declaring he was taken from her "on a pretext," and asked that a court order of six months ago making Freddie's aunt, Miss Myllicent Bartholomew, his guardian, be set aside.

The affidavit said Miss Bartholomew two years ago told the parents she wanted to take Freddie on a 60-day vacation to Sarcsdale, N. Y., gut instead brought him to Hollywood, and that the guardianship came about "through the mistake, surprise and excusable neglect" of the parents.

HOOVER DECLARES G. O. P. MUST BE LIBERAL PARTY

Says It Should Be Rallying Place for All Who Uphold 'Standard of American Principles.'

CALLS NEW DEAL THREAT TO LIBERTY

In Message to Young Republican Convention in California Assails Growing Deficit.

By the Associated Press.

SAN JOSE, Cal., April 18.—Herbert Hoover told the Young Republicans of California today the Republican party must become "the true liberal party of America."

"The party," he said in a written message to the State convention of Young Republicans, "must furnish the rallying place for all those, whether Republicans or Democrats, who believe in upholding "the standards of American principles."

The former President said the term liberalism was claimed "by every sect that would limit human freedom and stagnate the human soul, whether they be Fascists, Socialists or New Dealers." He denounced the actions of the New Deal at almost every point as a "threat to the very vitals of liberty."

Text of Message.

The text of the message follows: "The Republican party has today the greatest responsibility that has come to it since the days of Abraham Lincoln. That responsibility is to hold up the standard of American principles. The party must furnish the rallying place for all those, whether Democrats or Republicans, who believe in these American principles and are determined to defeat those who are responsible for their daily jeopardy. The Republican party is today the only instrumentality through which the people can seek effective remedy.

"It will be the duty of the party to make a courageous and progressive platform which will point the way to the American people for the next generation. The country is in need of live and vigorous young Republicans to effect these ideas. You have a great contribution to make. That is the contribution of open minds, fresh idealism, strength and youthful determination. That service to our country transcends all personal interest or selfish interest of any individual or group. Political intrigue does not comport with the seriousness of the times.

"True Liberal Party."

"The Republican party must be responsive to the needs of the people. These needs must be revised with each new generation. The party must not be befogged by outworn issues. But there is one issue that is never outworn. That is human liberty. The party must become the true liberal party of America.

"Huxley well remarked that the first need in discussion was a definition of terms if we are to have a common language. Today the term liberalism is claimed by every sect that would limit human freedom and stagnate the human soul, whether they be Fascists, Socialists, or New Dealers.

"Liberalism is a creed of ordered liberty. Whatever the New Deal words may be, their actions at almost every point are a threat to the very vitals of liberty. It is a false liberalism that substitutes government of men for government of laws. That quickly interprets itself into dictation. Every step in that direction crushes the very roots of liberalism. The spirit of liberalism is to create free men. It is not the regimentation of men. It is not the extension of bureaucracy. That is the road not to liberty but to less liberty. You cannot extend the mastery of government over the daily life of a people without somewhere making it master of people's souls and thoughts.

"The greatest product of ordered liberty is open and equal opportunity in life for youth. Yet these opportunities are being subtly narrowed. Liberty and opportunity do not flourish on a deficit of three billions a year. They will be dismissed by the taxes which are being deferred for you to pay. Liberty cannot survive if these vast sums are to be used to pile up political influence.

"Nor can liberty survive a continuation of this ghastly failure in our country to restore employment when all the rest of the world has passed the world depression and proved it can be cured.

"Nor can liberty live under economic or industrial tyranny or exploitation. Liberty must be inviolate from tyranny, whether greed or lust for power. Young Republicans will not stand for reaction in this or any other form. Herein are the problems of the Republican party.

"And from all this present confusion the party must find for the youth of America a restoration of faith, the removal of fear and uncertainty for the future of America. In these tasks you have a great part."

MORE FARMERS LET IN ON AAA SOIL SUBSIDIES

Regulations Revised to Permit Payments for Partial Compliance With Program.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Changes intended to extend soil conservation subsidies to more farmers were made in the farm program today by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Work on rates of payments for four regions was "progressing rapidly" and the schedules should be completed within a few days, the AAA said. Rates for the North Central region were announced several days ago.

A modifictaion of regulations will permit partial payments to producers who may not have the minimum acreages in soil-conserving crops necessary to qualify for full payments.

Previously it was announced that farmers, to be eligible for payments, must have at least 15 per cent as much crop land in soil conserving crops as in soil-depleting crops this year. In the case of cotton, tobacco, peanuts and flax, the minimum is 20 per cent.

Rate for Reductions.

Under the new regulation, the AAA will make deductions from farmers' payments for each acre by which they fail to meet the requirements. For each excess acre of soil-depleting crops the deduction rate will be one and one-half times the rate of the payment for soil-conserving crops.

Another regulation, the AAA said, will permit farmers who already have large soil-conserving acreages and small soil-depleting acreages, to obtain soil-building payments without reducing the amounts of their cash crops. However, heavy deductions will be made from the soil-building payments if such farmers increase their acreages of soil-depleting crops beyond an established base.

Acreage planted to winter cover crops and green manure crops after it has been in vegetables will be classified as soil conserving if the cover crops are plowed under as green manure between Jan. 1 and Oct. 1, 1936. However, the cover and manure crops must have been growing two months.

The AAA said this regulation would enable truck farmers to participate more widely in the conservation program.

Orchards Included.

The definition of crop land was broadened to include orchards or vineyards between Jan. 1, 1930, and last Jan. 1, but which had not reached bearing age on the latter date. With this exception, crop land is land from which any crop other than wild hay was harvested between Jan. 1, 1930, to last Jan. 1.

Two or more farms in the same county, owned or operated by the same person, may participate in the program as though they were one.

The regulation for division of payments between landlords and tenants in the east central region was modified so that the person furnishing the land will receive 16 2-3 per cent, the person furnishing the work stock and tools, 16 2-3 per cent, while 66 2-3 per cent of the payment will be divided as the crop, or its proceeds are divided. Previousl, the AAA had provided in this region for division of the payment according to division of the crop only.

The AAA called attention to "one important provision" of the program, which "gives the Secretary of Agriculture" the authority to withhold payments from any producer, who, while technically eligible for grants, has adopted practices which tend to defeat the aims of the program."

HOOVER 'COMICAL SPECTACLE,' DEMOCRATIC SPEAKER SAYS

Denounces "Tyranical" Enforcement of Dry Law by Man Now Assailing Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 18.—Joseph Fromberg, Special Assistant United States Attorney at Washington, said today that former President Herbert Hoover "makes a comical spectacle of himself hurling anathemas against President Roosevelt."

Fromberg, sent here by the Democratic National Committee, addressed a conference of Young Democratic Clubs of Northern California.

"For a long time," said Fromberg, "this Republican from Palo Alto deluded the people with his claim that prosperity is just around the corner, and his cry of two cars in every garage and two chickens in every pot. It is impossible to forget his tyrannical enforcement of the prohibition law, when the homes of American people were invaded, innocent victims shot down and Government agents were riding with bootleggers to protect them from highjackers."

JEFFERSON CITY, April 18.—The appointment of Edgar M. Eagan of St. Louis as temporary secretary of the State Building Commission to succeed R. N. Howell, Kirksville, was announced today by Gov. Park.

Eagan will continue his duties as secretary of the Bipartisan Advisory Committee which is aiding the Building Commission in administering the $13,778,000 rehabilitation program of the State's eleemosynary and penal institutions. Howell resigned to become City Clerk of Kirksville.

LAWRENCE M'DANIEL TO OPPOSE JUDGE GANTT

Former Circuit Attorney Files Candidacy for Nomination for Supreme Court.

Former Circuit Attorney Lawrence McDaniel, for many years active in Democratic politics in St. Louis, announced his candidacy yesterday for the Democratic nomination for Judge of Division No. 1 of the Supreme Court, for which Judge Ernest S. Gantt is a candidate for renomination.

McDaniel's entry into the race will bring about one of the very few Democratic primary contests for State offices. With the exception of William Hirth, who is opposing Lloyd C. Stark for the nomination for Governor, and McDaniel in his opposition to Gantt, there are no contests of those on the slate approved by Boss Tom Pendergast of Kansas City, and announced several months ago.

Reports from Kansas City are that the whole Pendergast strength will not be exerted for Judge Gantt, leaders in the Shannon wing of the Kansas City organization having caused it to become known that they were not favorable to him. Politicians expect Pendergast to stand by his indorsement of Gantt but not to make an issue with any faction in his organization which objects to following him on this particular office.

McDaniel served as Circuit Attorney in St. Louis from 1917 until 1921, and in 1929 was the Democratic nominee for Mayor, being defeated by Victor J. Miller. His candidacy for Supreme Judge will be his first Statewide primary race.

McDaniel's wife is president of the Missouri Federation of Women's Democratic Clubs, and several days ago retired from the race for Democratic National Committeewoman.

When Judge Gantt last was a candidate, 10 years ago, he won the nomination over the opposition of Pendergast, who supported Carl Ristine, piling up a heavy majority in the State outside of St. Louis and Kansas City.

Judges Gantt and Tipton Deny Published Statement.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 18.—Judge Ernest S. Gantt and Judge Ernest M. Tipton today expressed objection to statements contained in a dispatch from Kansas City in the Post-Dispatch Thursday concerning opposition to the renomination of Judge Gantt by the Shannon faction of the Democratic organization there and stating that Judge Tipton was affiliated with the Shannon faction.

Judge Gannt said: "The article appearing in the Post-Dispatch with reference to my candidacy for Supreme Judge erroneously stated that Judge Tipton and I were not personally friendly. The relations among the members of the court are friendly. Indeed, Judge Tipton and the other Democratic members of the court are supporting me for renomination and re-election."

Judge Tipton said: "I am supporting Judge Gantt and am for him regardless of who runs against him. I have known Judge Gantt favorably since I was a student in Missouri University. I am not a member of that faction (Shannon) and it did not support me in the primary of 1932. I am connected with the Pendergast organization."

REPUBLICAN SPEAKERS ASSAIL FARMER LABORITES' SPENDING

Minnesota G. O. P. Gathers at St. Paul to Complete List of Convention Delegates.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 18.—A platform which would assail the "spendthrift policy recklessly pursued" by the State Farmer-Labor administration was urged by speakers at the Minnesota Republican convention as it convened today to elect four delegates-at-large to complete the State quota of 22 to the Cleveland convention. Eighteen delegates, all uninstructed, were selected at district conventions recently.

The platform as drafted for approval called for a "pay-as-you-go" policy in Minnesota's government, a merit system for State workers, statewide police, criticised Highway Department administration, "deplored introduction of politics in public school administration" and demanded abolition of profits from war and the universal draft of men and materials.

Martin A. Nelson, candidate for Governor two years ago, who has announced he would file again this year, said Minnesota has a $41,000,000 deficit. He said there was no permanent deficit when the last Republican Governor left office six years ago.

TWO CONVICTS SHOT OFF LADDER AT WALL

Leslie Horner, Former Dillinger Gangster, Leads Wisconsin Prison Escape Attempt.

By the Associated Press.

WAUPUN, Wis., April 18.—Leslie Homer, one of the last of John Dillinger's gang, was shot off the wall of the Wisconsin state prison today while leading four men in an attempt to escape. A companion, Alec Leikam, 19 years ago, serving 14 to 25 years for the killing of a policeman, was shot in the back and may die.

Homer, sentenced to 28 years for participation in the $50,000 robbery of the American Trades and Savings Bank of Racine, Wis., in 1933, was wounded in the right leg, near the hip.

The five convicts, employed in the prison twine shop, armed themselves with lengths of gas pipe, knives and a hatchet, overpowered a guard and seized a prison truck as the driver backed it to the twine shop door.

Homer threatened the driver with the hatchet and ordered a fellow convict, Albert Stephens, to take the driver's place. Stephen's ran the truck to an adjacent building, where window washers were working. There the convicts seized a ladder and continued their dash to the rear wall.

Were Climbing the Wall.

The convicts hoisted the ladder to the top of the truck cab and Homer started up, Leikam following. Homer had nearly reached the top when two guards in lookout towers opened fire with rifles. The bullets knocked both men from the ladder. They fell among their companions, who stood at the bottom waiting their turn to mount. The three other convicts surrendered to guards.

In addition to Stephens, 32, serving three to 20 years for assault and armed robbery, the men were Ernest Webber, 34, serving one to 25 years for assault with intent to rob, and Wilbert Schwalbe, 25, serving three to 20 years for assault and armed robbery.

Drove Gangsters' Car.

Homer, sentenced in 1933 when he was 41 years old, drove the Dillinger gangsters' car when they robbed the Racine (Wis.) bank. Police Sergeant Wilbur Hansen was shot in the leg when police engaged the gang in a machine gun fight in the city's business district.

From photographs witnesses identified one of the machine gunners as Dillinger, who had been delivered from jail in Ohio a month earlier. For the next eight months the band robbed and killed in several middle western states, but was finally destroyed by police and Department of Justice agents. Federal officers killed Dillinger in Chicago in the summer of 1934. Homer was captured in Chicago and brought back to Racine for trial.

112 MICHIGAN DOCTORS TAKING COURSE AT WASHINGTON U.

Sent to St. Louis by W. K. Kellogg Foundation to Hear Lectures On Children's Diseases.

One hundred and twelve physicians from seven Michigan counties are taking a two weeks' postgraduate course, chiefly in children's diseases, at the Washington University School of Medicine. They were sent here by the W. K. Kellogg Foundation, which seeks to improve the health of Michigan children through an educational program for physicians and parents.

The physicians, most of them general practitioners, are attending lectures on infant feeding, birth control, mental hygiene, medical economics and on specific diseases. The course will end Saturday.

Washington University was selected by the foundation for the post-graduate program this year because of its high national rating among medical schools. Among the physicians taking the course are Dr. Grover C. Penberthy, president of the Michigan Medical Society, and Dr. J. D. Burce, vice-president of the University of Michigan.

'GHOST' SHIP IN ARCTIC; ESKIMOS TRY TO REACH IT

Speculation Whether It Is Whaler Which 50 Years Ago Floated Away With 100 Aboard.

(Copyright, 1936.)

BARROW, April 18.—A mysterious "ghost ship," an unidentified derelict vessel, is locked in the Arctic ice far off Point Barrow. The two-masted schooner was sighted by Eskimos, who have so far been unsuccessful in their efforts to reach her. Among the first to see the craft was Claire Oakpeha, Eskimo who ran 15 miles across the Arctic tundra to Barrow last summer with the news of the Will Rogers-Wiley Post tragedy.

Observers at first believed the ship was an ill-fated fur trader, the Baychimo, abandoned four years ago after being trapped in the ice. Now there is speculation whether she is one of seven great whaling ships which, 50 years ago, floated out into the unknown and became fast in the ice with 100 or more men on board.

BOND THEFT SUSPECT'S WIFE IS QUESTIONED

A "Mrs. Frankenberg" Found in London—Husband Sought for New York Police.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 18.—French police started a search over all Europe tonight for a man wanted for questioning in connection with two New York bond thefts after British police interrogated his wife last night in a London hotel.

Officials said two suspects arrested here would be held in jail until a New York detective, Henry Oswald, arrived aboard the liner Lafayette to aid in rounding up suspected members of the gang of international bond thieves which obtained more than $2,000,000 in securities fro mtwo New York City banks. He left New York today.

United States authorities said the woman found in London was a "Mrs. Frankenberg," who, the French Surete said, apparently fled from France with her husband. The authorities said she was not arrested since there were no charges against her or her husband.

Police identified the two men held under suspicion of complicity in the $1,507,938 robbery of a New York bank runner in 1935 as Bernard Klein, 39 years old, a Hungarian, and his cousin, Jacob Schwartz, 34, a Czech.

In Klein's possession officers said they found $440,000 in bonds, and Schwartz was reported in possession of $10,000.

French police said Klein persisted in his assertion that he had obtained the bonds from a stranger in a London hotel, and that his only interest in them was a 40 per cent commission on any he should sell.

The Frankenbergs, whose possible connection with the theft ring was not disclosed, were represented as leaving Paris a few days ago ostensibly for Monaco. They then dropped from sight.

RAILROADS LOSE PLEA FOR DELAY ON 2-CENT FARE

Eastern Carriers' Request on Order, Effective June 2, Denied by 6 to 5 I. C. C. Vote.

EASTMAN FAVORS CHANGE IN RATE

Says Lines' Proposed 2.5-Cent Test Would Not Be Conclusive; Courts Only Recourse.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—By a six-to-five vote, the Interstate Commerce Commission today ruled against a proposal by Eastern railroads for an 18-month delay in establishing sharply reduced passenger fares, leaving the carriers the sole recourse of challenging its action in the courts.

With the Commission divided five to five, Transportation Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman, the eleventh member, who acts only when there is a tie, broke the deadlock by voting against any delay in the June 2 effective date of a recent ICC order fixing a basic rate of two cents a mile in day coaches.

The former rate was 3.6 cents and the carriers had asked for the delay in order to establish their own "experimental" rate of 2.5 cents. They agreed, however, to accept a 3-cent Pullman rate fixed by the commission. The former Pullman rate was 3.6 cents, plus a surcharge which averaged four-tenths of a cent.

The carriers' plea for a postponement—filed by all major Eastern roads except the Baltimore & Ohio—hinted that, if the commission acted adversely, they would carry their fight to the courts. Railroad officials here said representatives of the roads soon would decide whether the roads would appeal to the courts.

Eastern roads are primarily affected by the commission's order because low passenger fares already are in effect in the West and South. These would not be changed if as low as those designated.

Opinion by Eastman.

The only written opinion today was by Eastman, long an advocate of reduced fares as a method of attracting increased passenger traffic. Although a member of the Commission, Eastman ordinarily does not vote because of his duties as co-ordinator.

In a statement, he called attention to the roads' plea that they should be permitted to experiment with their own 2.5 cent fares in order to measure the effect of a reduction on their revenues.

Eastman said test of lesser reductions than those ordered by the Commission "would not be at all conclusive as to the effect of those which were ordered," and added:

"If experimentation is desired, conclusive results can be obtained only by putting to the test the fares which the Commission has prescribed, and such results should be available in a period of time shorter than the 18 months proposed by the petitioners."

"However," Eastman wrote, "the conclusion of the Commission on the evidence was that the reduction of passenger fares in accordance with its order would benefit rather than injure the carriers."

The Eastern roads estimated the reductions would cost them millions of dollars annually, arguing that because their passenger traffic was largely commuter travel no major increase in volume could be expected.

The railroads also argued that flood conditions had caused serious losses and that the commission should not take any action which might bring additional losses.

How Commission Divided.

The commission divided five to four on its original order.

Originally voting for the reductions, Commissioner Carroll Miller supported the move for a postponement. His vote was offset, however, by Commissioner Hugh M. Tate, who did not vote on the earlier order.

Commissioners Porter, Clyde B. Aitchison, Marion M. Caskie and Walter M. W. Splawn stood by the June 2 effective date. Besides Miller, Commissioner Balthasar H. Meyer, Frank McManamy, Charles D. Mahaffie and William E. Lee voted for the postponement.

WORK SUSPENDED, NEW PLAN NEEDED FOR ILLINOIS DRIVE

WPA Regional Head Says Engineering Survey Between Alton and Grafton Is Inadequate.

Work on the proposed scenic highway and recreational area along the east bank of the Mississippi and Illinois Rivers between Alton and Grafton has been suspended and will not be resumed under the original plans approved by the Works Progress Administration, it was announced yesterday by Fred G. Austin, WPA Administrator for the East St. Louis district.

The discarded plans called for expenditure of $2,793,133 to construct a 16-mile riverside drive, three bathing beaches, a boat harbor and 7000 acres of picnic grounds at Alton, Lockhaven and Pere Marquette State Park. Only about $5000 has been spent.

Austin said to a Post-Dispatch reporter it developed after the undertaking was begun that heavy machinery would be needed to do the work which it had been expected could be done by unskilled labor. Original plans called for employment of 4800 men, to be taken from the relief rolls.

Three Years Instead of One.

If work were to be continued on the basis on which it was begun, Austin said, three years would be required for completion, instead of one, as originally supposed.

There had been no adequate engineering preparation for the work, Austin said. He added that new plans would be prepared, "on a sound engineering basis" and would be submitted with a recommendation that the work be done by contractors "who should have got the job in the first place."

Complete working drawings such as would be prepared by a construction company before starting the work were never made up, Austin said. There were only the sketchy general plans submitted with the application for funds, and a few contour mape prepared by engineers for the city of Alton. The improvement was sponsored by the city of Alton, which was to have contributed $100,000 toward the cost.

One Unexpected Difficulty.

One of the unexpected difficulties, Austin said, was that slope from the limestone bluffs to the river was thought to be composed of earth, but drillings made after the work began showed that it was of stone, with a thin covering of earth.

When the proposal was approved as a WPA undertaking, Austin said, WPA officials were under "heavy pressure" to get men off the relief rolls, and the scheme was rushed to approval without adequate engineering preparation.

The regional WPA office at Chicago ordered the work halted after receiving a report from Austin based on an inspection he made after work had begun.

DETAILS OF DISMISSAL OF OFFICIAL BY WPA

Washington State Chief Collected From Employes for Own Campaign, It Is Said.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Solicitation of a "George H. Gannon for Governor" campaign fund was the cause cited by a Works Progress Administration official today for the summary discharge of the Washington State WPA director by Administrator Hopkins.

The official, who declined to permit the use of his name, said Gannon "found out about the results of an investigation while on a recent visit to Washington."

"He hurried back to Washington State to cover up," the official said. "A few days later he announced he had resigned as Washington State administrator."

The official discounted Gannon's statement that funds solicited from employes on his staff were to be used to purchase a sound truck for Senator Schwellenbach (Dem.), Washington. Gannon said the sound truck was to be used by Schwellenbach to campaign this summer for the incumbent Democratic administration.

"There is nothing in the investigation or reports of our agents which shows that any of this money was to be used for sound trucks or to finance speaking campaigns by anyone," the official said.

"Political Skulduggery."

Hopkins dismissed Gannon Thursday on the ground the State Administrator permitted the collection of funds from state administrative employes "for political purposes."

"We are serving notice right now that such political skulduggery will not be permitted in the WPA," Hopkins asserted.

The dismissal order was issued two days after Gannon announced he had resigned, effective June 1.

Schwellenbach declined to comment on Gannon's statement.

Schwellenbach and Senator Bone (Dem.), Washington, conferred with Hopkins late yesterday. After the conference the Senators declined to comment, other than to say, "no change in the existing situation is likely."

They said their major concern was to see that an administrative controversy did not interfere with work relief for the State's unemployed.

The WPA official said employes who signed affidavits revealed they were "approached by WPA officials and solicited for contributions to the fall campaign fund of Gannon, and in the event he failed to run for public office, the fund was to be used by the Democratic National Committee as it saw fit.

Admitted Collecting $3900.

"When the whole thing was brought to Hopkins' attention and Gannon was forced to take official recognition of these activities, Gannon called our agents into his office and admitted that money totaling $3929 had been collected.

"Reports of our agents as to Gannon's own statement were that the money was to go into the Democratic campaign fund and if there was any left, it was to be used in his campaign for Governor if he finally chose to run."

The official exhibited a sample affidavit he said was signed by the project supervisor of the Spokane district.

"The supervisor stated he was solicited for a contribution of $100 to go to a campaign fund, half of which was for the George H. Gannon for Governor campaign," the official said.

The contributions, the official explained, ranged upward from $2.50 a month from employes in the $1220 a year salary class.

Denies Lay-Off Order.

The official also said no order was issued by Hopkins directing Gannon to lay off WPA workers summarily.

"Hopkins' last order to State Administrators, issued a month ago, directed them to prepare to shift part of the WPA load to other Federal agencies because the WPA was running short of money," he said. "Since that time funds have been obtained through transfers from other funds, assuring continuance of the existing WPA program until July 1, when the new relief appropriation will be available. The existing program calls for other agencies to absorb as many WPA workers as possible between now and July 1.

"Washington State received better than its share of the current WPA allocation. A Treasury compilation shows $14,864,781 was allocated between Oct. 1 and March 31. Expenditures up to March 31 aggregated $8,574,019, leaving an unexpended balance of $6,290,761 to finance the State WPA program up to JULY 1. That is the reason Gannon, on his recent trip to Washington, did not obtain additional funds."

FREES SELF WITH CAN OPENER

French Prisoner on Way to Devil's Island Opens Hole in Van.

CHALONS-SUR-MARNE, France, April 18.—Marcel Henry, 28 years old, pried his way out of a swiftly moving "Black Maria" with a can opener.

The police van was transporting Henry and 15 other lifers to the Metz penitentiary, pending their eventual shipment to Devil's Island. Shackled hand and foot in heavy chains, Henry ripped off the window grill with the can opener.

Chains and all, he squeezed his body through the narrow aperture and tumbled out to freedom on the roadside.

All the police found in Henry's compartment when the van entered Metz was the can opener.

WOMAN VICTIM OF MURDER LEAVES ESTATE TO CHURCH

Will of Mrs. Pilz, Killed by Tenant on Farm, Is Filed at Edwardsville.

The bulk of the estate of Mrs. Charlotte Pilz, who was beaten to death March 29 on her farm near Edwardsville, was bequeathed to the Evangelical Church in a will filed for probate at Edwardsville yesterday. The estate, principally in farm property, was estimated at about $20,000. Julius Kuethe, 22-year-old son of a tenant on her farm, has confessed he killed Mrs. Pilz.

In her will Mrs. Pilz left $200 in trust for the maintenance of her grave. The remainder of the estate, except for household furnishings, will be divided between the Eden Evangelical Church of Edwardsville, which she attended, and the North American Synod of that church. She requested that a tablet be erected in the Edwardsville church in memory of her husband, Paul Pilz, who died several years ago.

The synod was directed to use the fund for loans and gifts to aid young men in preparing for the ministry. Personal and household effects were left to the Emmaus Home for the Feeble Minded at Marthasville, Mo.

U. S. WARRANTS FOR DEALER IN SAWED-OFF SHOTGUN SALE

East St. Louis Man, an Ex-Convict, Involved by Story of Men Having Weapon.

Max Sonzinsky, 59-year-old East St. Louis second-hand dealer and ex-convict, was arrested yesterday on a Federal warrant charging possession of an unregistered sawed-off shotgun. Arraigned before United States Commissioner Arthur Felsen, he waived preliminary hearing and was released on $2500 bond.

The warrant was issued Friday after Richard Martin, John Dowling and Wesley LeGrand, all of East St. Louis, who were arrested Tuesday with the gun in their possession, told officers they had bought it from Sonzinsky. They also admitted four burglaries and are held on State burglary warrants and Federal warrants charging possession of the unregistered weapon.

SUZANNE, INC., OFFERS 35 PCT. TO CREDITORS

Judge Moore Sets Dress Shop Reorganization Plan for Hearing May 8.

A plan of reorganization for Suzanne, Inc., dress shop at 4914 Maryland avenue, which would provide for payment of 35 per cent of claims of general creditors, was submitted yesterday to Federal Judge George H. Moore. The Court set the plan for hearing May 8.

Under the terms of the plan submitted, general creditors would get 20 per cent of their claims in cash May 10 and notes for 15 per cent, payable July 10 and Aug. 10. Money borrowed from C. J. Rothschild, secured by a pledge of open accounts, would be paid in full through collections from those accounts.

The Court was informed that Mooney J. Sherman, owner of the business, and two associates who hold nominal qualifying shares have pledged their stock with the secretary of a creditors' committee to be held until the payments called for in the plan have been made.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy, seeking reorganization of the firm, was filed two weeks ago by three creditors. Their attorney said Suzanne, Inc., had assets with a book value of about $40,000 and outstanding claims totaled about $38,000.

BUSINESS GAIN IN CITY 8.6 PCT. LAST FISCAL YEAR

License Collector Renick's Report Shows Sales of $756,141,000, Increase of $60,093,900.

Improvement in business conditions in St. Louis as reflected by increased sales of merchants and manufacturers, which were 8.6 per cent greater in the fiscal year ending last May 31 than in the preceding year, was shown in the annual report of License Collector Fred A. Renick, made to Mayor Dickmann yesterday.

Combined sales of merchants and manufacturers in 1934-35 fiscal year were $756,141,000, compared with $696,047,100 in 1933-34, an increase of $60,093,900.

Merchants' sales in 1934-35 were $382,349,000, an increase of $25,320,900 over the year before. Manufacturers' sales were $373,792,000, an increase of $34,773,000.

For purpose of the merchants' and manufacturers' license tax, sales must be reported for the 12-month period and stock on hand must be reported for the highest volume held at any time during the year. Merchants' stock was reported for the last year as $40,472,100, an increase of $3,214,615 over the previous year. Manufacturers' stock, including manufacturing machinery, was $45,169,900 for the last year, an increase of $859,900.

Increase in Taxes.

Tax on sales and stock of merchants for 1934-35 was $1,167,545, an increase of $326,233 over the preceding year, while tax on sales and stock of manufacturers was $1,232,135, an increase of $325,043. The rates in 1934-35 were $1.70 per $100 on stock and $1.25 per $1000 on sales, compared with $1.28 and $1, respectively, previously.

There were 15,065 merchants of all kinds licensed in 1934-35, an increase of 332 over the year before, and 1833 manufacturers, an increase of 20. Renick pointed out that in the last year, for the first time, brewery returns on stock and machinery were made to the Assessor rather than the License Collector.

The Collector's report, while showing returns for collection years, covered the city's fiscal year, which ended April 13. It showed receipts of his office for the fiscal year from all sources as $5,370,320, compared with $4,026,720 in the prior fiscal year, an increase of $1,343,517.

Principal reasons for the increased receipts were the raises in merchants' and manufacturers' tax rates, the increase of the city gasoline tax from ½ cent to 1 cent a gallon in December, 1934, and increases in liquor taxes.

Division of the receipts for the last year was: Municipal purposes, $4,411,626; Art Museum, $17,128; Forest Park Zoo, $17,128; Public Library, $34,256; Board of Education, $753,243; State, $136,854.

In the last fiscal year the city licensed 156,397 automobiles for fees of $743,218, compared with 154,363 cars, for $712,217, the year before. The gasoline tax in the last year yielded $1,123,162, compared with $626,748 in the previous year, when for the first eight months the old rate of ½ cent a gallon was effective.

The "mill tax" of 1 mill per passenger on street cars in the city dropped from $104,214 the year before to $103,451 in the last year, but the tax of 3 per cent on gross revenue of local motor busses increased from $70,897 to $79,971.

City drivers' licenses, issuance of which began last Dec. 9, have yielded $95,314 for 190,628 two-year permits at 50 cents each. Licenses, costing $1, were issued for only 2117 bicycles in the last year, but for 9265 the year before. Renick recalled that police were waging a campaign to require bicycle licenses in the earlier period.

Fewer Dog Licenses at $1.

Cost of dog licenses was reduced from $2 a year to $1 Jan. 1, under an ordinance sponsored by Alderman Otto L. Lietchen, who believed this would induce more persons to take out these tags. However, 4205 licenses were issued in the last fiscal year, for a total of $5946, while the year before there were 4637, for $9274.

Liquor taxes amounted to $542,737 in the last year, an increase of $61,737 over the preceding year. The various types of liquor licenses issued in the last year were: Saloons, 2319; 3.2 beer taverns, 974; 5 per cent beer taverns, 545; package liquor stores, 378; package intoxicating beer stores, 155; package 3.2 beer stores, 54; wine stores, 24; liquor manufacturers, excluding breweries, 13; 3.2 beer manufacturers, nine; liquor wholesalers, 29; malt liquor wholesalers, 11; 3.2 beer wholesalers, seven; wine wholesaler, one.

POWERS CONCENTRATE ON DYES FOR WAR USE

Larger Nations Almost Self-Sufficient Now, Commerce Department Says.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 18. — Development of self-sufficient dyestuffs industries—indispensable to modern warfare—in Germany, Italy, Japan, Soviet Russia, France, Great Britain and the United States was reported today by the Commerce Department.

Military observers and others who have studied the industrial essentials of war have repeated many times that one major lesson of the World War was the necessity for a large capacity of this nature because of its close connection with the manufacture of explosives.

Gen. Pershing, among others, said that "the coal tar products, of which dyes are the most important at present in peace, is the base of practically all of our high explosives and of our war gases."

Commerce Department officials made public the results of a survey showing that the nations named with the addition of Switzerland and Poland have all "attained a high degree of self-sufficiency" in this respect.

Estimates for Germany.

Statistics on Germany's dye output were said to be unavailable officially, but authoritative estimates placed it at approximately 76,000 metric tons for 1934 compared with 66,000 metric tons in 1933.

"American dye manufacturers," the report said, "are now supplying our entire domestic requirements for such materials, with the exception of certain special items, and are gradually increasing their export business.

"Total United States exports of coal tar dyes, colors, stains, etc., were valued at $6,873,000 in 1935 against imports of such products, almost entirely from Germany and Switzerland, valued at $6,034,000.

"Great Britain, the third largest world dye producer (Germany and the United States hold the first two positions) credited with producing around 24,000 metric tons in 1934, is also practically independent of foreign sources for its dye requirements, exporting more than it imports.

Progress by Soviets.

"The Soviet dye industry has made rapid progress in recent years, the output in 1935 aggregating around 25,000 metric tons, according to a statement from the head of the industry.

"Except for special dyes, equipment for the manufacture of which the Soviet industry does not yet possess, the entire local demand is satisfied at home, and exports of finished dyes and intermediates are said to be increasing. Special equipment is now being installed and complete self-sufficiency is anticipated by the end of the current year.

"The Japanese dyestuffs industry continued to make rapid progress in 1935, and at the end of the year was satisfying a very large part of the domestic demand."

9 Captains on New Deal Ship on Gridiron Seas

Paul Revere Hearst and Farley as Pugilist, Figure in Correspondents' Yearly Burlesque of National Events.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—A ship with nine captains sailed the merry seas of the Gridiron Club tonight to give a long roster of the nation's dignitaries a burlesque version of national events as viewed by capital correspondents.

Few who figure in the political campaign were omitted in skits in the annual show of the club.

President Roosevelt, his Cabinet and dignitaries of both parties watched, and the President made a speech. What he said was, by rule, held within the confines of the club, however. The other principal speaker was Frank R. Kent, the Baltimore political writer.

In the parade of skits:

Paul Revere Hearst rode valiantly across the stage to save the Constitution.

James A. Farley and Henry P. Fletcher were prizefighters who dealt efficiently in "rough stuff."

Four Senators and a presidential message came on the stage with widely varying views of what the President wanted done about the ship subsidy bill.

Herbert Hoover started for the Republican convention and found that Senator Vandenberg would not ride in the same stateroom with him.

John J. Raskob went to the Democratic convention because he had to go somewhere.

Jeeter Lester, of "Tobacco Road" became a "New Deal cracker," expounding a profound theory of government.

Representatives Doughton and Hill of the House Ways and Means Committee were masseurs ordered by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Mr. Roosevelt to massage and sweat all the dividends out of the fat man who had too much surplus.

Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton conferred with Uncle Sam, but were told that the credit of the Government had "passed peacefully away," and the government of checks and balances had become one of "all checks and no balances."

Wilhelmina Borah and Alfreda Smith became two nice girls who had to walk home from rides on which they had been taken by Charles D. Hilles and J. Henry Roraback, and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Senator Carter Glass wore earmuffs to shut out the noises of the Democratic and Republican brain trusts.

Twelve du Ponts were shown at an American Liberty League dinner.

Ma and Pa Landon were shown in a "Twilight at Topeka," where a circular press room had been set up in the silo and they affected a nasal drawl for the benefit of the Eastern reporters.

The New Deal relief ship sailed with nine captains. Harold L. Ickes, explaining it to Harry Hopkins, said its fate was in the "hands" of a nine-man Soviet." Hopkins observed that sometimes six of the captains thought it should go in one direction and three in another; and a soloist sang about "nine old men in a White House chest."

Music for the dinner was supplied by the United States Marine Band.

The club discovered that "an Ohio gang" had elevated Edwin W. Gableman, Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer, to the post of president of the organization for 1936. And five messengers turned out to be new members being initiated. They are: Paul Hodges of the Cleveland Plain Dealer; Harold M. Talburt, Scripps-Howard cartoonist; Franklin Waltman Jr. of the Washington Post; Phelps H. Adams of the New York Sun, and George Myers of Washington, the last a limited member.

MEN OF 21 UNIONS TO FIGHT RAIL MERGERS

St. Louis Employes Declare Consolidations Would Throw 5000 Out of Work.

The 21 unions of railroad employes in St. Louis have organized to fight the proposed consolidation of railroad facilities here on the ground that consolidation would throw 5000 employes out of jobs and would be detrimental to the city through abandonment of railroad property.

The unions, representing employes of the 26 railroads using the St. Louis terminal, have called a meeting for 8 o'clock next Friday night at Carpenters' Hall, Grand boulevard and Cozens avenue, to discuss consolidation and methods of combating it. George M Harrison of Cincinnati, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, and Mayor Bernard Dickmann have been invited to speak.

A. J. Pickett, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, estimated that 5000 of the 30,000 railroad employes in the St. Louis area would lose their jobs if consolidation, as outlined by Joseph B. Eastman, Federal Coordinator of Transportation, goes through. Abandonment of railroad property would result in loss of taxes, while the possibility that certain traffic would be rerouted away from St. Louis, were matters of public concern, Pickett said.

Eastman, addressing railway clerks here last November, advised the workers not to insist on two men doing work that could be safely and efficiently performed by one. Unnecessary employment, he said, puts the railroads at a further disadvantage in competition with trucks and other forms of transportation and eventually will cause the loss of more railroad jobs than would be sacrificed by co-operation in economies.

MAN ARRESTED FOR SCHEME TO SOLICIT POSTMASTERS

Accused in Milwaukee of Mail Fraud; Sought Subscriptions to Political Paper.

MILWAUKEE, April 18.—John A. Busch of Milwaukee was arrested today on charges of using the mails to defraud in a political newspaper subscription scheme. E. J. Koelzer, Assistant United States Attorney, said the arrest followed a six weeks' investigation ordered by Postmaster-General James A. Farley.

The warrant alleges that Busch solicited subscriptions to the newspaper from Postmasters in various parts of the country on representations that Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and the committee itself indorsed it.

Koelzer said Busch made representations that Farley expressed a desire that Postmasters subscribe. He said also Busch indicated part of the proceeds would be turned over to the Democratic National Committee.

ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF ABDUCTING WENDEL

Brooklyn Man Accused of Torturing Captive Into Confessing Lindbergh Baby Crime.

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 18.—Martin Schlossman was arrested by Brooklyn police late today on a charge of having abducted Paul H. Wendel, former New Jersey attorney, and allegedly torturing him into confessing to the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby.

Schlossman's arrest came after questioning by police and Wendel's statement that Schlossman was one of four men who held him captive in a Brooklyn house and under duress compelled him to sign a "confession" that he was guilty of the Lindbergh crime.

Previously he had told authorities that the four men who held him were named "Jack," "Tony," Maier and Spiddelio. He identified Schlossman as the man named "Jack."

Wendel told District Attorney W. F. X. Geoghan that the two men who abducted him and transported him to Brooklyn were "Murray Bleefeld" and Harry Weiss. Police are looking for them.

Murray Bleefeld and Mrs. Schlossman are son and daughter of Harry Bleefeld, one of four persons questioned by the police after Wendel told Geoghan he had identified the Bleefeld residence as the place he had been held captive.

Wendel was brought to New York last night after New Jersey Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard dismissed a murder charge against him.

SAFEBREAKERS GET $1700 IN SEED STORE

Push Aside Heavy Packing Cases and Force Way Through Two Doors in Burglary.

Cracksmen who broke into the store of the St. Louis Seed Co., 411 Washington avenue, Friday night, and stole $1168 from the safe, were put to considerable trouble to gain entry. The following steps were necessary:

Pushing two heavy packing cases off a horizontal coal chute door at the back of the store; breaking the lock of the door, to get into the basement; forcing open an inside door to the first floor, and knocking the combination off the safe, which was on a balcony. They left by the same route, and restored the packing cases to their position on the door.

The loss, discovered by Henry Heselmeyer, vice-president of the company, at 6:30 a. m. yesterday, was insured. Yesterday afternoon policemen found several children playing with the receipt box from the same, which they said they had found in the alley north of the 4400 block of Page boulevard.

We wish we could do the IMPOSSIBLE

We wish, sincerely, that we could sell La Salle in the low-price field—for, then, almost everybody would buy a La Salle. But it simply isn't possible. La Salle is designed and built to be a fine car—and cannot compete in the low-price field. It is the lowest-priced quality car in the world—and we think it represents the greatest dollar value to be had anywhere. But it is strictly a fine car, and has to be sold as such.

PREACHER AND WOMAN IN DIFFERENT JAILS

Pair Who Escaped From Cells at Harrisonville, Mo., Surrender to Officers.

By the Associated Press.

HARRISONVILLE, Mo., April 18.—Perry E. Griffin, former preacher, and Madge Copeland, his sister-in-law, surrendered today to officers who have sought them since they escaped from jail Wednesday night.

"I want to ask all of God's people to pray for us," said the apparently penitent Griffin, accused of highway robbery. "That goes for me too," said the woman, charged jointly with him.

The pair ran away from the Copeland farm hom in Iowa a month ago leaving behind them Griffin's wife and three children. A few days later them were in jail here, accused of kidnaping a college student and stealing an automobile he was driving. Authorities said they admitted robberies in Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Wednesday night, Miss Copeland battered a hole in the door of her cell with a poker, then released Griffin. This morning they walked into a farm house and asked that officers be called.

"We just wanted to get out together," said the former preacher. "We fully realize that everything we have done has been wrong. I hope no sinner, regardless of how bad he may be, will hold anything between me and my God. I'm going to do the right thing hereafter, regardless of what it costs."

But officers took no chances. They locked Griffin in the Harrisonville Jail and sent the woman to a cell in Kansas City, 35 miles away.

PITTSBURGH'S MAYOR SPENDS HOUR IN JAIL

Gets Out on Writ, Still Insisting He Will Not Refund Lottery Fine.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 17.—Pittsburgh's Mayor, William N. McNair, spent more than hour in a jail cell today on a charge of embezzlement based on an old State law.

He was put in jail because he refused to obey an order of the County Court to sign a warrant to repay a $100 fine collected by a Magistrate from a man accused of writing "numbers" slips in a lottery. Arrested by a Constable at his offices in City Hall, McNair refused to give bond. He laughed and joked with the prisoners, ate an apple and smoked a cigar. While Representative Theodore L. Moritz, formerly the Mayor's secretary, obtained a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, which the Mayor signed. It was granted by Judge Thomas Marshall, who released the Mayor on his own recognizance, and set Monday for a hearing, warning McNair he would be liable to a fine of $500 if he failed to appear.

Attorneys said the law under which McNair was arrested was enacted in 1860 and never before had been invoked under similar circumstances. It provides a five-year prison term and a fine for persons refusing to obey a Court order to repay funds. The Mayor also was charged with nonfeasance, a less serious offense.

Attorney Warren H. Van Kirk filed the charges in behalf of Sam Collinger. He alleged in an information the fine on Collinger had been "wrongfully imposed" and that the "City of Pittsburgh unlawfully and contemptuously" refused to comply with the Court's order for the refund.

McNair has campaigned against "numbers" writers and lottery operators.

Released from jail, he said: "I'l go back unless the charge is withdrawn and the case is dismissed. It's a malicious attempt on the part of the racketeers to intimidate me, and I'm not going to be intimidated."

McNair, elected in 1933, is Pittsburgh's first Democratic Mayor in more than 25 years. He broke with the party organization over patronage matters shortly after his inauguration and frequently has been at loggerheads with city officias on the matter of signing vouchers and warrants. He took a train to New York tonight to keep a fiddle-playing engagement.

ATHLETICS IN CHINA GAINING IN FAVOR

Football Barred as Too Rough, Student Instructor Studying in U. S., Says.

The Chinese youth today is participating in sports on a large scale and showing an increasing interest in physical education, Chungfu Huang, Chinese student at International Y. M. C. A. College, Springfield, Mass., who has been attending sessions of the American Physical Education convention here, said in an interview yesterday.

To prove his point, Huang told a Post-Dispatch reporter that China, which sent only a few athletes to the Olympic games at Los Angeles in 1932, will enter a team of more than 100 in the games this summer at Berlin. The greater activity in this field of education, he said, is due to the policy of the Chinese Government, which has encouraged its students to attend colleges of the western world to become teachers of physical education.

Studying Physical Education.

That is what Huang is doing. A graduate of Tsing Hua University of Peiping, he came to the United States last August to take a two-year course in physical education offered at the Y. M. C. A. college. When he has finished he will return to China, make application for a position with a state athletic commission, and, he hopes, obtain a job in some high school, or middle school as they are known there.

The old Chinese traditional method of mature education for children was disrupted 20 years ago by the methods introduced at the early Y. M. C. A. schools, he related. Recognition of the value of physical education was attained slowly, but now there is widespread participation in sports, not only among the students but among adults and children who never attended school.

Football Barred.

As in this country ,he said, the Chinese colleges had athletic teams and regularly met other colleges in competition. The high schools have teams in local leagues, and intraschool contests have been developed so that a larger number of students may participate. The popular sport are basketball, volley ball, swimming, tennis and soccer. In soccer, he said, no substitutions were allowed.

Because of the Chinese temperament, he continued, the games were not played with the emphasis on winning. The success of the team is not as important to the players as the recreation and the physical benefits they receive.

"We have few injuries because we avoid rough playing" he said. "That is why we shall never play football. Oh yes, occasionally the players become angry, and sometimes kick the referee and throw him out of the game, but that happens only when great rivals play. As a rule, the Chinese are good losers."

All Schools Charge Tuition.

Because tuition is charged in all Chinese schools, he went on, many youths never attended. However, he added, they were able to compete in athletic meets held once or twice a year in the cities. Larger sectional contests are also held, and once every two years a meet is sponsored by the national athletic commission.

Shanghai and Nanking have large stadiums, Huang says, where the national and sectional meets are held, and a large swimming pool had been constructed with a lighted bottom of glass. He expressed the opinion that the money spent on the equipment should have been used to build many small athletic fields throughout the nation, making available the facilities for a larger number.

CASE IN WHICH MISSING FILES WERE RECOVERED CONTINUED

Two Complaints Against Monark Petroleum Corporation Set for Next Saturday.

The case against the Monark Petroleum Corporation, charging violation of a city ordinance regulating the installation of gasoline tanks, which was reinstated a week ago after it had been dropped from the Police Court docket and the files lost, was continued yesterday until next Saturday by Police Judge Vest.

Karol A. Korngold, attorney for the company, requested the continuance so it might be heard at the same time a second case, charging the company with installation of tanks without a permit, was docketed.

Files of the first case were found in a desk drawer in the office of Cornelius J. O'Brien, clerk of city courts, two days after a Post-Dispatch reporter, investigating the dropping of the case from the docket in Police Judge Simpson's court, inquired for the record. The company is charged with improper installation at a filling station at the northeast corner of Goodfellow boulevard and Easton avenue.

ELECTRIC RAILROAD TO WATERLOO QUITS

East Side Line Unable to Pay Operating Expenses—I. C. C. Allows Abandonment.

By authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the East St. Louis, Columbia & Waterloo Railway Co., a profitable 22-mile property in other days, yesterday joined the procession of interurban street car lines which have given up the ghost and ceased operation.

In its application to abandon the line, the company, control of which was owned by Charles Lemp, banker, and the late Edward W. Foristel, lawyer, stated the line was "unable to earn its out-of-pocket operating expenses and it is impossible to secure additional traffic and revenue."

The blame was placed upon construction of Illinois State Highway No. 3, which was completed in 1925, almost paralleling the electric line to Waterloo and encouraging use of private automobiles and busses. Revenues declined further during the economic depression and in recent months only freight service by steam power has been operated.

In October, 1934, the company, then owing $145,371, was authorized by Federal Judge Wham at East St. Louis to effect a plan of reorganization, but last Jan. 22 attorneys for the company reported efforts had been unsuccessful. The Donk Bros. Coal Co., which established the line in 1913, sold it to Lemp, Foristel and associates in 1924, for $335,000. It was capitalized at $750,000. C. E. Finch has been general manager with offices at Nineteenth street and Baker avenue, East St. Louis.

Several other comparable street car lines in Illinois and in St. Louis County have been abandoned in recent years. Service to Belleville and Collinsville was discontinued in 1932 and last Nov. 15 the East St. Louis Railway Co. ceased operation of street cars in East St. Louis and busses were substituted.

Last February the Illinois Terminal Transportation Co., affiliated with the Illinois Terminal System, announced it would not seek a renewal of its franchise for operation of street cars in Alton because of service car competition.

The Public Service Co. was authorized to abandon its electric line to St. Charles in 1931 and numerous short lines in St. Louis County now are served by bus.

CLARENCE DARROW, 79, SAYS LAW IS HORRIBLE

In Birthday Interview, He Asserts There Is "No Such Thing as Justice."

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 18. — Clarence Darrow was 79 years old today. The veteran criminal lawyer virtually interviewed himself on the occasion.

"Law is a horrible business," he began. "There are too many lawyers, and there is no such thing as justice, in or out of court. You say no? Well, define 'justice.' If a Judge considers justice a simple administration of law, it may be that; but you're dealing with more than that—you're dealing with people in comedies, or far more often, tragedies of life.

"The prosecutor's idea is to get a conviction, almost always.

"The lawyer's idea of justice is a verdict for his client, and really this is the sole end for which he aims.

"I've been like that.

"Much has been written about my religion or my lack of what people call religion. Let's define it first and see what I am. I say that religion is the belief in future life and in God. I don't believe in either one. When I'm dead, there'll be nothing left over. What is my philosophy of life then? It's been the desire to help the poor, the outcast, to see the common man have a share.

"I haven't much to do these days. I read quite a bit, and my family is near. My son lives over there across the midway. Right now I'm re-reading a book by an old friend of mine, 'Bare Hands and Stone Walls,' by Charles Russell."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 18.—John Thomasitz, known also as Thomas, former boxer, was arrested tonight on a charge of homicide growing out of the killing of Mildred McCabe, 39 years old, whose body was found today in a residential section of Queens County.

Detective Joseph Stanworth said the prisoner admitted he took Miss McCabe and her sister, Mrs. Anna Scanlon, for a ride in his automobile last night. He took Mrs. Scanlon to her home, then took Miss McCabe to his house where a quarrel ensued and Thomasitz slapped her hard about the face. She was in a fainting condition when he let her out of his car later at the spot where she was found. But she was not dead, police quoted the prisoner as saying.

Detectives asserted Miss McCabe had been assaulted and beaten to death.

Izaak Walton League Outlines Program and Elects Officers.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 18.—The Izaak Walton League of America closed its fourteenth annual convention by approving resolutions, asking for financial assistance from Washington for several of its projects.

Unless the aid is forthcoming, the resolutions indicated, the grizzly bear, the great brown bear of Alaska, the ivory-bill woodpecker, the condor, the Carolina parakeet, the spruce hen, the sandhill crane and the sage grouse are likely to disappear. A resolution asked that an annual appropriation of $15,000 for administration of the federal black bass law be restored. Another resolution asked that federal funds be used to repair and maintain the Chesapeake & Ohio canal, planned and mapped by George Washington in 184.

Officers re-elected are: Judge George W. Wood, Waterloo, Ia., president; William L. Finley, Portland, Ore.; M. D'Arcy Magee, Washington; J. E. Rymer, Anaheim, Cal., and Dr. H. A. Sinclair, Rome, N. MINERS THREATEN WALKOUT OF 106,000 IN PENNSYLVANIA Serve Notice They Will Not Work Beyond April 30 Without New Agreement.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Maj. W. W. Inglis, chairman of the Joint Conference of Anthracite Coal Operators and Mine Workers, said today that spokesmen for the United Mine Workers had "served notice" that 106,000 Pennsylvania Coal Field workers will not work beyond April 30 if no new wage and hour agreement has been reached at that time.

A five-year pact which expired March 30 had been extended a month by the conference.

The United Mine Workers' ultimatum explained the redoubled efforts with which the conference has been working to reach a settlement, Maj. Inglis said.

DENOUNCES BLANKET SEIZURE OF MESSAGES

Editors' Society Says Action Violates Rights, Whatever the Authority.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Blanket seizure of private communications, whatever the authority employed, was denounced today by the American Society of Newspaper editors as a violation of constitutional rights.

In a resolution aimed at the activities of the Senate Lobby Committee, the convention declared "that if such practice is not checked, the threat to liberty of individual action and particularly of the freedom of the press is immediate and menacing."

The resolution did not mention directly the committee headed by Senator Black, whose seizure of telegrams resulted in an injunction suit by William Randolph Hearst.

Another resolution pledged the society "to co-operate with all law enforcement agencies in guarding against the premature publication of information harmful to the successful completion of criminal investigations."

The resolutions were drafted by Walter M. Harrison, editor of the Daily Oklahoman; J. Noel Macy of the Westchester County Publishers, Inc., of New York, and Verne Marshall of the Cedar Rapids Gazette and Republican.

Marvin H. Creager of the Milwaukee Journal was elected president of the society. Directors include Edson K. Bixby of the Springfield (Mo.) News-Leader; David Lawrence of the United States News; William Allen White of the Emporia Gazette, and Casper S. Yost of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

500,000 Watts Power Permit Sought by WJZ

Key Station of Network Files Application With the FCC—Plans Erection of Slender 640-foot Tower Aerial.

AN application for a 500,000-watt license for WJZ, New York, key station of the WJZ network, has been filed with the Federal Communications Commission. Plans for the new WJZ transmitter, to cost more than $300,000, include erection of a transmission aerial in the form of a slender steel tower 640 feet high. WJZ is now using 50,000 watts power.

The FCC already is considering applications for 500,000-watt licenses from KNX, Hollywood, Cal.; WHO, Des Moines, Ia., and WGN, Chicago. Similar applications are expected from several others of the country's larger stations.

If WJZ gets the approval of the FCC, listeners in this region will benefit for WJZ broadcasts all programs of the WJZ network. When its 500,000-watt transmitter goes on the air, local listeners will be able to tune direct to it for many good WJZ net programs not carried locally or by Mid-Western stations.

Carroll L. Cartwright Heads New Division of Auto Sales Managers

Elected President of Group Formed by Greater St. Louis Automotive Association.

Organization of the new Sales Managers' Division of the Greater St. Louis Automotive Association, Inc., was perfected, and officers were elected, at a meeting Tuesday night at the Melbourne Hotel.

Fifty-five representatives of automotive concerns attended the meeting. The new division was formed to make the sales managers of all of the automobile dealers in St. Louis acquainted and to work for a better understanding between them and their retail forces.

Milton B. Strauss, president of the Greater St. Louis Automotive Association, opened the meeting, then turned it over to Carroll L. Cartwright, who had been elected temporary chairman at a preliminary meeting held March 30.

Cartwright then introduced Joseph N. Kellerman of the Auto Exchange, Inc., who was the principal speaker. Kellerman, basing his totals on his many years of experience in association work and as sales manager for several automobile dealers, emphasized the importance of this group becoming better acquainted with one another. He stressed the long hours which retail sales managers put in at their places of business every day, including Sundays and holidays, the little time for play or recreation afforded them and the importance of meeting in social and business gatherings.

Cartwright explained that there would be a governing board of the division—a president, vice-president, secretary and two directors.

Following this, these officers were elected: President, Carroll L. Cartwright, retail new car sales manager for L. M. Stewart, Inc.; vice-president, W. W. Wilson, retail new car sales manager for the West Side Buick Co.; directors, C. C. Spiegelhalter, retail new car sales manager for the Willcockson Motors, and Uri Smith, used car sales manager for the McCarthy Motor Co. Joseph A. Schlecht was appointed secretary of the new division.

Goodyear Tire Testing Cars En Route From Arizona to Factory

Cars and trucks of the highway laboratory of Goodyear's tire testing fleet are en route this week from Litchfield Park, Ariz., to Akron, O., following completion of the twenty-second season of proving ground activities.

Piling up a total of 1,470,000 road miles in the six months that the fleet operated in Arizona, where conditions simulate summer driving, these test cars are being transferred North in preparation for the summer work.

In the winter the 43 drivers, mechanics and tire engineers were active at the Arizona base. Families of the group, who spend the winters each year in Litchfield Park, bring the total personnel associated with the fleet up to 120. In addition to the tire testing cars and trucks, are the family cars of the group.

Jack Greenleaf, a driver of many years' experience, was in charge of the fleet at its winter base. G. P. Matthews, another veteran driver, laid out the daily routes of the 38 drivers, and M. D. Scott, manager of the Goodyear garage at Akron, accompanied the fleet back home.

Route of the fleet's return trip included: April 20, Litchfield Park, Tucson, Ariz.; Lordsburg, N. M., and El Paso, Tex. April 21, Vegas, Midland, Big Springs and Brady, Tex. April 22, Brady to Texarkana, Tex. April 23, Little Rock, Ark.; Memphis, Tenn.; Paducah, Ky. April 24, Terre Haute, Ind.; Springfield, O. April 25, Akron, O., where the fleet will resume its summer tire testing schedule on highways radiating from the rubber city.

New "Airwheel" Tire Developed by Goodyear Called "Double Eagle"

A new "super" tire has been placed on the market by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., according to C. M. Van Epps, manager of Goodyear Service.

It is the "Double Eagle Airwheel" tire, designed to be the safest, strongest and most luxurious tire so far devised for modern cars.

It was developed after months of design and test work, under standards of manufacture more rigid than ever before set up. Different compounds from those used in previous tires were used in construction of this new tire—and body design and structure, breakers and ply insulation were improved. The tread is wider, thicker and flatter, and the familiar Goodyear diamond-block center-traction tread design is slotted 15 per cent deeper to further increase non-skid life," Van Epps said.

"Final approval of the new tire was given after weeks of test runs at 96 miles per hour on the Bonneville Salt Flats in Utah last summer, when it satisfactorily proved its superior performance and safety.

"Companioning this outstanding tire, to make safety doubly sure, is the unique Lifeguard tube—the Goodyear invention that makes a blowout as harmless as a slow leak."

Standard Oil Co. General Sales Head Addresses Salesmen

Urges Use of New Methods to Meet Changing Conditions in Automobile Field.

Amos Ball of Chicago, general sales manager of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, addressing a meeting of 260 of the company's salesmen from St. Louis and the territory Thursday at the Coronado Hotel, advocated new advanced methods to meet changing conditions.

"Standard salesmen, who are the link between the company and their retail dealers, are expected to render a highly intelligent assistance to dealers in working out the service to customers which modern conditions require," Ball said.

The business situation is improving, he declared. Crops prospects and economic conditions are generally better and conditions in the oil industry are the best for some years. He reported to the meeting details of the best year his company has had since 1930, and predicted further good results this year.

The story of the company's new summer sales program was told by showing a sound film produced at Hollywood for Standard of Indiana.

The feature picture, entitled "It's Up to You," portrays the success of an ambitious home-town boy in building up the business of a service station by using right sales methods. The film has complications with stolen car racketeers and a romance with the station owner's daughter. Hollywood actors appearing in the picture include Edgar Kennedy, Frank Craven, Ray Walker, Betty Blythe, Bryant Washburn and Maxine Doyle. Kennedy's comedy is a feature of the film.

By means of an 8x12 foot mural painting, the salesmen were shown how a large organization such as Standard Oil is able to offer more services to the public and does, and how these services form a successful business arch with the salesmen as the keystone.

Another feature of the meeting was the use of an "explosion demonstrator" to show how the new Standard summer gasoline burns. Omitting the compression stage which takes place in an engine cylinder, and flashing one full throttle cylinder of gasoline into the open, the device caused bright yellow flames 16 inches long.

A. N. Steele, advertising manager, presented his company's spring and summer advertising campaign which contains a new idea in gasoline advertising. Steele pointed out that, as usual, Standard will concentrate on newspaper space, using 1500 daily and weekly newspapers in 13 Middle Western states.

The annual joint conference and banquet for officers and employ representatives was held at the Coronado Hotel Thursday night. Officials attending from Chicago included: Ball, H. A. Lewis, assistant general sales manager; H. L. Porter, sales promoter; J. J. Babb, head of retail sales; C. G. Kuster, technical division; A. N. Steele, advertising manager; J. W. Curry, director of industrial relations, and H. W. King, assistant director of industrial relations.

Noted Country Doctor Gets Specially Fitted Car for Work in Canada

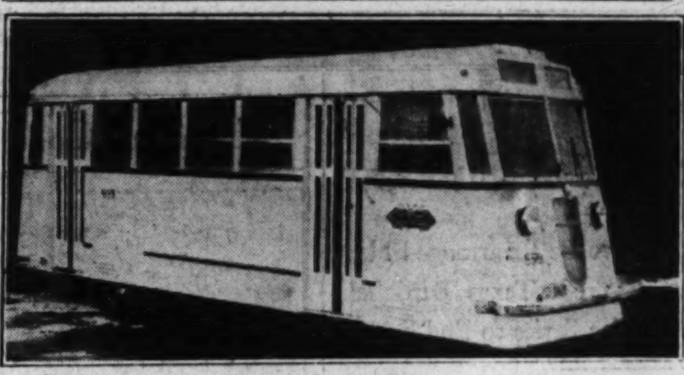
Allan Roy Dafoe, the world's most famous country doctor, went to Oshawa, Ontario, recently and drove back to Callander and his Dionne quintuplets in a new car—a Chevrolet coach. The delivery was made by the doctor's host, R. S. MacLaughlin, president of General Motors of Canada.

It was Dr. Dafoe's seventh automobile since he abandoned his horse and buggy 20 years ago. It has every accessory designed for the comfort and convenience of the doctor on his long lonely trips in the North Country. It has an electric clock and an electric defroster, an efficient heater, double visors and windshield wipers, a radio, and other devices that were never dreamed of when the doctor bought his first motor car.

The doctor selected a coach because, he said the wide doors make it easy to load and unload his medicine and instrument cases, and because he wants "plenty of room for friends."

His new Chevrolet will comfortably accommodate the doctor and five little friends and their nurse.

New Type of Light Bus



Engineers of the Detroit Street Railway Commission designed this modern bus, which is being considered as a model for extensive replacements of buses in Detroit. Mounted on a Ford V-8 chassis body is made of aluminum alloys, so it is 1000 lbs. lighter than the units it will replace, though it carries one more passenger. Its light weight is expected to lower operating costs and make handling easier and permit faster schedules. The interior was designed for passenger comfort. Steps reach almost to curb level, aisles are wide, and ventilation is provided by slotted air shafts in the ceiling.

Latest Mode in Motor Busses.

One type of three-deck motor bus in Rome, Italy, provides a smoking compartment and special accommodations for dogs. It carries 88 persons.

Here's Why HUDSON Performance Is Unmatched By Any Other Eight

"Best performing car at any price!"

It can be MEASURED before you spend your money

. . . just like horsepower and wheelbase

Any new car feels great when you first take the wheel. That's what makes it so hard to decide which one is going to give you the best performance, year in and year out. You can find out in a month or two—but it's too late to change your mind then!

Wheelbase, seat widths, leg room . . . all these things can be measured and compared. No guesswork is necessary. Horsepower can be measured, too . . . but power alone doesn't mean performance, as many a car owner can tell you.

But there is a way to measure performance—before you spend your money. The answer is HORSEPOWER PER TON . . . the amount of power to pull the car and its passengers.

More horsepower per ton means a car that will get away faster, climb hills more easily, give you more miles on less gasoline. It means less strain on the motor, less wear and tear on its driver's nerves. It means a safer car, because of easier handling and quicker response to your demands.

That's why the Hudson Eight, with more horsepower per ton—and smoother power—than any other car built today, is recognized as the world's best performing stock car. Owners will tell you it's so; the official record books prove it over and over again. And, along with this performance, Hudson owners report gasoline and oil mileage equal to small Sixes . . . and total mileages of 150,000, 200,000 miles and more. Some Hudsons are well past the 500,000-mile mark and going strong.

Why guess at automobile performance? Measure it before you buy with this simple rule of horsepower per ton. Then prove what the figures show you by driving a Hudson Eight. There's no better time than today!

Here's how you can measure performance before you buy!

This list, including all the best performing cars built today, shows how they compare with the Hudson Eight in horsepower per ton . . . the measure of car performance . . . and in price.

Groups Planning Auto Industry Drive For Safety Confer

Educational Work Reported on Includes Driving Courses in Schools.

Representatives of 14 groups which the industry is endeavoring to correlate in a broad safety education program met in Detroit the past week for the first public report since the campaign was launched Jan. 22.

One report concerned the work being conducted in the schools. Driving courses have been installed in a dozen cities, while Indiana is pioneering with a 20-hour mandatory course, first of the states to recognize traffic safety as an educational subject.

That the educational drive, taking form in lectures, motion pictures and literature, has brought results was indicated by a Government statement that showed fatal automobile accidents in the four-week period ended March 14 were the fewest of any like period in five years.

The Detroit conference followed by 24 hours the announcement of the industry's reply to Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper, who several weeks ago upbraided manufacturers for failure to remedy traffic dangers.

Paul G. Hoffman, president of Studebaker, for the manufacturers, showed, in theory, at least, that speed governors or slower cars would increase traffic congestion and hazards because of the failure to make available an emergency car speed for drivers. He also disputed Roper's argument that the industry had been derelict in failure to push uniform traffic laws or vehicular inspection.

Diamond Pin Presented To Cochran to Mark His 40 Years With S. O.

A diamond pin to mark his 40 years service was presented here Thursday by Amos Ball, general sales manager of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, to Harvey R. Cochran, manager of the St. Louis division headquarters of the company.

Cochran joined the company April 1, 1896, at Atchison, Kan., as station clerk. In 1898, he became shipping clerk and sales writer at St. Joseph, Mo., and in 1900 went to Kansas City, Mo., as sales writer. He worked in various capacities from 1902 until 1916 when he was made assistant manager of the Kansas City division.

In 1918, Cochran became the first manager of the new Saginaw, Mich., division. His record there soon gained for him the managership at Grand Rapids, Mich., and Jan. 1, 1921, he was made manager at Detroit. Dec. 1, 1922, he became assistant general manager of the eastern division, and Nov. 15, 1927, assumed supervision of the central division, with headquarters in the Chicago general offices. He was appointed manager at St. Louis Dec. 1, 1933.

Predicts General Use of Hypoid Gears In Automobiles Soon

That hypoid gears will be universally used in rear axles of American cars in the next two years is predicted by Col. J. G. Vincent, vice-president of engineering for the Packard Motor Car Co. The number of cars in which they are found has grown rapidly in the last year, he said, and plans for even more widespread use are nearing completion.

"Besides their mechanical advantages," said Col. Vincent, "hypoid gears make it possible to lower the propeller shaft of a car. This permits a lower car without the annoying tunnel or bump in the floor of the rear compartment."

New Pierce-Arrow Convertible Model Here for First Time

Pierce-Arrow's new convertible sedan-phaeton, announced as in production early in January of this year, has made its debut. It is the most distinctive sports car it has produced. The new model is available on the DeLuxe eight or the salon 12-cylinder chassis of 144-wheel base. The body is by Pierce-Arrow, luxuriously upholstered and leather covered in tones to match desired body colors. The car comes with or without a secondary wind screen, mounted in a well at the rear of the front seat. This secondary screen, providing for complete partition of the tonneau and the driving seats, is often desirable when the car is chauffeur-driven. When driving with the top down it becomes an auxiliary wind screen.

The top, when collapsed, fits into a special recessed well immediately behind the rear seats. With the top down the car is converted into a phaeton with an unbroken streatline from the radiator cap to the roomy luggage compartment.

The company is restricting the quantity produced and will build only to fill firm demands.

McKNOLLY NOW ZONE MANAGER HERE FOR BUICK

CHARLES McKNOLLY.

Who has been promoted from district representative to St. Louis zone manager for the Buick Motor Co., succeeding C. L. Alexander, resigned. His appointment was announced by W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager of the company, as one of several changes affecting the St. Louis, Chicago and Washington zones.

Shell Corporation Co-operates in Clean-Up and Paint-Up Campaign

In co-operation with Mayor Dickmann's Clean-Up and Paint-Up Campaign, Shell Petroleum Corporation is spending approximately $25,000 in St. Louis for repainting its buildings, trucks, equipment and signs, and in landscaping its service station grounds. Of the sum allocated for this campaign, approximately $15,000 will be paid out for labor, all of which wil go to residents of the city.

A large force of painters and laborers will be employed in an effort to complete the work as nearly as possible in the two week's period. This work is in charge of A. G. Hooper, paint superintendent of Shell Petroleum Corporation.

"Shell believes thoroughly in the value of a clean and up-to-date appearance of its representation," Hooper said, "and to this end we are employing a sufficient number of men to repaint all of our service station roof signs and trucks, together with the installation of new copy on wall signs and bulletin boards. A substantial amount of the sum to be spent will be for repainting all of the gasoline and lubricating oil dispensing equipment of the Shell dealers in St. Louis and St. Louis County, of whom there are approximately 250.

"We expect to continue the use of the familiar yellow and red tulip beds which have been characteristic of Shell stations for the past several years, and no small portion of the amount involved is to be spent for the landscaping of lawns and planting of shrubbery."

It is expected that with favorable weather this campaign will be completed within the period set by Mayor Dickmann.

Five Spring Shades of Colors for Cars Shipped by Pontiac

The Pontiac Motor Co. color engineers have adopted five new bright shades of color which are now being shipped in the current production of automobiles.

One is a brand new color, Santa Fe beige, while the others are new shades of existing basic colors. The new colors are designed to reflect the freshness of the spring season.

Colors retained because of their popularity are black, maroon and brown.

Changes in the shades of basic colors include the new Carribean metallic blue, lighter than the non-metallic blue it replaces; silver streak metallic gray, taking the place of the former non-metallic gray; Arno blue which is lighter than the previous dark blue and a deeper green called Neptune green. Cream color has been dropped entirely as a standard color.

"There is a vogue which determines the color of automobile finishes that is just as pronounced as the prevailing color styles of the latest spring fashions.

"In the art and color section of the corporation there is a group of color experts whose job it is to keep their fingers on the pulse of the public taste through constant study of the popularity of every color used by all divisions of General Motors and every competitive make of car as well as by an intimate knowledge of the style trends in men's and women's clothing, furniture and all other modish commodities," the company says.

Pontiac Sedan Makes 100-Hour Economy Run

A Pontiac six-cylinder sedan recently completed a 100-hour non-stop endurance run at Wichita, Kan., with an economy performance of 24.31 miles per gallon of gasoline, according to information received by the Pontiac Motor Co. from the Gridley Motor Co., which sponsored the run.

The sponsor reported that all driving was done in the city under normal traffic conditions which required skillful driving to keep out of traffic jams and maintain an economy record that would be expected only on open highways.

Plymouth Sedan Convertible Into Ambulance Announced

Ambulance service for small communities and isolated districts becomes available this week through announcement of a double-duty conversion type car just developed.

The new first aid car, which retains its usefulness and appearance as a normal passenger car when not required for emergency duty, is announced by the Plymouth division of the Chrysler Corporation.

Engineers have developed the Plymouth de luxe four-door touring sedan for quick conversion into an ambulance. By cutting away an inside section of the rear trunk, and dividing the back seat so that the right half may swing upward and be strapped to the ceiling, a large opening is provided to accommodate a special stretcher runway. This is of the folding type, and when not in use is easily stored in the trunk together with splint case, complete first aid kit and folding emergency stretcher equipped with pad and wheels. The stretcher locks to the runway to hold it securely in place during transport of the patient.

When the car is in use as an ambulance, the left section of the rear seat remains intact to carry an attendant. Metal hooks at the back of the right front seat slip into special sockets provided to support the end of the stretcher runway.

The change may be made by only one person in a few moments whenever occasion requires, and all first aid features become instantly available.

Motorists Use Radiophone.

A radiotelephone is being used in Rome, Italy, enabling a motorist to make calls while on the road. It uses microwaves and signals are picked up at a central point, where the caller is connected with the number he wants.

Star Square Stores Distributing Pullman Graphited Motor Oil

The Star Square Stores have been appointed exclusive distributer of the new Pullman graphited motor oil, which is designed especially to reduce friction drag and friction heat in automobile engines. The oil is said to lessen wear on moving engine parts and improve compression with resultant saving of gasoline.

It is said also to penetrate the metal surfaces, filling in scored and pitted spots and giving a hard, heat resisting surface. It is also further to provide a clinging lubricating film which prevents metal to metal contact.

This new oil is said by the manufacturer to be high quality, dewaxed Pennsylvania oil blended with other quality multi-filtered oils and processed with cooloidal graphite of microscopic fineness.

Various grades of the new oil are prescribed for auto engines according to the number of miles showing on the speedometer. Motorists are advised to use a certain grade of the new oil for breaking in a new car, and to change to a slightly heavier grade at 2000, 15,000 and 35,000 miles.

The latest estimated life of American-made motor vehicles is eight and one-quarter years.

DO-NOTHING ATTITUDE IS FEATURE OF STOCK WEEK

Explanations Are Not Wanting for the Timidity of Equity Buyers—European Political Developments Cited by Some.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 18.—In spite of generally favorable business news, the stock market picked its way gingerly during the past week.

On the whole, the advantage fell to the sellers, although volume of trading was restricted.

News from the trade and industrial front afforded cheerful reading to financial interests, even if it did not serve to send them into the market for shares.

The brightest records were turned in by the automobile industry, which had the best production week since the summer of 1929, and by the steel makers, who stepped up the output pace to the fastest speed in six years.

Additional planks on Wall street's bull platform were the more than seasonal expansion in the movement of freight and the continued climb in electricity output.

Shoppers at retail, it was reported, closed purses less tightly after the Easter buying whirl than was the case in the corresponding week a year ago, a symptom of increased confidence, analysts felt.

Action of Market Studied.

That these various encouraging factors failed to boost the stock market was the subject of considerable study and comment in financial circles.

Explanations were not wanting for the timidity of equity buyers and the following opinions were trotted out by seasoned observers:

Corporate earnings for the first quarter have been somewhat disappointing; the market has long been in need of a "rest," following its steady climb during the past year or so, and the cloud of diplomatic and economic uncertainties abroad momentarily has put a damper on buying spirits.

These observations they qualified, however, by a favorable view of the long haul.

Investment circles noted steadiness in bonds over the past week and pointed to the upswing of $130,000,000 in excess reserves to a total of $2,550,000,000—a sum, they hold, which spells a sturdy cushion of support for the loan market.

The push this week of many U. S. Government obligations to new highs for 1936 or since date of issue was examined in the light of the unwillingness of banks and other important holders to part with present holdings.

Decline at Week-end.

Securities markets tilted downward again at week-end as foreign and domestic developments apparnetly were less reassuring.

The stock list turned heavy following a sharp break in Johns-Manville on an earnings statement that was considered not up to expectations.

The major building material issue was weak from the start and finished at its low of the day at 102, off 10 points.

The rails, motor equipments and most other groups felt the pressure of trading sentiment that leaned toward the theory that it might be better to "run away and live to fight another day."

Losses of fractions to two or more points were general at the close, although support appeared for some categories in the final few minutes. Several New Year's lows were recorded in the retreat.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .7 of a point at 62.7. Transfers of 809,550 shares compared with 798,280 last Saturday.

First quarter corporation reports, on the whole, were interpreted as satisfactory, but there were sufficient exceptions to dim the ardor of some recovery proponents, and to again bring forward the question as to whether business improvement might not have been discounted at least in scattered instances.

A drop of 18.4 per cent in aggregate profits under the first three months of 1935 was disclosed by the first 10 reporting manufacturers of automobile parts. The recession was attributed partly to the fact that a few motor car makers have installed plants to turn out some of their own equipment. The second quarter for the accessory concerns was expected to make a better showing.

Tire Price Advance.

U. S. Steel cut its decline to ¼ of a point at 68½, but Bethlehem was off 1⅛ at 58½ and Otis was down ¾ at 15¾. The latter also reflected lower earnings.

Rubber shares failed to respond to a boost in tire prices by one of the mail order houses. Although Goodyear and Goodrich were unchanged, U. S. Rubber was down ⅞ at 31½. Firestone yielded a point at 29¾.

Indian Refining again bucked the trend by adding a point to its recent sharp advance at 12¾. This company reported a brisk expansion in earnings. Brokerage quarters, however, pointed out that it was a rather volatile stock in view of the fact that Texas Corporation owns 92 per cent of the outstanding shares, leaving only 101,000 for trading in the open market.

Hopes for another boost in silver prices may have helped some of the mining group. American Smelting was up 1¼ at 79½ and U. S. Smelting was 1½ firmer at 90¾.

Case lost 3 points at 163, and lesser recessions were shown by Eaton Manufacturing at 34¼, Briggs Manufacturing at 51⅛, Electric Autolite at 38, Santa Fe at 79, Union Pacific at 129½, Chrysler at 98½, Standard Oil of New Jersey at 63⅝, Sears Roebuck at 66, Douglas Aircraft at 63¾, Deere at 82¼ and Pullman at 43⅜.

Bonds pointed moderately lower and foreign currencies held to a narrow area in terms of the dollar.

Grains pushed to new seasonal highs at Chicago under the stimulus of more drouth news. Wheat was up 1⅜ to 2½ cents a bushel and corn gained 1⅜ to 1⅝. Cotton improved 10 to 35 cents a bale.

Commercial lending by interior banks was said to have been aided partly by the increased movement of farm produce to urban centers.

Day's 15 Most Active Stocks.

Sales, closing price and net change of the 15 most active stocks: Gen Mot 17,000, 67¼, down ½; U S Steel 16,900, 68½, down ¼; Radio 14,000, 12⅛, unchanged; Comwlth & Sou 12,000, 2¾, unchanged; N Y Central 10,800, 39, up ⅛; Chrysler 10,000, 98½, down 1⅜; Otis Steel 9800, 15¾, down ¾; Elec Pow & Lt 9700, 14⅛, down ⅜; Anaconda 8600, 38¼, down ½; Std Brands 8300, 15¾, unchanged; United Corp 7800, 6½, down ¼; U S Rubber 7800, 31½, down ⅞; Packard 7400, 10¾, down ⅛; Indian Ref 7200, 12¾, up 1; Bendix Avia 6900, 30, down ⅝; Am Wat Wks 6900, 23, down ⅝.

HEAVY BUYING OF COPPER PRECEDES PRICE ADVANCE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Heaviest purchases of copper in any buying movement for a number of years preceded the advance of ¼ cent to 9½ cents last week.

Total sales of 126,000 tons in four days placed consumers in a well-supplied position and business since then in the domestic market has been light. Foreign demand, however, was fairly active at steady to firm prices.

The March statistics, published during the week, revealed an increase in domestic stocks despite larger deliveries into consumption. World figures for March were regarded as indicating a balanced supply and demand position.

Other metals were quiet. Tin sagged somewhat under the influence of easiness in the Far East. Tin plate mill activity increased to 85 per cent of capacity and automobile production was reported to be increasing.

Sales of lead improved at unchanged prices. While sales of zinc were small at unchanged prices, indications of increasing consumption, based on larger shipments on old orders, were said to create a favorable outlook.

While the price for Chinese antimony in bond remained unchanged, the undertone was easy, with American grades lower in sympathy with decline in Europe and the Far East.

The further advance in steel ingot production to around 68 per cent of capacity was accompanied by fairly general demand for most important consuming sources.

COMMODITY INDEX AVERAGES

Other statistical data showing economical trend.

NEW YORK, April 18.—With the automobile manufacturers again setting the pace, industry continued in a sharply rising trend this week.

The Associated Press index of industrial activity advanced to 85.8, against 83.9 last week and 73.5 in the comparable period a year ago. The index has retraced three-quarters of its January-February loss during the past eight weeks with little indication of slowing down.

Auto output for the week was the largest since the summer of 1929, having almost doubled in two months. The steel industry operated at the highest level in six years, with the car makers, railroads and miscellaneous manufacturers accounting fo rthe bulk of the increase.

Total freight carloadings gained more than seasonably because of a bulge in coal shipments. Most other classifications declined.

Electric power production maintained its steadily rising trend with the index equaling the year's top.

The combined index, with its seasonally adjusted components based on the latest available statistics, and with 1929-30 as 100, follows:

	Latest Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Composite index	85.8	83.9	73.5

WHOLESALE COMMODITY PRICES.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 18.—The commodity price picture was warped again this week by weather conditions. Continued drouth in the great Middle-Western farm belt fostered a sharp rise in agricultural staple prices that more than offset declines in other parts of the list.

The Associated Press weighted index of wholesale commodity prices advanced slightly to 74.35 today, against 74.26 last week and 75.83 a year ago.

Agricultural and non-ferrous metal indices were higher on the week while industrial, food, livestock and textile quotations slipped back.

Most important contributor to the upturn was the wheat-led spurt in farm commodities. With much-needed rain still lacking, the farmer's principal cash grain—wheat—was up more than 5 cents a bushel.

Other grains, grown in much the same territory, responded in similar fashion to the possibility that crops would be smaller than early estimates. Cotton was higher as a result of too much rain east of the Mississippi and too little on the other side.

Stabilizing the price of domestic copper at 9½ cents a pound lifted this group, although tin prices dropped another fraction.

Butter's 4¼-cent slump on Thursday—about 13 per cent—was one of the sharpest on record. While a decline at this time of year is partly seasonal, the extent of the setback far exceeded trade expectations. This was due primarily to what the trade feels was a too-rapid mark up of prices during the past few weeks.

Despite bullish consumption figures published last week, pointing to a 16.7 per cent gain in world use and a 21.9 per cent pitckup in U. S. consumptnon, cocoa prices slowly gave ground.

Other changes among the important foods consisted of a minor improvement in egg and flour quotations and a 10-point reaction in lard.

Livestock prices were mixed; with lamb advancing, cattle dropping abruptly and hogs unchanged.

Industrial commodities continued in the narrow range that has held them since the first of the year, easing a bit.

Bituminous coal, steel scrap, turpentine and lumber joined the downturn while burlap and rubber were up a few notches. The latter, incidentally, is held to be advancing on April consumption estimates placing the total at about 48,000 tons—a spring peak that has been exceeded but three times in history.

The combined index, with its indices, based on 1926 as 100, follows:

After deducting preferred dividends in both periods, balances for common stock were 6 cents a share, against 15 cents in the 1935 first quarter. The decline in earnings was attributed to increased costs and low prices on one of its major lines. Complying with the request of the New York Stock Exchange made recently to all listed companies, Johns-Manville also reported for the 12 months ended March 31, showing net income of $2,095,044, or $2.09 a share on the common, against $1,072,461, or 73 cents a share for the 12 months ended March 31, 1930.

General Refractories Co., producers of clay and other refractory materials, with plants in the Mid-West and South, reported net income for the March quarter of $230,583, equal to 51 cents a share on 454,281 capital shares, compared with $197,802, or 50 cents a share on 394,255 shares in the first quarter of 1935.

The M. A. Hanna Co., investment concern, and owner of companies in the ore and coal business, with headquarters in Cleveland, O., reported consolidated net income for the first quarter of $430,373, equal to 26 cents a common share, compared with $422,317, equal to 20 cents a share in the March quarter last year.

This compares with $151,589 in the first quarter a year ago. The company offered its common stockholders as of July 16, 1936 rights for the purchase of additional stock which expire on Oct. 16, 1934. Earnings per share are therefore not calculable.

Budd Wheel Co., an affiliate of Edw. G. Budd Mfg., and producers of metal and wire wheels with a plant in Detroit, reported first quarter net income of $208,605, equal to 19 cents a share on 990,675 common shares, compared with $291,920, of 28 cents a share on 965,258 common shares in the like quarter of last year.

FINANCIAL BAROMETER.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Further gains in surplus reserves of member banks of the Federal Reserve system are expected as the Treasury draws upon its large deposits with the system. The surplus was cut about $1,000,000,000 from the 1935 top while the Government built up its balances at the Reserve banks, largely out of the March financing and tax payments. More than $200,000,000 of the drop has been recovered.

TRADE TRENDS

NEW YORK, April 18.—Trade trends follow:

CHAIN STORE SALES—March volume of 27 chain companies, including two mail order concerns, was $196,252,994, against $184,256,274 for March, 1935, an increase of 6.51 per cent, according to a compilation by Merrill, Lynch & Co., investment dealers.

GLASS—"American Glass Review" says the last 10 days have witnessed the first real influx of orders into the glass factories, "and the gains shown are in direct contrast to the usual seasonal trends."

HARDWARE—Following a lull in the previous week, activity has turned sharply upward again in the wholesale hardware market, dealers report. Seasonal items, including garden accessories and household electrical appliances, are reported in especially active call.

RUGS—Orders booked for summer rugs were a feature of the wholesale floor coverings market during the past week, according to reports from manufacturing quarters. Stores in New England and Midwestern sections were said to have placed large commitments.

SILVER—Current industrial demand for silver, says Poor's Publishing Co., "is of distinctly minor importance in comparison with its time-honored use as a money metal. Out of a normal world production of about 250,000,000 ounces annually, scarcely 60,000,000 ounces find their way into industrial channels."

WASHINGTON NOTES

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Daily average grocery chain store sales in March were estimated by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce to have increased 2 per cent in dollar value, compared with March, 1935. The same percentage of gain was recorded for the first quarter over the comparable period last year. Little change was shown from the February average.

Sales of confectionery and competitive chocolate products as reported to the Commerce Department by 299 firms for March increased $304,741 over the corresponding 1935 figure to $18,727,707. For the first quarter the total was $56,459,842, an increase of $3,660,692 or 6.9 per cent.

The Federal Power Commission has scheduled hearings for May 6 on applications by the Clarion River Power Co., affiliate of the Associated Gas & Electric system, for licenses to construct two power projects on the Clarion River in Pennsylvania at estimated cost of $41,000,000.

Imports of silver last week increased to $1,164,912 from $785,771 the preceding week. Practically all came from North and South American producing countries. Gold imports, as reported by the Commerce Department, amounted to $7,313,336 against $2,619,730 the week before.

New orders for electric industrial trucks and tractors reported to the Census Bureau by 10 manufacturers spurted to 299 in the first quarter from 166 in the corresponding period last year, including 13 for export. The March total was 93, against 62 a year ago.

SMALL LOSSES RULE IN BONDS AT CLOSE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Fractional losses predominated in all departments of the listed bond market today.

Trading was exceptionally light even for a two-hour session, the total turnover aggregating $5,375,000, par value, against $6,310,000 last Saturday. Sales of Government bonds amounted to $160,000, the smallest for any Saturday in many months.

As measured by the Associated Press averages, rails and utilities each yielded .2 of a point, the industrial and foreign groups each gained .1 of a point and there was no change in the low-yield group.

A balky stock market and a number of other factors made for further caution on the part of traders who have been none too sure of the immediate trend all week and have been lightening commitments in low-priced issues on the theory that a setback was needed to strengthen the technical position.

Corporate loans losing minor fractions to a point included Chesapeake Corporation 5s, Northwestern 4¾s, Illinois Central 4¾s, International Telephone 5s, Manhattan Railway 4s, Missouri Pacific 5s, New York Central 5s, Southern Railway 4s and Warner Bros. 6s.

Higher prices were paid for International Hydro Electric 6s at 42, St. Paul 5s at 20⅜, Cuban 5½s at 53 and Southern Railway 5s at 103½.

Among foreign bonds gaining fractionally were Argentine 6s, Australian 5s, Japanese 6½s and Italian 7s.

Only 13 Government bonds were traded in and of these nine closed 1-32 to 3-32 lower, two were unchanged and two gained 1-32 each. Longer term maturities were the most active.

WHEAT PRICES SWEPT UPWARD OVER 2 CENTS

Indications of Increase of Crop Damage Southwest by Drouth and European Political News Dominating Factors.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 18.—Indications of increase of irreparable crop damage Southwest and West, together with European political developments construed as ominous, swept wheat 2½ cents upward today.

In a rush of speculative purchasing the season's high price record for September wheat delivery was shattered. Official predictions pointed to rising temperatures in Kansas and Nebraska, and made worse from a crop standpoint the prospect that widespread drouth would remain unabated during at least the first half of next week.

Significance also was ttached to word that although a good sized wheat crop is expected in Italy this season, Italy is now buying afloat stocks.

Wheat closed strong ,at virtually the day's top prices, 1⅝@2½ cents above yesterday's finish, May $1.01⅝@¾, July 93⅞@94c, corn 1⅜@1⅝c up, May 63½@⅝c, oats ¼@⅜c advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 17 cents.

Not only did speculative demand broaden instead of subsiding as wheat values soared, but active call for wheat to be shipped out of Chicago at once was a notable stimulating factor. Total purchases of this character for the week were more than 900,000 bushels. Continued entire lack of moisture relief in drouth-stricken areas thrust the market aloft from the outset, and at no time was there any important reaction.

Eclipsing of the dollar-a-bushel standard for wheat in Chicago took place in short order, the market going to $1.01¾ for May contracts. New crop deliveries rose even faster than May, and reached their apex just before dealings were stopped by the closing bell. Some attention was given to an unofficial estimate current that six states—Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado, New Mexico and Nebraska—will produce only 199,000,000 bushels of wheat this season, compared with the Government's April forecast of 265,000,000.

Corn, oats, rye and provisions borrowed strength from wheat. Corn shipping business was active.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—May 98¾@99c, $1.03⅛@¾; July 90¾@⅞c, 96½@⅝c; Sept. 89½c, 94¾c. Corn—May 62¼c, 64⅞c; July 61¾c, 63⅝c; Sept. 61c, 62⅝c.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 44,828,000 bushels, corn 5,880,000. Open interest in wheat was 89,940,000 bushels, and in corn 25,645,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, April 18.—Influenced by drouth situation comment wheat sold up sharply at the week's final session, closing 2 to 2½c net higher. Corn finished 1 to 1½c better.

Winnipeg wheat opened unchanged and early was ⅝c higher. The close was ⅛c net higher.

Liverpool wheat opened ⅛d higher and closed ⅛d up.

Local wheat receipts, which were 45,000 bushels, compared with 31,500 a week ago (two days), and 58,500 a year ago, included 16 cars local and 14 through. Corn receipts, which were 46,500 bushels, compared with 205,500 a week ago (two days), and 303,000 a year ago, included 25 cars local and 6 through. Oats receipts, which were 34,000 bushels, compared with 34,000 a week ago (two days), and 26,000 a year ago, included 12 cars local and 5 through. Hay receipts were 1 car local and 1 through.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was 1½c higher. An order buyer took the only car of soft wheat offered. At the close No. 2 was figured at about $1.10½. Hard wheat was nominally 1½c higher. There were no offerings. Inquiry was fairly good. Corn was 2@3c higher. Supply was light. There was a good demand for yellow, but the white was slow and a few cars were carried over. Mills, elevators and feeders were the buyers. Oats were 1c higher. Supply was a little larger but was readily taken. Mills and elevators showed the interest.

SUBJECT OF MODERN DEMOCRATS TOLD AT FLOGGING TRIAL

Walter Roush Testifies Raided Group Sought Only 'to Clean Up Politics in Tampa.'

DEFENSE EXCLUDES EVIDENCE OF ATTACK

Objects Successfully When Witness Starts to Describe Victim's Condition After Beating.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BARTOW, Fla., April 18.—A jury in the first of Florida's flogging trials which has heard defense attempts to brand an organization of "Modern Democrats" as Communistic—subject to raid by police without warrants in their zeal to enforce sedition laws—was told by a witness today that the sole purpose of the "Modern Democrats" was to try to "clean up politics in Tampa" by electing city officials who would give the city an honest administration.

The witness was Walter Roush, chairman of the State executive committee of the Socialist party, one of six men participating in a meeting of "Modern Democrats" at a private home in Tampa the night of last Nov. 30, which was raided by police without warrant.

Three of the participants, Eugene F. Poulnot, S. J. Rogers and Joseph A. Shoemaker, were seized by men in automobiles outside of police headquarters, after they had been questioned there, taken to an isolated section, beaten, tarred and feathered. Shoemaker died of his injuries. The seven defendants in this case are six former Tampa policemen, charged with kidnaping Poulnot, and their former Chief of Police R. G. Tittsworth, accused as an accessory after the fact.

Roush and Charle E. Jensen, another participant in the meeting, who preceded him to the stand, were questioned at police headquarters also, then released. The only other participant in the meeting was a city fireman. It has been charged repeatedly prior to this trial that this man was a police "stool pigeon," who connived in the raid.

In Roush's testimony today he agreed with Jensen that when the six were taken to police headquarters the fireman was left downstairs while they were taken to the second floor for questioning.

Tells Aim of Organization.

The defense, which is strenuously objecting to the introduction in evidence of a circular setting forth the platform of the "Modern Democrats" was overruled by Judge Dewell when it objected to this question by the State "What was the primary purpose and moving force of the Modern Democrats?" "The prime purpose—the only purpose—was to try to clean up politics in Tampa." Roush answered.

"By what means?" was the next question. "By electing officers and executives who would inaugurate an honest system of management in Tampa," the witness replied.

Judge Dewell deferred until Monday his ruling on admissibility of the copy of the platform. The trend of defense cross-examination and objections has been to attempt to demonstrate that the "Modern Democrats" were "attempting to overthrow the Government" and that the police were justified in making the raid without warrant.

Defense Bars Flogging Testimony.

Defense tactics today tended to exclude testimony relating to the flogging, attempting to make the case end with the questioning at police headquarters. This was indicated when the witness started to tell of the psysical condition of Poulnot, whom he saw the morning after the floggings.

A defense objection that such a recital "would shed no light on the issue involved" was sustained. The State then developed that when he was taken to the police station—the last time Jensen and Roush saw him until after the floggings—he was in ordinary physical condition.

Referring to the scene at the house during the meeting, Roush related that he, Rogers, Shoemaker and Jensen were in the house when Poulnot arrived, escorted by the city fireman, who had recently become interested in the organization and acted as secretary at the meeting. The defense is endeavoring to force the State to use only this fireman to tell the purpose of the "Modern Democrats."

Details of Raid.

After the six began consideration of the by-laws, the witness testified, three officers suddenly appeared in the doorway of the dining room, one of whom he identified as C. A. Brown, one of the defendants and the leader of the raid.

"More burst in from the back," Roush related, "and we were lined up and Brown snatched our papers from the table and from out of Poulnot's hands. We were searched and our papers taken from our pockets. I had remained seated and one officer grabbed my shoulder and said 'get up' and went through my pockets. I heard Poulnot say: 'What is this? Are we arrested?' And an officer replied 'You'll find out soon enough.'"

"Poulnot said: 'You can't do this. These are my private papers' and an officer said: 'Never mind.'"

The witness continued that one of the raiders announced "Come on we'll go down to the station" and that another "took a-holt of me, grabbed me by the left arm and stuck his fist in my ribs."

After being driven to police headquarters, in the heart of Tampa Roush said an officer held him by the arm, led him to the desk where his name was recorded, then took him upstairs. Ie was at that point that the city fireman left the party.

Tells of Cries for Help.

The five "Modern Democrats" were taken to room No. 7, the witness said. Poulnot was then taken out by a policeman. That was the last his friends saw him until after the floggings and the same thing, the witness testified, was true of Rogers and Shoemaker who were the next to be taken out separately. Shortly after they had been taken from room No. 7, Roush said he heard "several cries for help which appeared to come from below."

Then Roush was taken into another room and questioned for a few minutes. Defense counsel attempted to prevent him from telling what was said, insisting a stenographer was present, the witness conceding that there was "a man making marks on paper."

But the State succeeded in asking: "Did the police ask you anything about the meeting at which you were arrested?"

Roush, an elderly carpenter, replied that nothing was asked about the meeting either at police headquarters or at the house.

No Warrant Shown.

Under further questioning, he disclosed that he was not accused of violating any law and was arrested by men who did not show any warrant "or other authority" for entering the house.

After being questioned, Roush continued, he was conducted to the door of police headquarters and Officer Brown, the defendant, drove him and Jensen to the scene of the raid, observing to another policeman: "You go on about your other work—I'll take care of them."

On the way he quoted Brown as saying: "You fellows shouldn't be mixed up with those Communistic troublemakers," and said he replied to the policeman that he was mistaken in his estimate of the organization, that its meetings were open and if he would attend them he would understand their purpose.

Roush, who said he had not seen the constitution of the Modern Democrats since the police seized it, said that after he reached his home he telephoned Mrs. Poulnot, wife of the victim of the floggers, and L. E. Shoemaker, a former St. Louisan, the brother of Joseph A. Shoemaker. Later, he said he called Chief of Police Tittsworth at his home but no one answered the telephone.

Visitors to Jurors Barred.

Tittsworth who before he became Chief of Police was an assistant solicitor of Hillsborough County, occupies a seat at the counsel table, the six other defendants, his former subordinates, grouped near him. All are smartly attired, appearing in different clothing nearly every day. Most of them went to Tampa for the week-end.

The jury, quartered at a hotel is guarded by three bailiffs who prevent any discussion among the jurors of the trial until all the evidence has been submitted and it is time for the jury of six to begin its deliberations.

Judge Dewell had told the bailiffs the jurors might have visitors over the week-end, a bailiff present at all conversations, but decided this evening not to permit that privilege.

LIQUOR DEALER SUES TO BAR LESSOR FROM COMPETITION

Objects Also to His "Main Entrance" Sign Over Store Between Rival's Two Doors.

A temporary order was issued yesterday by Circuit Judge John W. Joynt restraining Isaiah Sabbath, owner of a tobacco business at 1201 North Twelfth boulevard, from selling liquor in the corner of the building at 901-903 North Twelfth. The order was issued on petition of the Silver Creek Liquor Co., which operates a liquor store next to Sabbath's store.

The Silver Creek store has two entrances, one at 1205 Franklin avenue, and the other at 905 North Twelfth. It has leased the premises since one year ago, the lease to run for five years, at $10,140 for the entire period, with the understanding that Sabbath, who occupies quarters in the same premises, was not to engage in the liquor trade, according to the suit.

However, the petition charges Sabbath began to sell liquor in violation of petitioner's rights and exhibited a sign marked "main entrance" at the door of his store, which is situated on the corner. It was alleged the sign was designed to deceive and confuse the public because Sabbath's store has only one entrance.

The restraining order, which was made returnable Thursday, also forbids Sabbath to display the sign.

NO INCREASE IN STATE PROPERTY TAX RATE

Auditor Announces 1936 Levy Will Be 15 Cents on $100 Valuation.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 18. — State Auditor Forrest Smith announced today the State property tax rate for 1936 would total 15 cents on the $100 assessed valuation, the same total rate that was in effect last year. Notice of the fixing of the rate was certified today to the City of St. Louis and the County clerks of the 114 counties.

Two changes were made, the levy for interest and retirement of soldier bonus bonds being reduced from 6 cents to 5 cents on the $100 valuation, and 1 cent was added for payment of interest on State building bonds, making the total the same as the 1935 rate.

The property levies for 1936 are 5 cents for general revenue purposes, 5 cents for soldier bonus bonds, 3 cents for blind pensions, 1 cent for interest on building bonds and 1 cent for payment of interest on seminary funds and school fund certificates of indebtedness.

The total levy will produce about $5,685,000 in revenue, based on estimates that the assessed valuation of property in the State for 1936 will total about $3,790,000,000, Smith said.

The general revenue rate and that for interest on seminary funds and school fund certificates of indebtedness are fixed by statute. The others are fixed by the State Auditor, based on estimated requirements, except that the blind penson levy may not exceed 3 cents on the $100 valuation.

SUPPLEMENTAL INVENTORY OF E. W. FORISTEL ESTATE

Note for $30,000 From B. G. Brinkman and One for $49,996 Signed by A. B. Brinkman, Filed.

A supplemental inventory of the estate of Edward W. Foristel, attorney, who died in July, 1934, was filed in Probate Court yesterday.

Assets listed in the original inventory and also his interest in a law partnership placed the value of the estate at $38,500.

The new inventory listed a note for $30,000 dated Jan. 2, 1930, representing cash said to have been advanced by Foristel to Benjamin G. Brinkman, promoter of the Arena, who was adjudged bankrupt last year in Florida. Another note amounting to $49,996, signed by A. B. Brinkman, a relative of B. G. Brinkman, also was listed This note, the inventory set forth, was found among the income tax papers of Mr. Foristel, which he had charged off as a loss. The signer of the note said he executed the document as an accommodation and that no consideration accrued to him.

Oscar Habenicht, attorney for estate, said in his opinion neither of the notes was of value.

'CO-ED' UNIT TO SEEK FUNDS FOR SYMPHONY

70 Pairs of Young Men and Women to Solicit Professions and Business Firms.

Formation of a "co-ed" division of solicitors in the campaign to raise $135,000 for the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra was announced yesterday by the general campaign chairman, George Spearl.

This division will consist of 70 pairs of young men and women who will solicit contributions from professional men and women and downtown business firms. Cochairmen are Miss Amelia Overall, Miss Kate Davis Pulitzer, Miss Martha Love and Henry Hitchcock.

Spearl said the division was formed in recognition of the unusual number of young persons who have been attending the Symphony Orchestra's concerts.

Organization of more than 300 workers in the women's division, of which Mrs. Charles Mullikin is chairman, was completed yesterday. They will be divided into about 20 groups, each with its own leader.

The present campaign is the first to be conducted in behalf of the orchestra since 1930. Funds are sought to eliminate the $15,000 deficit which remained after the season just closed, and to finance the orchestra adequately next season.

Spearl said every major symphony orchestra operates on a deficit basis, because if ticket prices were advanced to meet the full cost of operation, many persons of moderate means would be denied the opportunity to attend the concerts.

The St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, Spearl said, earns nearly 60 per cent of its financial requirement. This percentage, he added, is higher than that earned by any other American orchestra in a city of comparable size.

The estate of Alfred C. Backer, a former miller at Washington, Mo., who died Feb. 13, was valued at $66,496 in an inventory filed in Probate Court yesterday. By his will he bequeathed his property to his widow, Mrs. Gertrude M. Backer, who is a niece of the late Mrs. Theresa Kulage, papal countess and Catholic philanthropist. Mr. Backer retired from the milling business 20 years ago and moved to St. Louis. He resided at 4103 Flora place.

CHILE NITRATE SHIPMENTS SHOW A STEADY INCREASE

Jump From 48,566 Tons in October to 150,776 in March; Heavy U. S. Imports.

By the Associated Press.

CRISTOBAL, C. Z., April 17.— Figures for nitrate shipments from Chilean mines through the Panama Canal to European and Eastern United States ports show a steady monthly increase since October, indicating, say experts, an increase in munitions manufacture.

From 48,566 tons in October, nitrate shipments climbed to 150,776 tons in March. Of this amount, all but three shipments were consigned for United States ports.

Only 14,100 tons were consigned for trans-Atlantic shipment to the Azores, indicating that Italy, a leading nitrate importer during the early months of her East African campaign, had dropped to a minor second.

By the Associated Press.

LAWRENCE, Kan., April 18.—Glenn Morris, representing the Denver Athletic Club, unofficially broke the meet and the Olympic records in winning the Kansas Relays decathlon here today. His point total was higher than either the meet or Olympic marks.

Morris turned in best performances in five of the 10 events, placed second in two events, tied for second in another, was tied for third in another and fourth in the tenth.

Clyde Coffman of Topeka, Kan., the defending champion, finished second.

Point totals of the other 11 entrants who finished the two-day grind:

Loyette Burk, Norman, Ok., 6498; Don Elser, Notre Dame, 6244; Elmo Hewes, Oklahoma, 6192; Eugene Teegarden, Warrensburg, Mo., Teachers, 6013; William Hemphill, Kansas State, 6010; Homer Leech, Missouri Valley College, 5982; Henry Mahley, Missouri, 5882; Ward Parker, Wisconsin, 5558; Forrest Marsden, Warrensburg Teachers, 5370; Walter Dingus, Ottawa, Kan., University, 5333; Robert Place, Missouri Valley College, 4905.

The meet and Olympic decathlon record were bettered by a sturdy Fort Collins, Colo., automobile saleman in Morris, a granduate of Colorado Aggies at Fort Collins last year. Competing in his first decathlon, he rolled up the impressive total of 7576 points.

Performs in Chilly Air.

The Olympic record of James Bausch, set in 1932, translated into the new scoring system is 7392 points, and the meet record, also set by Bausch in 1932, and similarly translated, is 7465 points.

The chilly air acted as a blast from a blow torch to Morris, who came to Lawrence with his arrival dimmed by the presence of such sports notables as Jay Berwanger of Chicago, Don Elser of Notre Dame, and Clyde Coffman of Topeka, Kan., defending decathlon champion.

When Morris won the 100-meter dash, the first event on the de-

BROWNS GET BUT SEVEN HITS AND LOSE TO INDIANS, 7 TO 2

3 HURLERS INEFFECTIVE; CAREY GETS TWO SAFETIES

By J. Roy Stockton

Rogers Hornsby's Browns are still looking for their first victory of the new baseball season. Steve O'Neill's Indians hit each of three Brownie pitchers yesterday afternoon for as many runs as the St. Louis Americans could make off Southpaw Lloyd Brown's delivery and the Cleveland Tribe ran away with the second game of the series, 7 to 2.

Brown held Hornsby's men to seven safeties and doled them out one at a time except in the seventh inning, when the Browns broke out in their only rally of the afternoon, turning three singles and an infield out into their two runs.

Three Indians Hits Triples.

Cleveland, on the other hand, collected a dozen safeties and again showed extra base power, the safeties including triples by Knickerbocker, Hughes and Pytlak and doubles by Knickerbocker and Vosmik.

Russell Van Atta, Merritt Cain and Jimmy Walkup were the Brownie pitchers and each felt the sting of the Cleveland bats. Van Atta started and four of the five innings he worked were scoreless, but in the other, his first on the hill, the enemy bombarded him before he could get his delivery under control and a pass and three singles in that one frame produced three runs and made him the losing pitcher.

Cain followed and was pounded for four hits and two runs and Walkup, who finished yielded three safeties and a pair of runs.

Solters Loses Fly in Sun.

Van Atta started by walking Knickerbocker and after Hughes flied out, Averill singled to right, moving Knickerbocker to second. Vosmik followed with a single to left, scoring Knickerbocker and that would have been the only run off Van Atta if his luck had been better. Trosky hit a high fly to left and when Solters lost it in the sun after apparently being camped under it, Averill scored and Vosmik reached third. Averill then scored after Hale's liner to Solters, which should have been the third out.

Lary started the first Brownie inning with a single to center, but that was the only hit off Brown until the fifth, when, with one out, Carey doubled to left. Giuliani followed with a pass and Pepper batted for Van Atta, but fouled out, and after Lary walked, filling the bases, West grounded harmlessly to Hughes.

Cain Hit Hard.

Cain then took over the pitching job and after he escaped damage in the sixth, and retired the first two men in the seventh, the Indians found the range. Knickerbocker tripled to right and Hughes sent a three-bagger to right-center. Averill then singled too hot for Clift and Hughes scored.

Carey singled to center for his second and the Browns' third hit to

Cards Idle Again; Hallahan to Face Pittsburgh Today

By James M. Gould.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

PITTSBURGH, April 18.—Just a month ago today, flooding waters of several angry rivers were in the business streets of this city and the weather was the chief stopic of Pittsburgh conversation. Today the flood waters long have receded, but the weather continues to be the main consideration and, in baseball circles, the comment thereon isn't a long way from profane. For two days now, the sturdy Pittsburghers have been waiting for a chance to see the 1936 Pirates in action against the Cardinals.

For the second day they were disappointed today when, peering through the darkness of a gloomy day, Pirate officials buttoned up their overcoats, sighed deeply at the loss of receipts and hung a "No Game" sign on the main gate of Forbes Field.

At that, the Cardinals "gained a few yards," for they did get on the field for a brief and very cold workout. The pitchers didn't expose their arms to the rheumatic breezes, but the other players worked out the kinks of an off day. Charley Gelbert was especially pleased to find that his bad ankle was considerably better and opined that if there was a game tomorrow he might be in it.

Pitchers Ready.

While he never has been faced with any shortage of pitchers, Manager Frankie Frisch finds himself with what the intelligentsia are prone to call a "plethora of talent."

His whole staff is ready for action. He had intended using Hallahan, Dizzy Dean and Parmelee as starters here, but may have to use only Hallahan, and he may not have to call upon Bill unless the weather here quits being so unusually "usual" for this time of year. Which, of course, means that he Birds, returning tomorrow night for a series with the Cincinnati Reds, starting Monday, will assuredly be ready for the Reds in a pitching way at least.

But Frisch and Manager Traynor of the Pirates are sticking to

DR. LAVAN, FORMER SHORTSTOP OF ST. LOUIS TEAMS, ILL IN HOSPITAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., April 18.—Dr. John L. Lavan, familiarly known to big league baseball fans as a shortstop, a member of the Cardinals and the Browns, today was taken to St. Mary's Hospital here for an abdominal operation. His condition was described as serious.

Lavan recently was appointed health commissioner here coming from Kalamazoo where his work in a similar capacity attracted considerable notice.

Lavan, a shortstop, quit baseball more than 10 years ago. His last berth was with the Cardinals. He broke into major league baseball with the Brown sin 1913 and stayed with them until 1927 when he was shipped off to Washington. The Cardinals got him in 1919.

Tintagel Improves, Defeats Hollyrood In Jamaica Dash

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Marshall Field's hopes of winning the Kentucky Derby soared today when Tintagel came through with an easy victory over three other eligibles, including Hal Price Headley's highly regarded Hollyrood, in a six-furlough sprint at Jamaica.

Although the race was run over Tintagel's favorite distance, the victory was scored in a manner that indicated the leading two-year-old money winner of 1935 might prove a serious factor in the one and one-quarter mile test at Churchill Downs, May 2.

At the finish, Tintagel held a length and a half margin over Sea Biscuit from the Wheatley Stable Hollyrood, second choice to Brevity in the Derby future books, was another four lengths back, a tired horse in his three-year-old debut. Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Clocks was fourth and Paul Junior, the only non-eligible in the field, brought up the rear.

Tintagel, winner of the 1935 Belmont Futurity in which Hollyrood was second, was the 9 to 10 choice despite his defeat in the Paumonok

$1,000,000 Too High for Heavy Bout, Fair Head Says

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 18.—The Joe Louis-Max Schmeling fight for the right to challenge James J. Braddock for the world's heavyweight title, may go to San Diego after all, despite unsettled financial terms, it was learned today.

Wayne Daillard, managing director of the California-Pacific International Exposition, said today that San Diego can afford to lose some money in promoting the fight but the $1,000,000 asked by Mike Jacobs promoter of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, is entirely out of reason.

The exposition, however, will make a counter offer Monday or Tuesday of a $500,000 guarantee and a percentage of the gate receipts with a showing to Jacobs of potential possibilities of a $1,500,000 gate Daillard added.

Daillard believes Jacobs will accept the counter offer. The exposition is said to have a week's option on the bout. Daillard disclosed that $250,000 in cash is already in a local bank awaiting transfer to New York and if Jacobs gives the word a similar amount can be raised in 48 hours.

Odds on Three Derby Hopes Cut After Victories

FUTURE book odds on three Kentucky Derby candidates were cut last night by Charles Burke, local betting commissioner, following their victories in yesterday's races.

The biggest slash was made in the price of Gold Seeker, which captured the Chesapeake stakes at Havre de Grace, his odds dropping from 100 to 40 to 1. The odds on The Fighter, which won the Texas Derby at Arlington Downs, were cut from 15 to 12 to 1. Tintagel, winner of a sprint at Jamaica, was reduced from 20 to 12 to 1.

Seabiscuit, second to Tintagel, had his odds cut from 100 to 60, and Delphinium which finished back of Gold Seeker was dropped from 25 to 20.

GOLD SEEKER WINS AT HAVRE

By the Associated Press.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 18—Gold Seeker, William du Pont Jr.'s brown filly, showed her heels to nine colts, all Derby or Preakness candidates, to win the mile and a sixteenth Chesapeake Stakes today by a length and a half over Brookmeade Stable's Delphinium.

Bomar Stable's Grand Slam was third, and Wheatley Stable's Teufel, fourth.

Du Pont's Derby hopeful from his Fox catcher farm string came up on the stretch to win in a great finish. The daughter of Messenger out of Golden Fair made the distance in 1:46 1-5 on a fast track.

So little did the bettors in the crowd of 20,000 think of the filly's chances to win that she paid $26.40 for $2 in the mutuels. Her winner's share of the $10,000 added purse was $8425.

C. V. Whitney's Bright Plumage, favorite in the betting, wound up fifth.

The other finishers in order were Bright Light, Challephen, Postage

Time to Get Going.

THE Browns are due for a jubilee celebration in 1938. That date will mark the fiftieth year to elapse since a club bearing that name of the St. Louis Browns last won a league baseball pennant.

Not many organizations could survive 50 years of defeat; but the Browns have carried on, losing pennants in three leagues during that time—the American Association, the National and the American.

Since the St. Louis Browns joined the American League, the club has failed 34 times to win a flag! Only rarely has it made a bid for the pennant. The first year the Browns joined the American League, 1902, they made a noise like winner, but finished second.

In 1908, with a team of fading veterans, the Browns set a hot pace until August and then began to fade. Fourth was the best they could do although the club cleared $168,000 in profits for Bob Hedges.

Once We Came Close.

IN 1922 Phil Ball's Brownies missed the flag by one game, the closest they ever came. And since that time the club has been doing a gradual fadeout.

The history of the Browns in the American League shows it finished second twice, third three times, fourth four times, fifth and sixth seven times each, seventh six times and last five times!

The club earned this notation in the Little Red Book of Baseball: "Only Club that never won a major league pennant—The St. Louis Browns."

Such is the depth of our ignominy that we seem destined to celebrate it with a jubilee, two years hence, unless somebody buys the Browns out of their bondage to an estate.

Who'll Buy Our Brownies?

THAT the club will not long continue under its present auspices is the hope of local fans, many of whom are waiting for a chance to cheer a really repre-

UNIVERSITY CITY EASY VICTOR IN TRIANGULAR TRACK MEET

NORMANDY IS SECOND, WITH THIRD GOING TO ST. LOUIS U. HIGH

University City High School, held by friends and foes alike as having the best high school track team in the district this year, added another victory to its credit yesterday by defeating St. Louis U. High and Normandy High in a triangular meet on the University City High field.

The winning team scored 166 5-6 points, University City athletes in the senior division scoring 85 and the juniors 81 5-6. Normandy, second, scored a total of 81 2-3 points, the seniors accounting for 45 and the juniors for 36 2-3; while St. Louis U. High was last, with 48½ points. The seniors of St. Louis U. High scored 25 points and the juniors 23½.

University City, which just a week ago won top honors in the Maplewood relays, did not extend itself in winning yesterday's meet.

Finch Beaten in Hurdles.

Joe Finch, 120-yard low hurdles star, who skimmed the sticks in :15.5 to create a new record at the Maplewood relays, finished in second place behind Charles Eberle of St. Louis U. High, who equaled the :15.5 mark in yesterday's meet.

In the relay event, which found Multin, Leutwiler, Buser and Schaum passing the baton, Coach Henry Schemmers made his team take a 30-foot handicap in order to develop more speed from his aggregation. The boys overcame the handicap, picked up a lead and then coasted in to the final line.

Eberle of St. Louis U. High was the standout of the meet in individual performance, showing a first in the low hurdles and then sailing over the 200-yard high hurdles for another first. He moved over to the field events and took an easy first in the broad jump with a leap of 19 feet, 2½ inches.

Chester Schaum was the star of the University City sprinters. He won the 100-yard and the 220-yard dashes with comparative ease, registering a time of :10.2 in the century and :22.8 in the "200." Too, he held down a capable anchor position in the winning relay combination.

Schumitsky Stars in Field.

Field event honors weer fairly well divided among the three schools although several names drew extra attention. Schumitzky, for instance, bore the University City colors through to a first in the pole vault, and he tied for second in the high jump and in the broad jump. White of Normandy was first in the high jump and second in the pole vault. Ausseiker of Normandy was first in the discus and second in the shot put.

In the junior competition Brooks of University City scored 11¼ points to lead the junior individual efforts. He was first in the 100-yard dash with a clocking of 10.8, and was ahead of the field in the 220-yard sprint with a tmie of :24.4. His anchor post.on the winning relay team netted him additional honors.

MORRIS, COLORADO, CAPTURES DECATHLON AT KANSAS RELAYS

cathlon program, yesterday in 10:6 seconds, only three-tenths of a second slower than world record time, there was a lifting of eyebrows, but no suspicion of what was to come.

But when he followed with a fourth place in the broad jump, a second in the shot put, a tie for second in the high jump and a best time in the 400 meters to end the first day's competition with a substantial lead, the fans began to watch the young man.

Continues His Good Work.

With three stern field events coming up today, it was believed he would falter, giving Coffman, or Berwanger, or the mammoth Elser a chance to slip out in front.

Instead of faltering, he won two of the field events, tied for third in the other, won one of the running events and was second in the other. He earned a tie with 10 others by pole vaulting 11 feet 2 inches six inches higher than he ever had gone before, but fate evened that up by giving him a discus mark of approximately 135 feet when he has done 145.

EMPORIA TEAM BREAKS WORLD MEDLEY RELAY MARK AT K. U.

By the Associated Press.

LAWRENCE, Kan., April 18.—A sturdy Emporia (Kan.) State Teachers' College team raced into the spotlight in the fourteenth annual Kansas relays here late this afternoon with a world record breaking performance in the University distance medley relay.

Anchored by Archie San Romani, national intercollegiate mile champion, the Emporia quartet was timed in 10:12.7 The world and American record, held by Manhattan College, New York, is 10:14 and was set in 1933.

The race was close until San Romani took over the baton. In the distance medley the first man runs 440-yards, the second 880, the third 1320 and the fourth a mile. San Romani was unofficially timed in 4:12.7 for his mile.

Nelson of Oklahoma established a meet record of 55.4 in the 400-meter hurdle race, the first time it has been held here.

Glenn Cunningham, former University of Kansas runner and holder of the world mile record, won going away in the 1500-meter special event. The time was 3:57.1, comparatively slow. Cunningham was not pressed. He stayed midway in the bunched field until halfway through the final lap, then pulled up behind Glenn Funk, former Nebraska runner. About 100-yards from the tape Cunningham lengthened his stride and came roaring down the stretch to win by more than 20 yards. It was his first outdoor appearance of the season.

The University of Iowa, which cracked two records last year in the sprint relays, did not fare so well this year. It finished second to Nebraska in its heat of the half-mile relay, and third behind Washington and Nebraska in a heat of the 440-event.

Washington U. of St. Louis finished fourth in the University 880-yard college relay, won by the University of Texas in 1 minute 26 seconds.

Ed Waite, Washington University sprint star co-operated with Ed Jacobsen, of Nebraska, in giving the crowd one of the greatest thrills of the afternoon when they raced neck and neck in the 440-yard relay, the Bear star nosing out his Cornhusker rival in the last few steps. Although Waite broke the finish yarn, the event was run in heats and when the final tally was made Washington was awarded third place. Frank Wright, coming distance star of Washington, displayed excellent form in the 1500-meter race won by Cunningham.

Shikat's Title Claims Vacated in Missouri

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, April 18.—Garrett Smalley, chairman of the Missouri Athletic Commission, tonight declared world heavyweight wrestling title claims of Dick Shikat vacated as far as Missouri is concerned.

Shikat has been generally recognized as champion since a recent victory over Danno O'Mahony of Ireland.

Smalley said, in a statement announcing action of the commission, that failure of Shikat to obey orders to straighten out his managerial affairs resulted in the group's declaring the title vacant.

Early last month Shikat was indefinitely suspended for failure to fill a mat date in St. Louis.

In a hearing before the commission in St. Louis March 30, evidence was introduced indicating Shikat had several managers. He was then ordered to straighten out the situation.

Smalley said Shikat had "made no further report" and tonight's action was the result.

sentative American League club from this city.

The Browns, in fact, probably will not last out the current pennant race under the existing setup. There have been several nibbles by purchasers in the past, but the big bass has not yet taken the hook—if there is such a fish in local waters.

That there is anything immediate on the iron is denied by officials of the club and the trustees who insist that a satisfactory offer has not yet been received.

No Time Like the Present.

IF the club is ever to be sold, now would appear to be the time because the club is at low ebb, and yet is a better baseball club than it has shown. It has many real elements of strength and, with proper pitching, would today be a formidable factor, possibly a contender.

Baseball men figure that it would take $500,000 to buy the franchise and players and provide a reserve of more than $100,000 with which to strengthen the team.

Perhaps our Chamber of Commerce, which thinks enough of baseball as a civic advertisement to throw a banquet and parade in honor of the local teams, will do something about this matter.

To gather from the bouquets tossed so freely at the banquet a baseball club is a semi-public institution—and that's where the C. of C. lets itself into this affair.

NOT so long ago a group of St. Louisans had the idea of buying the Browns. The plan was for a number of business men to guarantee the purchase price of the club and then sell enough stock to interested fans to permit building up the team and making it more or less a civic proposition.

The plan seemed promising at the time, but premature publicity caused the downfall of the promotion. The present setup of the club renders hope of improvement unlikely. That the club will last the season out under present conditions is improbable.

A Winner Would Pay.

WHILE many baseball men look askance at the possibility of TWO baseball teams succeeding simultaneously in St. Louis, others profess to believe that the Browns, at a reasonable price, say $350,000, could be made a paying proposition.

And, after all, the two team proposition is not a matter of this or that city, but of the quality of the two clubs. New York and Chicago have both shown indifference to a losing team, while favoring a winner. Philadelphia, the next largest city, has done nothing much for either winner or loser.

St. Louis has in the past shown that it will patronize a successful club; and if it does so for one, why not two?

If the Browns ever reach a contending position for the pennant, our guess is that they'll do as well financially as the Cardinals—and that's well enough to satisfy any investor, even if Sam Breadon does have his bad moments.

The Forgotten Man.

JIMMY BRADDOCK, the forgotten man, is sitting on the outside looking in. He's still champion, but every now and then we find ourselves forgetting that. To most fans Joe Louis is champion without title. Just a matter of time.

If Braddock has confidence in himself, he must be wearing asbestos collars. Otherwise he would become so hot under the neckband that mere linen would scorch. That's because nobody is giving him a tumble.

If he still can fight, Braddock ought to start out and go on a campaign of his own, clean up a little money and rehabilitate his reputation in the eyes of the ringsiders.

It's hard to escape the thought that the reason Braddock doesn't go out and try to capitalize his title by fighting is that he fears an early defeat may rob him of his chance at that million-dollar gate.

Jack Dempsey, Promoter?

JACK DEMPSEY, reports say, is going into the fight promotion business. At least he is credited with being interested in a Brooklyn venture.

Jack Hurley, who brought the "Fargo Express" Billy Petrolle into the limelight, says that Bill Duffy will be Dempsey's partner in the promotion. A return match between Carnera and the Negro heavyweight, Leroy Haynes, will be the first main event, rumor says.

What Dempsey wants with the promotion game, when Lady Luck has been kind to him in surer ways, is difficult to understand. Jack has tried fight promotion several times—and then counted the cost. It was heavy.

On the other hand, almost every other kind of financial adventure he has attempted has prospered. Anything in which Dempsey himself figured, went over.

But boxing and racing promotions took him for a ride.

The A. B. C. of Bowling.

THE American Bowling Congress tournament, now ended, was what the A. B. C. officials consider a successful event.

In one respect it surely was. More teams, more money from entry fees, and a huge prize list of $108,000 make it certain that as far as red ink is concerned, there wasn't a taint.

Bowlers came thousands of miles to compete. One five came from Hawaii. And a good time was had by all. Almost everybody won some sort of a prize, from the booster clubs to the winning five.

But, after all, there are some features of the tourney that have always appealed to this observer as being open to improvement.

The A. B. C. event, in fact, is the greatest chicken-feed show of the universe. Imagine a gross distribution of $108,000 prize money with $1500 as the top payment to any team and no prize to an individual over $500.

With $108,000 to distribute, the A. B. C. could compel the attention of the world if its promoters offered $25,000 for the winning five, $15,000 for the high doubles and $10,000 for the all-events and $7500 for the high singles, and it still would have $50,000 to distribute in consolations.

Why fritter away such an opportunity in dribs and drabs, with a grand slam staring you in the face?

BILLIKEN NINE WINS, 9-4, OVER STATE NORMAL FOR 5TH IN ROW

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NORMAL, Ill., April 18.—The St. Louis University baseball team gained its fifth consecutive victory of the season here this afternoon, defeating Illinois State Normal, 9 to 4. Roy Scott, Billiken sophomore, was the winning pitcher. The attendance was estimated at 1000.

The Billikens got off to a good start, scoring one run in the first inning and counting four more in the fourth. The St. Louisans scored again in the sixth, and two runs in the following inning sent Dave Read, Normal pitcher, to the showers.

Scott held Normal scoreless until the sixth when four singles and a long fly to right field combined for two runs. A futile rally in the ninth gave the Illinois their other two runs.

Read had 11 strikeouts to his credit, and allowed eight hits. Box score will follow.

NEW YORK, April 18.—George Selkirk's ninth-inning single, scoring Tony Lazzeri from third base, gave the Yankees a 3 to 2 victory over the Boston Red Sox here this afternoon. They had tied up the game in the seventh with home runs by Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey. A crowd of 17,991 was present.

Fritz Ostermueller was the Yanks' victim. He had held the New Yorkers scoreless until the seventh with two hits. Then Gehrig and Dickey evened the count with their four-baggers. Fritz was found for eight hits altogether, six of which came in the last three innings.

Lefty Gomez pitched for the Yanks and scored his first triumph of the 1936 season. He gave up five hits and one of the Boston runs was unearned as the result of an error by Red Rolfe.

Barna Defeats English Player At Table Tennis

Viktor Barna, of Hungary, former world's table tennis champion, and his troupe of titleholders, will give another series of exhibition table tennis matches tonight at St. Louis University's gymnasium. The feature of the matches will be a doubles match between the world's champion doubles team of Robert "Bud" Blattner, St. Louis and Jimmy McClure, Indianapolis, and Sandor Glancz, and Viktor Barna, Hungary, former world's champions. In addition, there will be several singles and another doubles match.

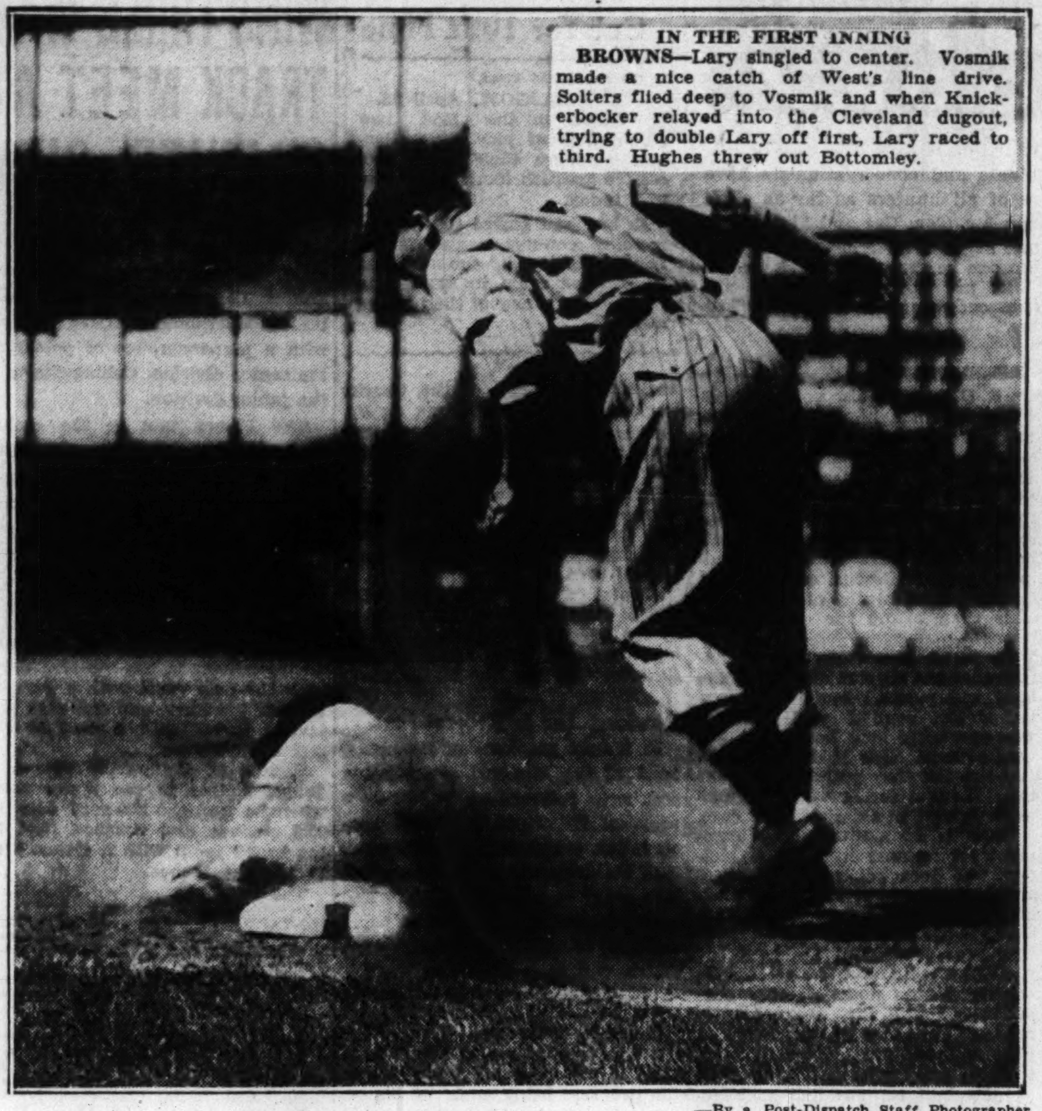
Last night, 548 spectators showed by their applause that they enjoyed the type of table tennis played by champions. Three matches stood out. The first was that in which Ruth Hughes Aarons, Stanford, Conn., the women's world champion, defeated Jay Purves, Chicago, former national champion. Miss Purves surprised Miss Aarons by winning the first game, 21-16, but could not keep the pace and lost the next, 21-15, 21-13.

As usual, one of the highlights of the exhibitions was the match between Glancz and Barna with long rallies and brilliant shots enlivening the play. The last match of the evening between Arthur Haydon, Englishtitleholder, and Barna was perhaps the best, with Barna's steadiness overcoming Haydon's drives to gain a four-game victory, 21-13, 14-21, 21-10, 21-17.

Other results

Blattner defeated Glancz, 21-13, 21-9; Barna defeated Richard Tindall, St. Louis, 21-15, 21-17; Aarons and Barna defeated Purves and Glancz, 21-11, 21-16; Tindall defeated Hayden, 21-13, 17-21, 21-16; Blattner defeated McClure, 21-13, 15-21, 21-17.

He Slid Into First Base and Landed on Third



IN THE FIRST INNING

BROWNS—Lary singled to center. Vosmik made a nice catch of West's line drive. Solters flied deep to Vosmik and when Knickerbocker relayed into the Cleveland dugout, trying to double Lary off first, Lary raced to third. Hughes threw out Bottomley.

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

Lyn Lary is shown sliding back to first base after Solter's fly to Vosmik in the first inning, but the effort was unnecessary, for when Knickerbocker's relay of the throw from the outfield went into the Cleveland dugout, Lary had time to get up and run all the way to third. He singled to get on base but did not score.

Cardinals Idle Again; Hallahan to Pitch Today

the pitching choices they made for what was to have been the first of this weather-beaten series. So, when and if there's a game tomorrow, Hallahan and Lucas will be the workmen, going as many innings as is possible before their arms freeze. If Gelbert can play, Martin will go back to right field and Ankenman will continue at short.

Won One, Lost Two.

At the moment, the Cards are down in the race with a single victory to their credit and two defeats in the red ink of the ledger. The records show that, in the three games they have played, Frisch's men have scored 13 runs, an average of four and one-third per game; have made 32 hits, a shade under 11 per game, and have made eight errors, nearly three per game. So, they've needed nearly three hits, 2.5 to be exact, for each of their runs. This is hardly a good offensive record in comparison for, last season, the Birds required only 1548 hits for 829 runs, or only 1.8 hits for each run. Eight errors in three games is not exactly the tightest defense, either. If the Birds should continue at that fielding pace, they would finish the season with 411 errors, which is 247 more than they made during the season of 1935.

Now, while the Birds were getting 13 runs and 32 hits with eight errors, their opposition—the Cubs as it happens—were making 19 runs on 35 hits with five errors. So, taking one comparison with another, it is not hard to explain the Cardinals' .333 percentage at the present time.

Help! Help!

While there isn't anything very encouraging in these very, very early returns, all Frankie Frisch asks is that Durocher and Gelbert get back in the game and that the team can play some games so that the "rounding-to-form" process can proceed according to plans. Frisch didn't especially relish the loss of the series to the Cubs, but he knows just how much—or how little—happenings in early games amount to and gives them just the deserved consideration and no more. Which, being translated, means that Frisch is worrying only about 1000 things instead of 1002, including those two defeats.

Some of the old-timers with the club are rather free in expressing themselves as wondering what the club officials are going to do about supplying a couple of experienced players for the couple of spots which now are occupied by inexperienced men. These veteran players are of the opinion that the team, properly protected, is able to win the pennant, but maintain that the Birds need a bit of protection right now, immediately and tout de suite.

Indianapolis Five Takes Lead In Elks' Tourney

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, April 18.—Nearing a tourney record with 3112 pins, Cook's Goldblume bowlers from Indianapolis shot into the lead of the five-man division of the Elks' National Bowling Tournament today.

They displaced by wide margin the Hollenbachs of Louisville, Ky., who, rolling on the first day of the meet four weeks ago, had held top position since with 2939.

The record was a 3166, shot several years ago in Detroit by a team from Watertown, Wis.

ST. LOUIS ELKS TAKE 8TH PLACE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, O., April 18.—Of the five St. Louis bowling teams that competed here this evennig in the five-man division of the nineteenth annual Elks National Bowling Congress tournament, only one quintet was able to cut in among the leading ten. The St. Louis Elks team of No. 1, of B. P. O. E. Lodge No. 9 rolled into eighth place with a three-game total of 2872 pins.

The crack Mound City quintet hammered out a 961 score in the opening stanza, fell back to 899 in the middle contest, but finished strong with a fat and fancy 1013.

Henry Summers and Carl Herman shared the high scoring honors on team No. 1 with a three game strong of 622 each. Herman started with a 223, dropped to 177 in his second game and followed with a 222. Summers began with a 188, sandwiched a 209 and wound up his series with a nice 225. H. Borgman contributed a 528, Bill White a 526 and Fred Linkel a 575 to round out the high total.

Team No. 2 of St. Louis may figure in the prize list with its 2733. M. Barth led the attack with a 597, J. Burle added 567, P. Ray 535, M. Geerty 504 and E. Schaefer 530.

St. Louis team No. 3 rolled 2524 to which George Wanstrath contributed 554, George Zesis 529, Charles Dewitt, 434, J. Shucart 516 and George Crugan 491. Team No. 4 hit for 2571 as William Cox shot 521, C. Summersby 511, R. Probst 439, L. Will 567 and H. Willcockson 533.

Team No. 5 rolled a 2196. Gordon rolled 497, Hickey 422, Hauser 466, Schlueter 386 and McGarry 425.

One team from the Missouri city failed to put in its appearance. The St. Louis bowlers are scheduled to roll in the doubles and singles here tomorrow afternoon.

White Sox Purchase Third Baseman for Delivery in 1937

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 18.

THE Chicago White Sox, already starting to build for 1937, today purchased Steve Mesner, 20-year-old third baseman, from the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast League. He will join the club for spring training next year.

Mesner is regarded as a brilliant prospect. He batted .351 last year in 151 games.

The Pacific Coast youth may succeed Manager Jimmy Dykes as third baseman, allowing him to direct the team from the bench. Players and cash were involved in the purchase, but the amount was not announced.

BEARS DEFEAT CONCORDIA, 17-7, IN WEIRD GAME

By Reno Hahn

Washington University and Concordia Seminary played one of their typical wild and wooly baseball games yesterday and after some remarkable totals had been made, Washington finished on the long end of a 17-7 score. The Bears made five home runs, Pitcher Steve Hopkins getting two of them. There were 17 hits for Washington and eight for Concordia. The winners made 10 errors and Concordia, nine. Hopkins had another odd mark to his credit, walking nine batters.

Hopkins' wildness was a help to win, for opposing batters never knew when he was going to get a ball over. He was constantly in trouble. But he never offered anything good to a batter and there was only one double off his pitching. As he explained it to Coach Gale Bullman, "I'm just playing with them." But his "playful" disposition had him in trouble in nearly every inning and most of Concordia's runs came after free passes.

After both teams had scored four runs in the first four innings, Washington began hitting and batted out four runs in the fifth and sixth innings and then just to make sure of victory, added five more in the seventh. During those three inings, the Bears made 13 of their 17 hits including five home runs and a triple. Hopkins hit two of the homers and Lynn Saunders, Capt. Byron Herbert, and Dave Blumberg the other three. Blumberg also hit the triple.

Alviero Iezzi took the batting honors with four singles in five times at bat, Blumberg had three out of four.

Byron Herbert stole second once, third twice, and home once on a double steal.

The victory was the second for Washington in the series for the city championship. The Bears defeated Eden Seminary, 10-6, earlier in the week. St. Louis University is also undefeated in play for the collegiate title having beaten Concordia Friday, 4-3.

Belleville Wins Four-Team Meet At New Athens

Belleville High School's well-balanced track team scored an easy victory over Lebanon, New Athens and Muscoutah in a quadrangular meet held yesterday afternoon at New Athens field. The conquest was the first major victory of the season for Hubert Tabor's athletes and their impressive showing stamps them as one of the strongest teams on the East Side this year.

Lebanon garnered 48 1-6, while New Athens was third with 21 4-6, with Mascoutah trailing the field with nine points. The victors' big events proved to be the 200-yard low hurdles as they annexed the first three places, while the high jump saw three Belleville athletes tie for first place.

Edgar Busch, Lebanon, was high individual scorer with three first places and one second for a total of 18 points. Busch's firsts were in the 100-yard dash, shot put and broad jump, while he was second to his teammate, Harmon, in the javelin throw.

OLD Father Time, as we've observed,
As well as youth must needs be served
When once he starts to town.
While pointing for a banner spring
He gave his trusty scythe a swing
And cut Tom Zachary down.

But Tom has been cut down before,
And always he returned for more
With an aggressive chin.
And started turning on the heat
To make his ancient foe retreat
And show he still could win.

Bob Grove, the ancient pitching ace,
Has started out to set the pace
For Cronin's costly staff.
He showed that with the best he ranks,
And into Joe McCarthy's Yanks
He eased the well-known gaff.

But age, as we have said before,
When Time comes knocking at the door,
May yell "Nobody home!"
A guy's no older than he feels
And to the kids may show his heels
Despite a graying dome.

In Friday's game with the Indians, Beau Bell bounced one off Hal Trotsky's shins that nearly put him out. However, to show there was no ill feeling, Hal came right back in the next inning and bounced one off the roof for a home run.

Tom Yawkey says one broken thumb isn't going to beat the Red Sox out of the pennant. But you can't go out in the market and buy another thumb.

The double fracture to Joe Cronin's $250,000 thumb was one of the costliest breaks of the game. But as Joe will still be able to manage he will not be a total loss.

Yawkey may be able to laugh off a quarter of a million dollar busted thumb but it will militate against his chances of getting a finger in the pie.

However, in shutting out the Yankees with two hits, "Lefty" Grove bathed the injured digit with the balm of Gilead. There are breaks and breaks.

COLUMBIA CREW DEFEATS NAVY BY A LENGTH

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 18.—Columbia, a crew that found only defeat last year, opened the Eastern rowing season with a surprise triumph over the Navy here today, whipping the Sailors by more than a length over a one and one-half mile course.

The Columbia Jayvees outstroked the Middies by a length and a half, while Navy scored its only victory as its plebes rowed to a three-length win.

The unexpected triumph of the Varsity, the first time Columbia has beaten Navy since Coach Buck Walsh took hold here in 1932, indicated the big Blue crew, with five sophomores among its oar-sweepers, might be a factor in Eastern racing this year.

Columbia's winning Varsity time was 7:26.6, with Navy clocked in 7:30.2. The Columbia Jayvees, whose race was won in almost the same fashion as was the Varsity, took 7:29, while the Navy was five seconds slower. The Navy plebes won in 7:58 and Columbia was 9 seconds behind.

Trosky greeted Walkup with a single to center in the eighth and went to third on Hale's single to the same field. Campbell sent a short fly to West, but Pytlak tripled to left, scoring Trosky and Hale.

MODEL YACHT RACES IN FOREST PARK TODAY

The first of a series of four international class "A" model yacht races to select the St. Louis entry for the Midwest trials will be held this morning on Jefferson Lake in Forest Park, starting at 10 o'clock.

The St. Louis Model Yacht Association is sponsoring today's races, which will be held under the international rules. The Stix, Baer & Fuller trophy will be awarded to the winner of the series. The victor will also be eligible to represent St. Louis at the Midwest trials in Detroit during the latter part of June.

BROWNIE NOTES

IVY PAUL ANDREWS or Jack Knott will face the Indians this afternoon in the series final. Mel Harder is due for Cleveland. The game will start at 2:30 o'clock.

A Ladies' Day crowd of about 2000 women, 2500 cash customers and a few hundred girls, attended the second contest.

To bolster his attack against left-handed pitching Manager Hornsby moved Beau Bell to right, benched Ed Coleman and sent Julius Solters to left. It was Solter's first appearance of the season. He sprained an ankle during spring training.

Hemsley reported with a charley-horse and Angelo Guiliani was behind the plate.

Between halves of the fifth inning, Manager Hornsby was called to the plate by two gentlemen wearing ten-gallon hats and presented with a life-time commission in the Texas Rangers.

Van Atta walked the first batter in each of the first three innings.

The Last Word.

A woman's knowledge of baseball may not be as accurate as a man's, but nothing was wrong with the addition of a fan who was with her husband at the Browns' game yesterday afternoon at Sportsman's Park. Seated next to them was a Post-Dispatch reporter.

In the ninth inning, while the Browns were at bat, the following conversation was overheard:

HUSBAND: "Well, Lary played pretty good today; had two hits out of four times up."

WIFE "No, two out of five."

HUSBAND (Consulting scorecard) "No, two out of four. He walked once, and that doesn't count as a time at bat."

WIFE: "Well, he was up there batting, wasn't he?"

LON WARNEKE IS BATTED OUT; PHIL CAVARETTA PLAYS FIRST

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 18.—Driving Lon Warneke from the mound with a three-run rally in the eighth, Cincinnati nosed out the Cubs, 5-4, before 4720 shivering fans today. It was the Reds' second successive victory over the league champions.

The Cubs built up a 3-0 lead off Lee Stine, young righthander, for Warneke, but the Chicago ace, after having to work himself out of all sorts of difficulties in four of the first six innings, weakened in the seventh when his former teammate, Babe Herman, singled home two runs and then went to pieces at the start of the eighth.

Ernie Lombardi and Lew Riggs opened the Reds' tide-turning inning with singles. Goodman's grounder rolled through Second-baseman Billy Herman's legs for an error and Lombardi scored. McQuinn then singled to send home Riggs and Warneke was hooked.

Mike Kowalik, who relieved Warneke, saw his first pitch singled to left by Myers, Goodman scoring the winning run.

The Cubs filled the bases with one out in the ninth. Cavarretta singled at the start and Don Brennan was sent to the mound for Cincinnati to relieve Emmett Nelson. After Hack had sacrificed, Brennan walked both Pinch-Hitters O'Dea and Gill. but Galan grounded into a fast double play to end the game.

Demaree's single, Cavarretta's double and an infield out scored the first Cub run off Stine in the second, while Klein singled home Galan and Herman.

A. A. U. BOXING TOURNEY ECLIPSED IN AN OLYMPIC YEAR

DRASTIC STEPS CONSIDERED BY OFFICIALS TO SAVE THE EVENT

By W. J. McGoogan.

There is a growing undercurrent of opinion among many A. A. U. boxing officials that the national tournament has to be changed considerably because of competition from the numerous "Golden Gloves" affairs throughout the country which have relegated the national championships to a position of minor importance in many particulars.

The tournament just concluded at Cleveland which saw a record number of entries, did not attract the attendance officials feel the event merits. Also many real outstanding boys were held out because they already had qualified for the Olympic trials to be held in Chicago next month and there was no point in running the risk of injury in the national.

Then the New York Golden Gloves team, comprising the best boys of that district, didn't enter at all because they were at Pompton Lakes, N. J., in training for their forthcoming trip to England to meet a team of British amateurs.

Title of Secondary Importance.

Milton Shivers, Detroit Negro middleweight, declared by observers to be a second Joe Louis, was advised not to participate "because his place in the Olympic trials was safe" and the same thing was true of Ted Kara, fine little Cleveland featherweight, who defeated Paul Spica in the Western Golden Gloves finals in Chicago.

If these things are true, what place is left for the national in an Olympic year, it is asked. Why go to the tremendous amount of labor involved in holding the tournament if the championships mean less than Golden Gloves titles?

The attendance at Cleveland was a great disappointment. The city bid against St. Louis for the event and got it largely because there was some dissatisfaction with the revenue derived from the 1934 and the 1935 tournaments in St. Louis. Last year the total receipts were in excess of $12,000 but that figure was not approached at Cleveland.

Earlier Date Suggested.

This, or even the much better gate of last year, when contrasted to the huge sums which were customarily derived when the tournament was held in Boston, has given the Boxing Committe pause.

There have been a great many suggestions advanced. One that the event should be held in March and not in April, as has been usual at the same time the baseball season opens. Also that the Golden Gloves idea in the national be subordinated to the A. A. U. district trials.

With all of the complaints, though, there is no doubt that the tournament is one of the most interesting events on the A. A. U. sports calendar. Its growth is proof of this fact.

Coaches and trainers, with their boys, gather from all over the country in the tournament city and for three days argue and fight, in the ring and out. But they all like it and many of them have been going for many years, generally at their own expense, in part at least.

There is Al Sandell from San Francisco, Tom Lockhart from New York, Roy, Davis, Chicago; Charles Brennan, Detroit; Tom Sheehan from Boston, among others, who annually conduct the teams of their associations.

But if it has any fault, it is its seriousness. The boys are so anxious to win that they have little thought for anything else. Seldom do you see a smile on the face of any of the contestants. And their handlers are the same.

Planning for Next Year.

Into the ring they go, flight as hard as they can for three rounds, then get out, the loser to go home and hope he may try again next year, the winner to rest a bit before his next bout. And too often, they stay at it too long.

Already they are talking about the 1937 tournament. Charles Gevecker, president of the Ozark A. A. U., was approached on the question of taking it back to St. Louis. One association representative told him he would throw his vote to St. Louis if Gevecker would agree to help him get the 1939 event. That was a California man and that State, for some reason, is very anxious to hold the national in '39. Gevecker said, however, he would not discuss the question until the national convention in December, when the tournament for next year will be awarded.

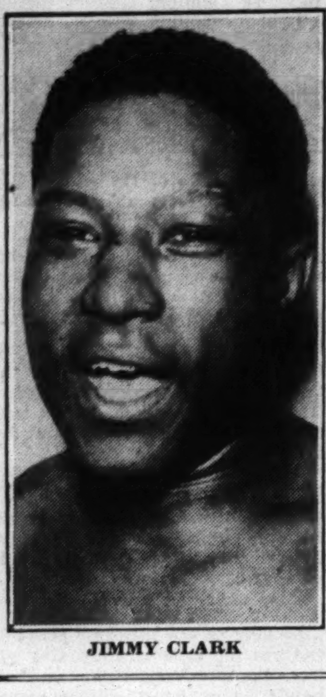
Clark a Standout.

The champions crowned at Cleveland did not measure up at all to title holders of past years, generally speaking. Jimmy Clark, Jamestown (N. Y.) Negro, who captured the middleweight crown, was by all odds the outstanding boy in the tournament. He won in the 147-pound division at the Arena last year.

Clark is a Joe Louis among the 160-pounders. There was little doubt in the minds of observers that he could turn professional and cause just as much havoc among the middleweights as Louis did among the heavyweights.

In fact, it would seem that when a boy attains such a degree of efficiency in the ring as exhibited by Clark there should be some way to keep him from competing with ordinary amateurs.

160-POUND JOE LOUIS



JIMMY CLARK

He has scored nine knockouts out of 10 bouts in the last two nationals, which shows the kind of puncher he is. He is a terrific hitter with either hand, can box and is fast. Also they won't have to ask if he can take it, for in some of his bouts in the recent national he was forced to absorb a few blows, but he brushed them aside as though they were flie:

Clark seems a sure shot to be the U. S. representative middleweight on the Olympic team, although he weighs only 152 pounds, can get down to 147, the welterweight limit, and may elect to box in that class.

No "Dead Pan."

They will never call him a dead pan as they have Louis, either. He is a showman. Confident and cocky. If the crowd rides him for any reason, he will do everything he can to repeat that particular stunt so they will ride him the more. If not, he will go right ahead to win his fight. But he has no mercy on an opponent. He whales in with both fists, but apparently doesn't try to finish his man at the earliest possible moment. He likes to play with him a while.

Next to Clark, Jackie Wilson, six foot Negro, flyweight, of Cleveland, seemed best. But he is a freak of the ring. Imagine a fellow that tall weighing only 112 pounds. He has height and reach seemingly by the yards over each of his opponents, because most flyweights are little fellows.

Jackie will have to step up a couple of divisions very shortly, though. He is young and likely will put on weight rapidly in the next few years.

Poor Crop.

Aside from these two, none of the champions seems to have enough on the ball to get very far and it would not be surprising if none of the others made the Olympic team after the trials in Chicago to be held May 7, 8 and 20. Joe Church, featherweight winner, for instance, the boy who beat Paul Spica, is not as good a boxer as Spica.

Not that he didn't win the decision from Paul, for he did, but due largely to force of circumstances. He is a gamester all right with lots of speed and dash but little else.

Thomas Pallatin, South Bend, Ind., lightweight winner, could not hold a candle to Bill Beauhuld, St. Louis winner of 1935.

Leo Sweeney, Pittsburgh, welterweight champion, is only a fair boxer, while John Lasinski, Brooklyn, among the 175 pounders, is not at all what a national amateur champion should be.

Willard Dean, Shreveport, La., heavyweight champion, is probably the worst of the lot. He has nothing to recommend him except a fighting heart which carried him through at Cleveland.

MIDGET AUTO RACES WILL BEGIN MAY 5 AT WALSH STADIUM

Midget auto racing will be revived for the summer season at Edward Walsh Stadium May 5, it was announced yesterday by Earl Reflow, who will promote the races for Welcome Inn. Programs will be held every two weeks, Reflow said.

Work is to begin immediately, according to the promoter, on the track, which will circle the football field. The oval will be of the same size as the track which was used last year and which is being used this spring by St. Louis U. trackmen. It will measure one-fifth of a mile.

Most of the drivers who were on the programs last summer are expected to return.

A feature which Reflow plans for the summer season is intercity racing, with teams representing the various cities in the Midwestern circuit competing.

Among drivers whom Reflow has contacted are Jimmy Snyder, Ronney Householder, Pat Warren, Paul Russo, Marshall Lewis, Ted Hartley and Wally Zale.

BROOKLYN AND PHILADELPHIA SOCCER CLUBS IN FINAL GAME

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, April 18.—Philadelphia's nearly all native-born German American club is primed to meet the St. Mary's Celtics of Brooklyn tomorrow afternoon at Rifle Club grounds here in the second of the home-and-home series for the Eastern championship of the United States Football Association.

The initial game was played at Brooklyn last Sunday, the Germans coming through with a second-half rally to whitewash the Celts, 2-0, thus giving the Quakers a big advantage as they enter the final. Total goals will decide the issue.

The amateur Phillie aggregation, present champions of the American Soccer League, will field a greatly strengthened squad over that which faced the Brooklynites last Sunday when George Nemchik and Sammy McAlees were absent from the forward line because of injuries suffered in the Eastern semifinal against the Kearny Scots. Both players were reported fit by trainers after an examination on Thursday.

Youth which is on the side of the Pennsylvanians makes them overwhelming favorites to further increase the two-goal lead which they hold over the Brooklyn veterans.

International flavor will be added to the game by the appearance of seven players honored by selection for the United States team which engaged in the 1934 world championships in Italy and later toured Germany. These players who will be playing in the first Eastern final ever staged at Philadelphia are Joe Martinelli, Eddie Czerkewicz and Tommy Lynch of the Celtics. opposed by Hun Ryan, Pete Pietras, Bill Fiedler and Al Harker.

Air travel will be used in transporting the players to St. Louis for the first game of the grand final series against the Shamrocks next Sunday.

Another Public Enemy No. 1.

FOR years farmers, wild-life students and conservationists have known that the most destructive of all hunters as far as quail are concerned was none other than Mr. Tom Cat and his family.

But it remained for Dr. Rudolf Bennitt, associate professor of Zoology at Missouri University, to really bring out the full extent of the annual depredations of stray cats. Declaring that the cat is public enemy No. 1 for birds, here are some of the points he brought out in his recent address in St. Louis:

There are (estimated by survey) about 700,000 stray cats in Missouri, an average of 10 to the square mile.

Stray cats kill more than 12,000,000 birds of all species, in this state.

All natural predators in Missouri combined, cause less destruction of wild game than cats.

These statements will amaze many who have not realized that there is a steady supply and a growing total of vagrants of the cat family, the majority subsisting off of wild life.

By licensing cats, the investigators suggest, their inroads on game life can be gradually cut down.

So, put a tag on "pussy" and help cut down the supply of "killers."

Reasonable Hunting Beneficial.

DR. BENNITT also voiced an unusual thought when he exssed the view that there is a biological justification for reasonable hunting of wild game. In the course of his address he said that the posting of land and closed seasons will not increase game, pointing out that there are fewer quail in the closed Missouri counties and in the closed states of Iowa and Ohio than before the closure was imposed.

"It is an inexorable law of nature that the surplus over what the land will support must die," continued Dr. Bennitt" and this law was operating long before the advent of man. This is the biological justification for reasonable hunting. It takes for human use game animals that would die in any case.

"This is no manufactured argument for hunters it is sound biology. It does not refer to excessive hunting but it is true of moderate hunting whether for quail, deer, raccoon or fox."

Factors which Dr. Bennett thinks contributed to unsatisfactory conditions of wild life resources in Missouri included destruction of habitat, overkilling, illegal practices in hunting and fishing, lack of adequate refuges and management areas, of a continuous program of investigation and public oninion.

One thousand men wil be at work on the Lake of the Ozarks Regional Recreational Area on the Glaize arm of the Lake of the Ozarks, State park officials said last week.

This force of men will be used to develop the 16,500-acre tract into the Middle West's biggest and most highly developed public recreational area.

A total of 45 miles of new roads will be constructed within the area to connect with State and Federal highways and make accessible the 80 miles of shore line in the tract.

Working for a Referendum.

E. Sidney Stephens of Columbia, head of the Missouri organization seeking a referendum vote on a proposal to create a State conservation commission, last week said his organization had extended into every county of the State and now precinct captains were being selected to complete the machine which will seek the necessary petition signatures and get the proposal on next November's ballot.

Speaking before the Lake of the Ozarks Association at Camdenton early in the week, Stephens told of the progress being made by his organization, but said the expense of the movement, although State-wide, had thus far been borne by Kansas City, St. Louis and Columbia sportsmen.

Taste Test No. 3—Masters' Golf Tournament

87% vote for White Owl's Vintage Taste

AUGUSTA, GA., April 2 and 3—Do most men buy cigars by name . . . or by taste? That's what we wanted to know—for it's taste alone that gives smoking pleasure. To find the answer, we made a taste test among the gallery at the Masters' Golf Tournament.

We gave each smoker who made the test two unidentified cigars—a Vintage White Owl and another—representing the leading nationally advertised brands. No names . . . no familiar bands to prejudice them. Each man smoked both cigars—then indicated the one he liked best. 87% preferred White Owl with its Vintage-tobacco taste.

VETERAN SMOKERS—and there were lots of them in the gallery at Augusta—were quick to detect the better taste of Vintage tobacco. But you don't have to be an expert to appreciate a Vintage White Owl. Many young smokers find it the only cigar mild enough to suit them.

There's good reason for White Owl's mildness . . . the Vintage filler tobaccos are the mildest kind that grows. Once discover the better taste of a Vintage White Owl—and you're set for life. It's one cigar that never varies in quality.

MORE SMOKING PLEASURE . . . Today's White Owl is a double "best buy." It's a Vintage cigar—and it's larger, too. Look at this actual-size picture.

Compare White Owl with your present brand. Taste the Vintage tobacco—see the extra size.

Wherever you are, you can get the same mild Vintage cigar that won these taste tests. It costs but 5¢ at your nearest cigar store.

ON THE FAIRWAYS . . . at the tees . . . everywhere around the course at America's premier golf event, wherever the tests were made, the results were the same—in favor of White Owl's Vintage mildness and rich fragrance.

Sports writers, players, spectators, caddies . . . men from many walks of life joined in making the test—and look at the results. Over four to one in favor of White Owl!

TINTAGEL, THE FIGHTER AND GOLD SEEKER WIN THEIR RACES

CANDIDATES FOR KENTUCKY DERBY CAPTURE TESTS AT 3 TRACKS

Handicap, run over the same distance Wednesday. Hollyrood, third largest money winning juvenile last year with a victory in the Pimlico Futurity as his major triumph, was held at 11 to 5.

With George Seabo handling the reins, Tintagel lost little time in asserting his superiority. He quickly moved away from the fast breaking Sea Biscuit, also making his first start of the year, and at the quarter-pole was two lengths in front. The margin at the half-mile post was five lengths and he never faltered as he stepped down the stretch to reach the judges well in hand.

Hollyrood, which with Tintagel carried top weight of 118 pounds each, never was a contender. He broke with the field colt and Sea Biscuit but quickly dropped back to third place. He labored along in that position, failing to close in the stretch although he generally is considered to be better at a route than at sprinting.

THE FIGHTER WINS $15,000 TEXAS DERBY

registered his fourth consecutive handicap victory at this track with a 1:51 4-5 performance over the mile and furlong route.

It took vigorous urging by Jockey Alfred Robertson to push The Fighter in ahead of Rushaway, A. G. rn's Louisiana Derby winner, by a length.

In third position, a length back, was Holl Image, the Jack Carter gelding, which won the Arkansas Derby.

Stretched out in the order named were Butzy Hernandez' Lolschen and Flag Cadet, coupled as an entry; Doran, Milky Way Farm, sixth; J. L. Roberts' Tugboat Frank, seventh; and Sangreal, early pace setter, last.

The Fighter brought his winnings at the Texas Jockey Club track to $20,055.

Off at the head of the pack, he stuck to the inside rail, allowed Sangreal and Rushaway to ease ahead, then breezed along in third position. At the far turn The Fighter made his stretch bid.

From third he moved into second position, replacing the fast tiring Sangreal. Jockey Robertson turned on all the great colt's speed as they thundered down in front of the stands and sped past Rushaway.

The Fighter never has dropped farther back than third or fourth in running handicaps here and always gave the crowd its expected thrill by making his move coming into the stretch.

Jockey Robertson dismounted, rode to a public address system and told the throng The Fighter would be shooting for the Kentucky Derby prize.

The Fighter brought backers $2.60 and $2.10; Rushaway $2.10. There were no show payoffs.

GOLD SEEKER IS CHESAPEAKE VICTOR

e, Phantom Fox and Speed to Spare.

Four and one-half furlongs in :54, and her sixth consecutive victory. Those were the achievements accomplished in the first race by a filly which was so despised last August at Saratoga, that it was knocked down for $150. The little lady's name is Goldey F.

The little chestnut daughter of Tall Timber-Naharanna, ran under the silks of Mrs. W. A. Bridges.

A. G. Vanderbilt's Identify, five-year-old chestnut son of Man-O'-War and Footprint, his first start of the year, turned in a sensational performance to win the Calvert Handicap, the third race. Carrying 120 pounds and Leo "Skinny" Fallon, of Baltimore, this fellow ran the three quarters in 1:12 1-5, and whipped Singing Wood, the choice, by a long nose. Two and one-half lengths behind Singing Wood, in third place, was New Deal. He whipped Sablin a half dozen lengths for the show award. The winner returned $7.10 for 2.

It required a photograph to determine the finish the second, a three-quarter mile test for platers of the $3500 top and $2500 bottom variety. The photograph showed Heinie Neustetter's Night Sprite, five-year-old chestnut gelded son of Nocturnal-Dark Phantom, the winner by a whisker over Major Ral Parr's popular sprinter, Star Porter. Third money went to Portden. He was beaten four lengths by Star Porter, the favorite. The winner, an outsider, returned $58.60 for $2. The time was 1:12 2-5.

Wrestling Show April 27.

Matchmaker Johnny Anderson yesterday afternoon signed Howard Corrington, former A. A. U. middleweight crown wearer, for the feature match on the Clifton Heights American Legion Post No. 222 wrestling card at the Rock Springs Turner Hall a week from tomorrow night. Anderson hopes to obtain Milo Occhi, who drew with Corrington on the last Legion show, for a return match. Ray Villmer, a heavyweight; and Jack McAdams, Chicago light-heavyweight, have been signed for preliminary bouts, but their opponents have not been selected.

Gold Seeker closed fast after reaching a forward position midway of the home stretch and was going away after taking the lead in the last 50 yards. Delphinium, quick to begin, met a strong effort from Challephen at the final turn, but failed to withstand the winner when under a severe drive in the last quarter mile. Grand Slam secured clear racing room all the way and finished full of run. Teufel went prominently all the way and held on gamely in the closing drive. Bright Plumage, sluggish at the start, weaved his way into contention at the last turn, but was blocked when attempting to drive through on the inside in the closing furlong and was shuffled back. Bright Light was unable to threaten. Postage Due and Speed to Spare stopped, as did Challephen.

Rushaway, under strong handling from start, gave way to Sangreal after three-eighths, came again in the stretch, failed to withstand the winner, but held on well. Holl Image worked his way forward steadily, improved his position fast in the final furlong and finished strongly. Lolschen, never far back, gave way nearing the final quarter but came again in the last stages. Doran, unprepared at the start, made up ground in the drive. Flag Cadet showed little. Tugboat Frank was outrun. Sangreal used up in the pace, stopped rapidly after the fighter took command.

CHICAGO SQUAD TO PLAY LOCAL RUGBY TEAM IN CONTEST TODAY

Rugby, the forerunner of American football, will be on exhibition here this afternoon when the St. Louis rugby team meets the Garfield Park Westerns of Chicago in an inter-city match on the drill field in Forest Park. The game will begin at 2:30 o'clock and admission will be free.

A week ago, the St. Louis team went to Chicago and lost to an Illinois All-Star aggregation, 6 to 3. The St. Louis squad has hopes of winning from the Garfield Park team, which is not composed of All-Stars.

St. Louis will line up with Tarlton, Walther, Crossen, Purcell, Cherry, Knehans, Boyd and Joe Flynn on the scrum line; George Flynn at the scrum half, John Overall at the scrum three-quarters and Tupper, Peters, O'Brien and O'Shea at the halfback positions. Pribble will be the fullback.

Charley Peters, a halfback, knows how the game is played in England for he was a member of the Oxford University team. Tarlton, Walther, Overall and Tupper played rugby at Yale while Bill Boyd saw service at Harvard.

Chicago's probable lineup will be V. Leach, Coach W. Todd, G. Haycock, Captain J. Mullen, G. Jaedecki, W. Dolgner, J. Campbell and H. Jagger on the scrum line; N. Narramore, scrum halfback; A. Jones, three-quarters and F. Roberts, W. Campbell, G. Jones and T. Francis, halfbacks and J. Gartshore, fullback.

Jaedecki and Dolgner formerly played rugby in Berlin, while T. Francis comes from County Cap, Wales and E. J. Burrows, the Chicago club's president, from Munster, Irish Free State.

NEW YORK, April 18.

OGDEN PHIPPS, national amateur court tennis champion, today defeated his old teacher, the professional Walter Kinsella, for a $5,000 side bet.

Phipps, who has ruled the amateurs for three years, downed Kinsella in convincing fashion with scores of 6—2, 6—1, 7—5.

The match was played on John Hay Whitney's Greentree court with a crowd of wealthy spectators on hand. Kinsella is 51 years old, Phipps, 29.

TWO SISLER SOFTBALL PARKS TO OPEN FRIDAY

George H. Sisler, president of the American Softball Association, last night announced that the first of his softball parks—the North Side and the South Side parks—would open Friday night. Four other parks affiliated with the American Association will open later.

On the opening program at the North Side Park, are the Milius men's team and the Kroemekes' team. At the South Side, the Slack team will participate in a men's game, and the H. I. Clay team will engage in a girls' game. The White Ways, champion of the girls' division of the North Side last season, will move to the South Side Park.

The East Side Park will open April 26 with the Hufschmitt men's team and the Goeddes girls' team on the card. The West Side Park and the St. Louis Park will begin April 27 and the Maplewood Park May 1.

Sisler also announced that the American Association parks would continue using 60-foot base lengths, 35-foot pitching distance for the men and 30-foot pitching distances for the girls.

AZUCAR IS WINNER OF FASHION STAKES AT SAN MATEO

By the Associated Press.

SAN MATEO, Cal., April 18.—Azucar, winner of the first $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap a year ago, galloped off with the $5000 added Fashion Stakes today, winning the mile race in 1:37 3-5.

The big converted steeplechaser, coupled with Dark Winter as an entry of Fred M. Alger, of Detroit, came with a rush in the stretch to win by a head. His stablemate was second and Jovius third.

Bahamas of the Oaktree Stable set the pace, followed by Dark Winter and Nubs. As the field swept into the stretch George Burns moved Dark Winter into a slight lead.

Azucar, with Noel Richardson, of San Bruno, Cal., up, started his drive at the sixteenth pole.

The Alger entry paid $3.40, $3.20 and $2.60. Jovius returned $3.80.

CHICAGO TEAM WINS Y. M. C. A. SWIM MEET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 18—The Lawson Branch Y. M. C. A. of Chicago, leader throughout the two-day competition, captured the team title at the 14th International Y. M. C. A. swimming championships tonight with a total of 25 points.

The Chicagoans, taking second place in two of tonight's events, finished one point ahead of the "host" team, Brooklyn Central. Tulsa, Okla., was third with 17 points and York, Pa., and Huntington, Ind., tied for fourth with ten each. Three Pittsburgh teams failed to figure in the race; the Downtown and Allegheny branches scoring three points each and South Hills, 2.

Other team points scores included: New Rochelle, N. Y., 6; Buffalo, 5; Flushing, N. Y., 3; Bridgeport, Conn., 3; Jamaica, N. Y., 2; West Side, New York, 2; and Montclair, N. J. 2.

Downtown Y Wins 200-Yard Relay.

The Downtown Y. M. C. A. swimming team won the National A. A. U. junior 200-yard free style relay championship by defeating the Indianapolis A. C. and the Western Military Academy last night in the Downtown Y. M. C. A. pool. Timers clocked the winning team in 1 minute 41 seconds, a mark that did not endanger the pool record for the distance.

In the National A. A. U. junior swimming competition, cities bid for individual events, and the 200-yard free style relay was awarded to St. Louis and the Downtown Y. It was the only National title event scheduled.

The race was close, only a narrow margin separating the first and second teams. The Downtown Y team was composed of Dave Bartosch, Bill Heine, Harry Queensen and Ben Schaller. Indianapolis A. C., finishing second, was composed of Benham, Swallow, Ruse and Jordan. Swimmers in the W. M. A. quartet were Pettes, Johnston, Newberger and Chouteau.

BEAUMONT HIGH TRIMS CENTRAL, 11-9, AND TIES FOR LEAD

BLEWETT BEATS SOLDAN, 1 TO 0; M'KINLEY BESTS ROOSEVELT, 8-3

Beaumont moved into a tie for first place with Cleveland in the City High School League baseball race by overpowering Central, 11 to 9, with a barrage of extra-base hits in the third game of the tripleheader at the Public Schools Stadium yesterday.

The co-leaders each own two victories and no defeats. Cleveland was idle yesterday.

By reason of its importance, the Beaumont-Central game was the feature of the three games. However, from a standpoint of sound baseball, the morning game, which saw Blewett shade Soldan, 1 to 0, was the outstanding contest of the day.

McKinley hammered Billy "One-Hit" McHale of Roosevelt from the mound in the first afternoon game to win easily, 8 to 3.

Central Scores First.

Central scored first in the final contest of the day, scoring in the second, but Beaumont retaliated in the third with three runs to take a lead which it never relinquished. Four more runs in the next frame, plus one in the fifth, and two each in the sixth and seventh innings, constituted the North Siders' powerful attack.

Rallying late in the game, Central came close to sending the contest in overtime by scoring five runs in the sixth inning and three more in the seventh. However, John Lonsberg, Beaumont righthander, though faltering, had enough in reserve to check the Red and Black just when it seemed possible that Central might come through to win the game.

George Janz, who had hurled so brilliantly while defeating Soldan and Central, failed to go the route as the Blue Jackets' heavy bombardment, which included three triples and a home run, sent him to the showers in the fourth inning. Charley Huber, Central's relief pitcher, fared little better. It was simply Beaumont's day, for the Blue and Gold hitters had their "batting clothes on," as the saying goes.

Janz's First Defeat.

It was Janz's first defeat in three starts this year.

The morning game, in which Danny Peppers of Blewett bested Lee Griffin, Soldan's hurler, was one of the typical pitchers' battles which have predominated in the league this spring. For five and one-half innings neither team came close to scoring as Peppers and Griffin, both right handers, were equal to all occasions. Blewett then scored in the second half of the sixth inning by bunching two of its three hits for a run.

Jack Gold opened the inning with a line-drive single to center field. Cunningham flied to Rosenberg. On McCarron's ground ball to Harrison, the diminutive Blewett outfielder went all the way to third. After running the coun to 2 and 2, Gordon House sent a looping liner over Shortstop Colpi's head and Gold scored with the only run of the game. Pritzker popped to Smith to end the inning.

Peppers making his first start of the season, was touched for four hits while he also issued two walks and hit a pair of batsmen. Griffin, the hard-luck pitcher of the league, again hurled well for Soldan, allowing only three hits. However, his mates were unable to produce any runs for the second consecutive game.

Six-Run Inning.

A productive third inning during which it scored six runs on five hits, a walk and an error, enabled McKinley to break into the victory column for the first time.

Johnny Burge, hurling for the first time this season, came through in fine style for the Goldbugs. Burge allowed five safeties, while the McKinley nine was getting to McHale and Ralph Rauscher for eight hits.

Outstanding among the hitters for the three games were: Mueller of Roosevelt, Marciak and Connors of McKinley, Hertling, Blumentritt, Moran, and Amato of Beaumont, and Schneider of Central. Undoubtedly, the leading batsman was Harry Hertling, Beaumont outfielder, who had two triples and a single for his day's work.

74 BASEBALL, 87 SOFTBALL TEAMS ENTER MUNY CIRCUIT

A total of 163 teams have registered with the Public Recreation Department for membership in municipal baseball and softball leagues, it was announced yesterday by Director Frank Sullivan. Competition will not open until Saturday, May 2, and in the interim there should be 10 or a dozen more baseball teams and an even greater number of softball teams lined up. The present total of 163 is 40 short of last season.

Organization meetings, including the business of drawing up schedules and electing officers, will be held this week. The baseball league meeting will be held at Claridge Hotel, Thursday evening, and the softball league meeting at Sherman Park Community Center, Tuesday evening. This will be the twenty-fourth season of municipal baseball and the third season for softball.

The present enrollment of 87 softball teams as compared with 74 baseball teams marks the first time softball has surpassed its older brother in number of teams. Last season there were 88 men's softball teams and 97 baseball clubs, Park Department records show.

Efforts will be made by the Recreation Department and various league heads to accommodate any late entries, it was announced. Applications are received at Room 330 Municipal Courts Building or by Director Frank Sullivan in the Recreation Department. Baseball diamonds and softball fields are being put in shape in the public parks and playgrounds and Director Sullivan expects no delay in starting May 2.

Brundage, Who Has Heard of Olympic Fund, Calls for Cash

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO., April 18.—Avery Brundage, President of the American Olympic Committee, cracked the whip at his official family today to start sending home definite reports on the $350,000 fund necessary to get Uncle Sam's Athletes to Berlin in August.

The chief worrier over problems connected with getting the squad to Germany has seen plenty of reports relating that prospects for raising the huge sum are good. But, he hasn't had many mentioning actual cash money.

"Less than 90 days remain before the teams sail," Brundage said, "and I haven't been able to get together a definite idea of where we stand financially. If we are to have a full team, adequately equipped and accommodate, the fund campaign must have all possible assistance immediately."

Committees Must Operate.

The job, he said, is up to the official family, members of the various sports committees, the National Collegiate A. A., the Y. M. C. A. and the A. A. U. They must carry the cause to the public to aid the fund raising committees to get the right answer as quickly as possible.

"The committees for most of the sports have reported that they are confident of obtaining their quotas," Brundage continued, "but we need something more definite than that. I am sure the track and boxing teams will raise their quotas. However, I don't know so much about the other teams' prospects, and I have written asking for definite information so that I can prepare a report within the next two weeks."

Ah, a Mystery!

The great Randall's Island Stadium mystery failed to bother the Olympic chief a bit. The stadium, under construction in New York, has been promised for the final track and field tryouts July 10-11, but there are indications that it may not be.

"I'm not worried over where the tryouts will be held," he said. "We planned to hold them in New York because it would save money, but we can move them elsewhere if the Randall's Island plant is not ready. The track and field committee will inspect the stadium about the middle of June. If it is not in suitable shape at that time, the committee can arrange for a change. There are plenty of places available in the East."

WEISE IS WINNER IN JENNINGS MAT BOUT

In the feature wrestling match at the Corpus Christi Church at Jennings Friday night, Al Weise, 200-pounder, pinned Tony (Tornado) Schmitt, 198 pounds, in 18 minutes and 42 seconds, with a body slam. Schmitt led the attack during the early stages of the match but Weise's headlocks weakened him.

In other matches Fred Schmitt and Louis Cioleit went to a 15-minute draw; Joe Scott and Mike Schwartz battled to a 20-minute draw. In the boxing matches Bob Knapp scored a technical knockout over Leroy Melvin in two rounds; Frank Tippet gained a decision over Pewee Benny in three rounds; and the Andrews brothers, Ken and Nick, slugged two rounds for a split decision.

Construction of Buildings of This Type Has Not Been Remedied to an Appreciable Extent.

By Berry Moore

Evidenced by reports from realtors, renewed attention is focused on tracts in the county, west of the city, available at advantageous prices, contrasted with those prevailing in 1929.

The 23½ acre tract at the southeast corner of Clayton and Geyer roads, owned by Chase Ulman, is expected to figure in a new deal shortly. Fronting 1034 feet on Clayton and 942 feet on Geyer, this tract is regarded as essentially one for estates or for high-class residential development. An undisclosed client of the Henry R. Weisels Co. is said to seek it with plans for its development on an impressive scale.

Ulman received the land in part payment for the Chase Shops and Office building at the southwest corner of Maryland avenue and Park drive, purchased by Oliver R. Burkart, president of the F. Burkart Manufacturing Co. The warranty deed for this building carried $235 in revenue stamps, indicating a valuation of $235,000, regarded as rather conservative. The land is given a high valcation by virtue of its Clayton and Geyer frontage. In this deal Henry R. Weisels Co. represented Burkart and the Kempland Realty Co., Ulman.

The Weisels company, representing a client, also is negotiating for a 50-acre tract, adjacent to Clayton road. This tract is described as having decided speculative possibilities.

ATLAS TOOL ACQUIRES NATURAL BRIDGE PLANT

Manufacturing Company to Move to Four Story Building at 5147.

The Atlas Tool & Manufacturing Co., of which George A. Delf is president, has concluded negotiations for the four-story building at 5147 Natural Bridge boulevard, owned and formerly occupied by the American Laundry & Machine Co. of Cincinnati. Negotiations were handled by Cornet & Zeibig, realtors. The building was erected by the David "Purity" Jones in 1927 at a reported cost of $268,000.

Comprising 55,000 square feet, the building occupies a site having a frontage of 160 feet on Natural Bridge, with a depth of 172 feet to an alley. It has sprinkler system, elevator and electric crane. The premises also includes a one-story office building containing 5000 square feet. Additional equipment will be installed in the building at an estimated cost of $25,000.

The Atlas company now has plants in different parts of the city, which the buildings on Natural Bridge will replace.

This is the third expansion of the Atlas company, which was established in 1926 at 5707 Manchester avenue. The company manufactures tools, dies, special machinery and metal stampings, etc. It is on a national scale and maintains agencies in the principal cities of the United States. About 150 people will be employed by the company when it moves to its new quarters, possession of which will be taken within the next 90 days.

Other officers of the company include Erwin E. Delf, vice-president, and Marian S. Delf, secretary and treasurer.

The National Venders, Inc., R. W. Fry, president; the D. D. Manufacturing Co., James Rarick, president; and the National Slug Rejector Corporation, John Gottfried, president, associates of the Atlas company, will also be quartered in the Union boulevard building.

PERMIT VALUES IN MARCH WERE HIGHEST SINCE '31

Building, $78,120,344 in 215 Cities, According to Reports Received by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

The building construction industry in March gained by about the normal seasonal amount over February, thereby lifting the total value of permits issued last month at the 215 cities regularly reporting to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., to $78,120,344. This was the largest March figure reported since 1931 and was the highest total recorded for any month since September of that year. Compared with the February permit value of $51,559,661, a rise of 51.5 per cent is shown, while the increase over the March, 1935, figure of $45,063,852 amounts to 73.4 per cent.

The group totals of building permit values for the 215 cities for March, this year and last, together with percentage changes, are shown in the following table:

	March, 1936.	March, 1935.
New England	$5,742,219	$2,367,356
Middle Atlantic	22,127,180	16,072,374
South Atlantic	8,441,681	4,164,655

New York City	14,676,118	$11,447,168
Outside N. Y. C.	63,444,226	$33,616,684

A comparison by geographical sections reveals gains in virtually all sections of the country in contrasting the March expenditures with those of February, the South Central group showing the only decline. In comparing the March permit values with the same month of last year, all sections registered heavy increases.

Although slightly below the final quarter of last year, the volume of permits for the first quarter of 1936 eclipsed any similar period since 1931. The aggregate for the first three months of this year totaled $184,637,909, compared with $99,586,487 a year ago, or an increase of 85.5 per cent. Contrast with the $52,705,189 total recorded in the first quarter of 1933, when the building industry was at its lowest, shows a rise of 250 per cent.

Up 40 Per Cent in 37 States.

March construction records, despite severe winter and harsh floods, showed a total value 40 per cent higher than was reported for February and about 62 per cent ahead of the March 1935 volume. According to figures of F. W. Dodge Corporation covering the 37 eastern states March construction contracts totaled $199,028,300 as compared with $142,050,200 for February and only $122,940,500 for March 1935.

Increases in construction were shown for residential and non-residential building as well as for heavy engineering types. Gains over last year were well distributed geographically, with each of the 13 major districts east of the Rockies participating, except the New Orleans territory (Mississippi and Louisiana). Increases in construction as compared with February 1936 totals were shown for each district except New England where flood conditions were severe and in the New Orleans territory.

For the first quarter of 1936 total contracts for all classes of construction in the 37 states as a whole amounted to $545,871,300 as against only $297,761,500 for the corresponding quarter of 1935.

COUNTY ACREAGE PLANS LOOM IN REALTY MARKET

been closed for two tracts on Geyer road with W. B. Shelp & Co. Details are withheld in these instances, pending development plans.

A tract having an extensive frontage on Gannon avenue in University City is under negotiation, with tentative subdivision plans, according to real estate circles. The upbuilding of Gannon avenue has been of a superior order. Indications are that Gannon avenue soon will be entirely out of the market, so far as available frontage is concerned, with absorption accelerated by a renewed demand for sites.

V. C. McKenzie, real estate dealer, has purchased 106 acres at the northwest corner of Ladue and Woods Mill roads, supposedly for client. No mention of the consideration was made. Deals for various other tracts, notably on Warson, Litzinger, Ladue, Conway and Olive Street roads, are reported as under way. Speculators are said to be in the vanguard, obviously, with an inkling of advanced prices in the early future.

Residential construction in St. Louis County is in increased volume. The demand for homes on the part of buyers is well sustained, notwithstanding the large number of houses being built by individuals for their own occupancy.

A Reassuring Feature.

Another reassuring feature is the renewed demand for apartments, in response to increased rental returns. Construction of larger apartment buildings has not been resumed to an appreciable extent. While in ample supply, money for construction of buildings of this type is available only on a conservative basis.

Dreams and Ambitions

ALL COME TRUE IN

DAVIS PLACE

Clayton, Hanley, North and South Roads

Homes in Davis Place are ideal . . . expertly designed and built of quality materials. You'll enjoy the large yards, the extra garden space, the extra living room, the bedrooms, the rathskeller, etc.

Davis Place is a convenient place to live, too. Transportation is furnished by Lindell-Waterman busses and Service Cars, and by the Clayton, Olive-University and Kirkwood-Ferguson street cars. Stores are nearby, and the new Clayton Park adjoins Davis Place. Davis Place is also the site for a new Clayton Public School.

Despite all these advantages and conveniences, Davis Place homes are decidedly not expensive. Don't forget that building costs are increasing and that property values are rising. An investment in a home NOW in Davis Place will protect you for the future.

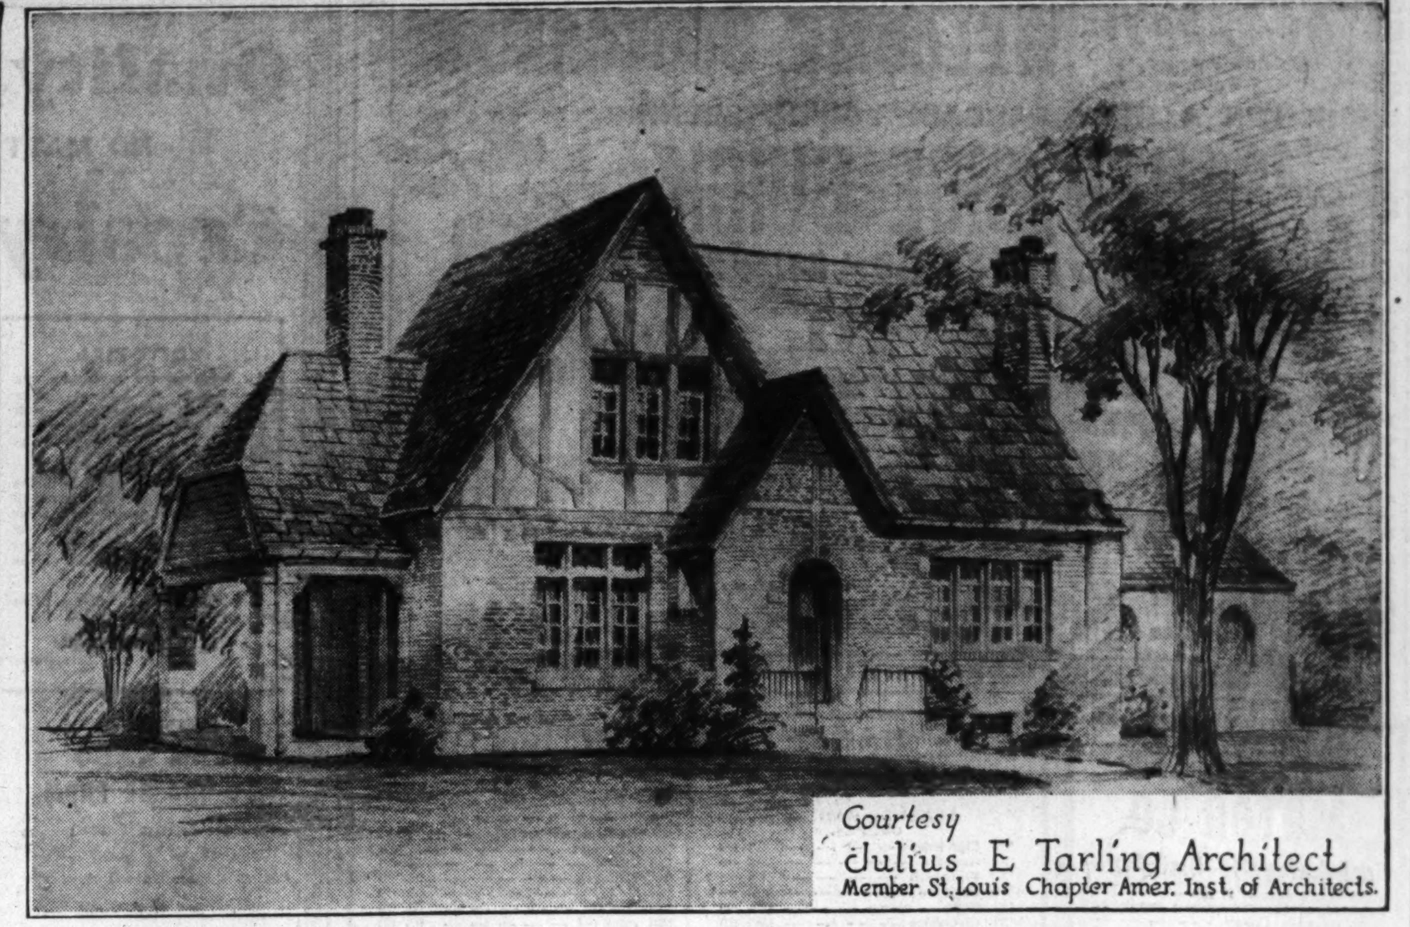
An English Type House Designed for a Corner Lot

Half-Timbered House of Brick Construction Takes Full Advantage of Exposures Made Possible by Shape of Lot.



Courtesy
Julius E Tarling Architect
Member St. Louis Chapter Amer. Inst. of Architects.

IN this age of the custom built the architect who does a good job of tailoring a house to fit our needs and particularly the plot of ground which we choose as a homesite deserves much credit.

Today's house is a small English type house of brick construction, showing half timber and stucco in the second floor. The grouped casement windows are typical of the style as is the arched doorway with heavy timber door and small leaded glass inset. The round arch of the doorway is repeated in the windows of the garage which forms the right wing while the timber motif appears again in the open living porch which forms the left wing. The roof of variegated slate in thatch manner and this with the two tall chimneys gives the final note of authenticity to the entire house.

THE house was planned for a corner lot, a triangular shaped piece of ground so situated that the side of the house as well as the facade had to be considered. Since most interest in the house centers about the living room the architect chose to place it where it would face the side as well as the main streets. It has three exposures and the open living porch on the west connects directly with the living room.

Triple casement windows break the north and south walls leaving the east wall for placing the larger pieces of furniture. The fireplace is of cut stone and beautifully ornamented. The living room has been placed below the floor level of the other rooms and this adds materially to the height of the room. The beams are exposed.

A LARGE dining room was planned with southern exposure directly across from the living room. The intervening space is occupied by a reception hall and a vestibule with coat closet. A service hall at the back separates the kitchen from the dining room. The stairway has not been featured and is purely utilitarian. The two-car garage is reached from this service hall.

The breakfast room has been purposely omitted in favor of a sunroom which may serve as a breakfast room or game room. The kitchen is large and has a closet and built-in cabinets. Closet space directly opposite the lavatory may be used for auxiliary kitchen storage.

THERE are two bedrooms and a bath on the second floor. The slope of the roof provides ample closet space here. The large storage space may be turned into a bedroom at a later time by adding a dormer which will balance nicely with the triple windows in the south bedroom. The upstairs hall is spacious and lighted by a window.

The cost of the house has been estimated roughly at 30 cents per cubic foot and amounts to about $10,000. This includes weather stripping, insulation, and the installation of a gas fired hot water heat system.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN

Questions Before the House

Q. I am laying new floors—quarter-sawed white oak. I want to give them as permanent a finish as possible. Some of my neighbors' new floors had to be refinished in a few months. I believe this could be avoided. The very light floors commonly used do not fit in with my color scheme. Shall I use a dark oil filler or a paste filler and dark varnishes?

Mrs. D., Dexter, Mo.

A. A colored paste filler would be more suitable for your purpose than an oil stain. Use a golden oak filler and when this is dry apply two coats of spar varnish, allowing at least three days to elapse before the last coat of varnish is applied. If you will wax your floor and pay particular attention to the spots that receive the greatest wear waxing these spots once weekly, your floor will not need attention for at least five years.

Glad you like the new page.

Q. Our house was finished just about a month ago and the surroundings look very desolate. What shrubs do you recommend for "foundation planting?" H. T. M.

A. There are many types that may be used. A mixture of flowering and evergreen shrubs is best since these are decorative all year round. Arrange them so they will enhance the architecture of your home and above all, be careful not to select "shrubs" that will grow into trees and blot out the light from your windows.

Q. I am planning to paint an old floor. Some of the cracks are quite large and I am wondering if you can suggest a good, inexpensive filler which I can use to fill them?

H. N. V.

A. Clean the cracks by running a wire along them and then go over the surface with a vacuum sweeper to get all the dust and dirt. Pack the cracks with sawdust moistened with enough glue or varnish to bind it together. Use a putty knife and fill the cracks well. Sandpaper down to the floor line when dry and apply your paint.

* * *

Q. My house stands on an elevation and I would like to put a stone or brick terrace in front. How shall I build it.

O. K. P. CLAYTON.

A. Build a retaining wall which extends below the frost line at the edge of the proposed terrace and fill the intervening space with crushed rock and cinders. Pack them well and then settle them with water. Lay a concrete base over this as a foundation for your rock or brick. We would suggest that you see a contractor about this because a terrace of this kind is apt to sink or buckle unless the work is done by an expert.

Q. I notice that the steps in my stairs are pulling away from the piece at the back of the step. What can I do about it? D. J. W.

A. Evidently the treads (or steps) and risers of your stairs were not tongued and grooved together. If it is possible to get at the under side of the stairs, they may be glued and screwed together. If possible, a central "carriage" should be installed. You had better call in a good contractor and consult him.

Q. Is it practical to replace ordinary glass with plate glass in windows with small panes?

HARTFORD ST.

A. Yes, it is. It may be necessary to increase the size of the sash weights as plate glass is a little heavier than ordinary grades. If you use thin plate glass the difference may not be great enough to necessitate a change.

* * *

Q. I want to build a garage on my lot which is 50 by 100 feet, and I would like to know what you think is the best place to locate it.

KIRKWOOD, MO.

A. Without having a plot plan or knowing the character of the surroundings it is difficult to advise you. However, speaking generally, if it is possible, attach the garage to the house. This keeps the driveway short and leaves the back yard free for development. If this can't be done, try and locate it where it will interfere least with the yard.

* * *

Q. I have a hot water heating plant in my house that has no overflow tank but has some sort of relief valves in the cellar. When the fire is low there is no water in the third-story radiators. Can you tell me why?

A. R., University City.

A. Probably the pressure on the valves was not adjusted to a three-story house. Your third-floor radiators are acting as your expansion tank. Have the plumber adjust the valves.

Q. I have always wanted a little greenhouse, and I have noticed lately pictures of houses with them set in a corner of the house. Are they expensive to build and operate? T. O., Big Bend rd.

A. If you have a place where one may be attached to your house, it will be comparatively inexpensive to build. Very nice ones come in stock sizes that will fit almost any need. The cost will vary with respect to what must be done to heat it. If you have sufficient capacity on your present heating plant to take care of the extra load, the whole installation should not be very high in cost. However, it may be that you will have to put in a separate heating plant, and that may be costly. Consult a concern making these greenhouses. They will give you an estimate.

FHA Evaluation Stresses Need for Architects' Service

System Designed to Improve Housing Conditions in America.

The economic soundness of employing an architect to plan and supervise the building of homes irregardless of how small and inexpensive they may be is stressed by the program of the Federal Housing Administration to encourage better housing by establishing a system of evaluating homes for the purpose of insuring mortgage loans.

Laws have been passed in some States requiring all buildings financed by loans to be planned by registered architects, making for greater safety of construction and a higher standard of architectural design.

"Better housing means better planning," said Wilbur T. Trueblood, chief architect in the St. Louis district office of the Federal Housing Administration. "A great deal of educational work has already been done toward making the public conscious of the necessity of employing the services of a professional architect for any building operation. An architect is taught to approach the problem with the idea not only of making his creation a thing of beauty but also practical and durable. He is taught to arrange rooms simply, giving careful attention to the two most important factors, light and air. He knows that a well-designed mechanical system is vital to the comfort and health of his client. Above all, he realizes that the home must possess those qualities which make for livability, namely, convenience, comfort and privacy."

Recent estimates made by housing authorities show that many millions of dwelling units will be needed in the next 10 years. The system of evaluation worked out by the FHA is designed eventually to improve housing conditions in America.

Air Conditioning

Air conditioning, for both winter and summer, has revolutionized our conception of the functions of a heating system. There is still some confusion in the public mind as to the real meaning of the term; many think it refers merely to summer cooling. As a matter of fact, that is only one phase of it, and in the opinion of many who have studied our heating problems, a lesser one. The conditioning of the heated air in our houses in winter is far more important from a health standpoint than keeping us cool in summer.

The interest in air conditioning has brought back into favor the system of heating that was once scornfully termed "hot air." There was some justification for this unpopularity, for in the old type ashes and coal gas were distributed along with the hot, dry air, to the detriment of the silverware and the conscientious housekeeper's temper. All that is changed now; the fire box is quite separate from the warm-air chamber, and the air is warm and moist instead of being hot and dry. Air conditioning, of course, can also be combined with the boiler type of heater.

Water Softener.

Hard water is not only unpleasant to use but it affects the plumbing lines as well. Water softeners may be installed that will remove the hard substances from the water.

FOR BETTER LIVING

If the spring urge for cleaning up and remodeling leads toward closets, follow it by all means! Gayety hides back of those closed doors and so does convenience, for it is now possible to equip a closet with numerous gadgets which make life easier for the entire family.

Since we are all suit-minded this year, we must have skirt hangers. These cromium clips which come singly or in groups and open out like a fan. They may be attached to the door or to the closet interior. Tie hangers too come in chromium for the man about town who wants to be sure of a smooth cravat sans wrinkles. Shoe racks and hat stands, while they are no longer front page fashion news, may also be had in chromium.

There is a new type of structural glass on the market for the home-building minded. The new units are heat treated and have the color or design fired into them. Colors may be made up to suit the individual, so if you have yearned for an orchid colored bath with gray trim or a kitchen in warm tile brown, you may have it and be happy. The glass is guaranteed against peeling or crazing and comes in bent corner angles and caps.

If you like the dignity that panels lend to your living or dining room you may now have large units of decorative glass for this purpose.

When marching feet have worn the colors off your linoleum you may treat it to a coat of paint and achieve an entirely new effect. Use a light or dark ground color and stipple on a contrasting color. Varnish the entire surface and life moves on tranquilly once more. There are innumerable color combinations possible and the Handy Man can do the job very competently. There is no trick to stippling. Cut a flat surface on the sponge, brush the paint on a board, then dip, stipple or spatter to your heart's content.

Here is good news for those who want to refurnish their homes after the modern manner. Massive sofas and enormous upholstered pieces are definitely part of the past. Furniture manufacturers are turning out smaller pieces which fit in very well with period furnishings. Sofa units are very much in vogue and chairs that are built along the lines of the comfortable not too high not too low English club chair are very much in demand.

ENCLOSE THE PORCH

By enclosing front or side porches property owners automatically provide another room to the home. In the modern trend the old-fashioned "front porch" is giving way to the enclosed type. In new construction the porch, if any, is included at the rear of many houses, thus giving additional privacy.

Owners of homes with large porches that are used infrequently may find it effective to reduce the size of the porch and utilize the space gained thereby as a dining nook, study or downstairs bath. Consultation with an architect or qualified contractor will be advisable under such cirucumstances.

VIVID COLORS IN BATHROOMS

Since the average bathroom has small wall surfaces the colors introduced may be a little more vivid than they should be in other rooms. Coral and black, for instance, may be used with striking effect. Lemon and bright blue make a distinctive room. Ebony and crystal accents are in great favor and can be used with citron yellow, terra cotta and turquoise. It is advisable to use glossy paints on the walls, ceilings and woodwork—rather than "flat" coatings—because of the frequent presence of steam.

A Rare Opportunity to Discover If You Have Talent

3 DAYS ONLY-MON., TUES., WED.

The Only Expense Is an Enrollment Fee of One Dollar and Eighty-Five cents to Show Sincerity of Purpose and Help Cover Enrollment and Advertising Costs. The regular price of this term of lessons is $15.00; realizing this, the magnitude of this offer is apparent.

NO INSTRUMENT NEEDED

Pupils without accordions in the home are cordially invited to take advantage of this offer, as many hesitate to purchase an accordion unless they have some assurance that they have talent. Accordion and instruction book will be furnished for the lesson periods to pupils without instruments.

HOW TO ENROLL

Registrations will be accepted for three days only this week. The fee of $1.85 must be paid upon enrollment. There are no other obligations—no "extras"—nothing to sign. Nothing to buy. Any or every member of a family may enroll. This precious opportunity is made possible by the La Pieno Accordion School, and the offer is made in accordance with its policy and as part of its campaign—TO ENCOURAGE THE APPRECIATION and performance of accordion music.

SALESMEN WANTED

ATTENTION—MEN WHO ARE UNEMPLOYED

In and around St. Louis are men that are complaining about work being very hard to find. Some of these men actually want work, others are not looking for work, or want something that is easy to do for a mere existence. To the men looking for a chance to prove their ability with possibilities of earning a good consistent living for themselves and their families, we can present a splendid opportunity.

In our previous announcements we have repeatedly made the statement that we are not interested in men who are merely concerned with the limitations of a small income. However, we will go a long way in helping a man to a lucrative and permanent future if that man is big enough and willing enough to realize that he must pay the price and prove his worth to us by actual and conscientious hard work.

In order to assure that no man will remain in a rut because of a stipulated income used as a harness over him, we pay our men on a profit sharing basis, giving them a chance to receive in dollars and cents what they actually earn.

This business is both modern and mutual. No investment is required from any man qualifying. We finance everything.

Our requirements are: Good references and neat appearance. To you who are reading this ad, is your future worth two hours' interview with our factory representative? Where he can outline what we consider a real opportunity to you?

This ad gives no honest, industrious man an excuse for being out of work. We are not interested in ad seekers or floaters. Apply in person, Monday, between 9:15 a. m. and 1:15 p. m., at 512 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th & Olive Sts. This is a special interview and may mean the turning point of your life regardless of your present occupation.

This is not an ordinary ad, but this is not an ordinary selling job. We firmly believe this represents one of the outstanding opportunities of the decade in specialty sales work.

ENTERPRISING junior members of the St. Louis Woman's Club, whose unusual parties are anticipated with interest, will try their talents on the seniors at the annual Junior Day entertainment in their honor Thursday, April 30. Following luncheon, to be served from flower-decked tables in the colonial dining salon, a well-heralded program will be staged in the upstairs ballroom. Because of a surprise element involved, neither the heralding nor details of the features scheduled, can be announced in advance.

Chairs for the guests will be arranged theater-wise with aisles on the sides and center to permit models in the fashion show, the finale, to pass through, and on stage special scenery and cyclorama will be placed as background for skits and dancing choruses.

Number one on the program will be a chorus danced by Mrs. Edward G. Rolwing, Mrs. Ralph Fischer, Mrs. John Brownrigg, Miss Annie Lane Bailey, Miss Jane Jordan, Miss Grace White and Miss Aurelia Gerhard. Then follows a skit by Mrs. Arthur Feuerbacher Jr., Mrs. Edmond A. B. Garesche, Mrs. Hugh M. Bowen, Mrs. Stanley S. Waite and Mrs. Ralph Waldo Emerson, and a trio sung by Mrs. Nelson H. Howe, Mrs. T. Middleton Levis and Miss Mary Louise Hammett. Miss Jordan and Miss White, debutantes, will compete in a fencing match, after which Mrs. Edward Bischoff, Miss Lola Stinde, Mrs. Albert Happel, Miss Mildred Webster and Mrs. Henry Hale Rand will play a skit. The sixth number on the program will be a skit by Mrs. Lawrence Clinton Sherrill, Miss Harriet Hulburd, Mrs. Levis, and Miss Mary Elizabeth Hunter.

There will be solos by Miss Hammett and Mrs. Levis; a monologue by Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Hickman, and solo dances by Mrs. Edward G. Bischoff and Mrs. Arthur H. Feuerbacher Jr. Four members—Mrs. Louis S. Dennig, Mrs. Joseph W. Folk, Mrs. Henry Rand and Miss Helen Fusz—will provide the animation for posters. Miss Bailey will sing a solo with a chorus background composed of Miss Betty Freeman, Miss Hulburd, Miss Jordan and Miss White, and Mrs. Frederick V. Armistead, Miss Anne Becker, Miss Jane Winter will be included in another skit.

For the finale, pastel tinted chiffon garden frocks worn by the models will be accented by spring flower bouquets in their arms. The young women will be preceded from the stage by another group holding smilax and daisies. The daisy chain bearers will be Mrs. Bischoff, Mrs. O. P. J. Falk, Mrs. Jerome F. Kircher, Miss Eleanor and Miss Ruth Babler, Mrs. Theodore F. Schroth, Miss Althea Hickey, Mrs. Garesche, Mrs. Bowen, Mrs. Fischer, Mrs. Emerson, Mrs. Grace Hunter, Miss Betty Jean Stoughton, Mrs. Myles Hasgall, Miss Webster, Miss Mary Josephine Wagner, Miss Stinde and Miss Winter.

Chambers of St. Louis, whose country home, "Taille de Noyer," Florissant, Mo., is an interesting old estate which has long been in the family. The bride is a niece of Mrs. William Julius Polk, also of St. Louis; Powell Chambers, Ferguson, Mo., and Mrs. Claude Chichester of Basingstoke, England, the former Miss Alicia Chambers. LITTLE SYMPHONY ASSOCIATION TO SPONSOR OUT-DOOR CONCERTS

INVITATIONS to a gala preseasonal concert of orchestral music are to be issued this week. Hosts and hostesses will be members of the Executive Committee of the Little Symphony Association, which will again sponsor a series of outdoor concerts in the hillside theater at John Burroughs School. The present concert, in the nature of an exhibition, will take place in the auditorium of Mary Institute, Tuesday evening, April 28.

About 20 musicians from the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra have offered their services to the committee. They will be under the baton of Francis Findlay of the New England Conservatory of Music and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Findlay will be the guest of Howard Williams of the Executive Committee during his visit here.

The soloist is to be Guy Maier, formerly of the Patterson and Maier two-piano team, now a director of the WPA music project.

The Little Symphony movement, which began last summer, is intended to stimulate participation in musical activties by young people, to give employment to symphony orchestra musicians during the summer months, and to bring out unknown young musicians of unquestionable talent. The concerts will begin in June, about a month earlier than last year, and will be given weekly instead of every two weeks.

The program for the demonstration concert will include a Bach suite for flute and strings, a Mozart piano concerto, a Schubert symphony for small orchestra and short novelties.

Four hundred invitations are being issued, for the most part to friends of members of the association who were away last summer and therefore unable to hear the concerts. Among members of the Executive Committee who have been working on plans for the season during the last two months are the following: Robert Brookings Smith, president; Mrs. C. Powell Fordyce, vice-president; Mrs. John Franciscus, Mrs. William Beatty-Weakley, Mrs. C. W. Rodewald, Mrs. Thomas B. Sherman, Mrs. Adele Sharpe, Mrs. C. Edward Hermann, Miss Mary Bolland Taussig, Miss Emily Lewis, Miss Martha Love, Miss Frances Conant, Arnold H. Maremont, William Julius Polk Jr. and Howard Williams.

Joan Pangman Is Married to F. A. Kuhn II

Spring Setting for Ceremony in Late Afternoon at Church of St. Michael and St. George.

MISS JOAN PANGMAN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Carlisle Pangman, 4654 Pershing avenue, became the bride of Francis Augustus Kuhn II at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the Church of St. Michael and St. George. Mr. Kuhn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. L. Kuhn, 7206 Kingsbury boulevard.

The church was decorated with greenery and white flowers suggestive of spring. The chancel was banked with palms and ferns interspersed with tall candelabra filled with lighted white cathedral tapers. Huckleberry foliage covered the chancel rail and vases of calla lilies adorned the altar.

Mr. Pangman gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a smart tunic gown of white satin designed with a high, slightly draped neckline and long tight satin sleeves. The tunic divided to form two trains. Her white tulle veil was arranged from a smalll satin cap pointed at the front and edged at the back by orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of double white stock tied with white satin ribbon.

Mrs. Edward Douglass Campbell of Montreal, the former Miss Hope Pangman, was matron of honor for her sister. Miss Elise White, Miss Margaret Hemingway, Miss Josephine Kuhn, a sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. Thruston W. Pettus, Mrs. Oliver Evans and Mrs. Austin P. Leland were bridesmaids. Their gowns were of chiffon and accented the pastel shades of spring flowers. Mrs. Campbell wore daffodil yellow made with a skirt of sunburst pleating. The long loose sleeves were pleated and the bodice had pale violet and spring green drapery caught at the waistline at the front and thrown over the shoulders to achieve the effect of a trailing scarf. She carried a bouquet of orchid toned stock. The bridesmaids were in similarly fashioned gowns of delicate violet, with drapery of daffodil yellow and spring green. Their bouquets were of yellow daisies and yellow snapdragon. All the bride's attendants wore large Leghorn hats trimmed with semi-wreaths of lilac-tinted heather and narrow bands of matching velvet ribbon.

T. Frank James Jr. was best man for Mr. Kuhn and the following served as groomsmen: Edward Douglas Campbell, Benjamin O. Clark, C. Sewell Pangman, brother of the bride; John Hall, Curry Kirkpatrick, James Raleigh, Alex McVoy, William Lincoln of Knoxville, Tenn., and Norman Cordon of the New York Metropolitan Opera Co.

Mrs. Pangman, the bride's mother, wore a gown of spice brown lace, the sleeves and bodice trimmed with insets of brown net. A bow of green taffeta showing through the lace at the front of the high neckline furnished a contrasting color note. Over the gown was worn a jacket of dark brown marquisette. Mrs. Pangman's hat was dull brown straw banded with pale green chiffon and trimmed with a chou-chou of chiffon. Mrs. Kuhn, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of Canterbury blue lace and crepe, and a large Leghorn hat trimmed with a blue veil. Her flowers were white orchids and lilies of the valley arranged in a shoulder corsage.

The ceremony was followed by a small reception at the Pangman home for the bridal party, the families and a group of close friends. The receiving line formed in the living room before the mantel, which was decorated with a long basket of spring flowers. The fireplace was hidden by a mass of palms and ferns and more of the flowers were used about the room. Huckleberry foliage garlanded the staircase.

Mr. Kuhn and his bride will sail from New York for a honeymoon in Bermuda and on their return will live at 10 North Taylor avenue.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

WASHINGTON, April 18.

ON May 1, Dewey Day, anniversary of the Battle of Manila, Washington will pay tribute to one George Dewey, Admiral of the Navy, long a resident here. It was to Washington that Admiral Dewey came after the Spanish-American War with honors piled thick upon him and here he married one of Washington's prominent widows, Mrs. Mildred McLean Hazen, sister of the late John R. McLean, owner of the Cincinnati Enquirer and the Washington Post. When he died in January, 1917, he was buried in Arlington Cemetery. In 1925, at the request of his widow, he was reinterred in Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral, of which he had been one of the first trustees.

On May 1 will be held the annual procession of little children bearing blossoms to place on his tomb in Washington Cathedral. A simple ritual will be said and the officiating clergyman will tell the children, many of them daughters and sons of naval officers, of the Admiral. This annual service grew out of a remark of Mrs. Dewey to a friend, "I want the Admiral to be buried in a spot where little children can walk to and perhaps lay a blossom or two there on his grave in token of his sincerity, his valor and his courage.

Admiral Dewey's only child, George Goodwin Dewey, son of his first wife, is a resident of Chicago, having retired from business there some years ago.

THE participation of Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, daughter of Mr. Hall Roosevelt, niece of Mrs. Roosevelt, in Easter events at the White House brings to mind that Mrs. Roosevelt herself is one of the long line of nieces who have played important roles in White House history.

During the administration of her uncle, President Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt, his niece, frequently visited the Executive Mansion.

In recent years White House nieces have included Miss Janet Large, daughter of Mrs. Hoover's sister; Miss Alice Wilson, daughter of President Wilson's brother, Joseph Wilson, who was a White House bride in that administration, and several others.

Before that time there were the McKinley nieces, who passed much time with their uncle and aunt at the White House, and Miss Emily Platt, niece of President Rutherford B. Hayes, who became the seventh White House bride on her marriage to Gen. Russell Hastings, June 19, 1878. The entertainments and social leadership of Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson, niece of President James Buchanan, are still a tradition here.

WASHINGTON is pre-eminently a Navy town with its nearness to Annapolis and the Navy Department's location here and this colony always joins enthusiastically in the nation-wide campaign carried on by the American Merchant Marine Library Association, to gather books for the men who sail the seven seas. The fifteenth annual seamen's book week, which began with a dinner at the River Club in New York today.

ONLY the Kentucky Derby vies with interest in Washington and Maryland, at least, in the Grand National Point to Point Race held at the Hereford Farms on the Maryland estate of William R. Whittingham in Baltimore County yesterday.

These races originated in 1898, when boys under 16, of the Green Spring Valley region, wanted to prove to their parents that there was no danger in cross country racing. Soon the elders joined in the sport and out of it grew the Grand National Point to Point races of today.

IN the matter of family traditions, Mrs. Eleanor Washington I. Howard, the last surviving Washington to have been born at Mount Vernon, will attend the sessions of the Children of the American Revolution, meeting in Washington this week. She is vice-president of that society and has been its national president.

When the boy and girl delegates gather about Mrs. Howard she tells them tales of her childhood at Mount Vernon and of the hordes of visitors who literally ate her father out of house and home. So many visitors came claiming their rights as American citizens to visit the former home of the great Washington and so hospitable was her father that the family budget gave out trying to provide food and shelter for the visitors and even feed for their horses in the crowded stables at Mount Vernon. When distinguished visitors came from overseas they had to be entertained in the grand manner, as it were.

Even the little children of John Augustine Washington Jr., father of Mrs. Howard, had no privacy. They were asked constantly "How does it feel to be a Washington?" and Mrs. Howard remembers to this day how, when she was 4, she was induced to yield to her mother's persuasion and throw away money that had been given to her by a stranger without permission of her parents. Principles rather than feelings were the stern code of the Washington family.

point lace, with a band of the lace forming a square neck line, joined to the satin by strands of seed pearls. A wide panel of lace reached to the hem of the gown in the back, and a long veil of bridal illusion fell over the sweeping court train. Her matron of honor, who preceded her to the altar, was gowned in lavender, and the bridesmaids wore dresses of powder blue.

The interior of the church was illuminated by altar candles, and decorated with Woodwardia ferns and Easter lilies. The bride carried an arm bouquet of lilies of the valley. Before the wedding march, Gounod's mass in honor of Saint Cecilia was played by the organist, while the choir sang "O Salutaris."

The ceremony was followed by a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell, after which Mr. and Mrs. Denis left for a week's cruise in the Gulf of Mexico on the bridegroom's boat, "The Viva."

WINNETKA, Ill., April 18. MISS ELMIRA LEE BENOIST, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Francis Benoist, and Norman Ibsen of Chicago were married quietly this evening at the Benoist home, 81 Locust road. Because of illness in both families, the ceremony was unostentatious, and neither the bride nor bridegroom was attended. Only immediate families were present.

White chiffon, trimmed with heirloom lace belonging to her maternal great-great grandmother, was worn by the bride, who carried lilies of the valley. Her father gave her in marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Ibsen will go to New Orleans on their honeymoon and will be at home after May 15 at 2440 Lake View drive, Chicago.

The bride attended the North Shore Country Day School and Mlle. Joseph-Bertrand's School in Paris. She was presented to society at a tea New Year's day, 1933, and later went to St. Louis to be introduced there under the chaperonage of her grandmother, Mrs. Edmond A. B. Garesche of Hotel Kings-Way. She is also a granddaughter of Eugene H. Benoist, former St. Louisan now living in West Palm Beach, Fla.

Mr. Ibsen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Ibsen. He is a graduate of Chicago University.

St. Louis Rugby Players Make Trip to Chicago

A GROUP of St. Louis athletes, representing the Missouri Rugby Football Union, met the Illinois Rugby Union club in Grant Park, Chicago, last Sunday afternoon. The visitors were defeated, 6 to 3, but Capt. Hugo Walther thinks that another season of practice will result in a much better showing if not victory.

The members of the team who accompanied Capt. Walther to Chicago were: Harry H. Langenberg Jr., William Foehr, William W. Boyd Jr., Homer Dewey, Charles Peters, John Winter, Jack Cohane, Dolph Boettler, Charles King, William Knehams, Carroll Mondt, Armon Raebel, Robert Joseph, and Charles Baum.

Three years ago Mr. Langenberg, with several other young men, formed a rugby team that plays every Sunday afternoon from February to May in Forest Park. They were helped in their training by Neville Clark, an Englishman, now living in St. Louis, and their enthusiasm soon spread among their friends until three clubs were formed, the Central Athletic, the Guys and the Ramblers. There are seven clubs in the Illinois union.

EVOLUTION of the BRIDE'S BOUQUET

Styles Change—Trends Exemplified At St. Louis Weddings

By FAY PROFILET

FROM time immemorial flowers have marked the bride and her maids. The bride's bouquet has grown from a knot of ribbon given by the early Anglo-Saxon bride to her friends to wear to elaborate arrangements of hundreds of sprays of lilies of the valley, orchids and other rare exotic blossoms. Styles in bridal bouquets have changed almost as rapidly as fashions for bridal gowns. Experts in designing bouquets for the bride refer to them as, "chic, very new, or flowers with personality."

The shower carried to the altar for many a year has completely disappeared. Once it was the last word in style—roses and lilies of the valley with streamers of white ribbon tied with buds and blossoms. This type of bouquet has given way to a long procession of flowers chosen and arranged with an eye for distinction.

In her "Customs of Mankind," Lillian Eichler says the following of bride's favors and flowers:

"The early Anglo-Saxon bride gave to her friends small knots of ribbands to wear or carry. This custom survives in the buttonhole bouquets of the groomsmen, and the ribbon-tied Bibles or bouquets of the bridesmaids.

"Orange blossoms have been worn or carried by brides since earliest times. The blossoms are believed to portend good luck and happiness. Both Spencer and Milton were of the opinion that the orange was the 'golden apple' presented to Jupiter by Juno on their marriage day, and it is very probable because of this belief that the orange blossom came to be associated, in later times, with happiness in the marriage tie.

"Lilies of the valley and roses have always been favorite wedding flowers, but because of their prettiness rather than of any significance. However, we are told that the ancient Greeks regarded the rose as queen of flowers and considered it an emblem of beauty and happiness. And young Romans were in the habit of sending baskets of roses to the ladies they admired. At one time a garland of flowers was absolutely an essential in the marriage ceremony. It was placed on the bride's head and was known as the 'coronet of the good girl.'"

A CHAT with a designer of brides' bouquets for a West End florist, who furnishes flowers for many of the smart weddings, disclosed the style angle. According to this creator of beautiful arrangements, the first rule is all white flowers, no matter what the variety. No matter how pale, mauve orchids or pastel shaded flowers are not in the best mode. The bouquet must be appropriate to the bride's personality and the type of her gown.

"The most fashionable bridal bouquet is made of lilies of the valley in which 300 or more sprays of these little flowers are arranged," this expert explains. "The bouquet is tied wtih white or ivory satin ribbon or tulle in a bow with long or short streamers to effect a dip formation at the front as the bride's hand must be covered. This charming bouquet may be carried with any kind of gown but is most effective with satin lace-trimmed tulle or lace. Next in favor is the lily of the valley centered with orchids. Two or three white orchids are made into a corsage that may be withdrawn from the bouquet and worn by the bride with her traveling costume.

"At this time of the year white lilacs or double white stock are smart. The latter is becoming very popular as it has the general appearance of lilacs, though the blossoms are double and much larger. The round set bouquet of gardenias is a favorite, but is prettier when combined or edged with lilies of the valley. Such a bouquet is usually carried with a period gown or when the bride's attendants carry old-fashioned paper frilled nose-gays. Calla lilies, usually arranged in a sheaf, are appropriate to the tall, stately bride in a gown of heavy white satin made on severe, regal lines. Easter lilies are an infrequent choice because of the abundance of foliage and the large blossoms.

"A new and pretty idea is the use of three gardenias on the top of the veil. White gladioli, white iris or white gerberia (double African daisy), combined with lilies of the valley, also make most beautiful and unusual bridal bouquets.

"I never advocate leis of flowers or prayer books adorned with orchids or gardenias. While their use is not incorrect, a bride without a bouquet is, for me, unthinkable.

"The bride's rose formerly used in the shower are no longer cultivated. When roses are used—and they seldom are at a smart wedding—the white Kilarney is a substitute."

NEXT in importance to the bride's bouquet are those of her attendants. Their bouquets are governed entirely by the color of the gowns so the flowers chosen are the ones best fitted to complement the dress. The florist in arranging the bouquets must be careful not to contrast the flowers too strongly, thus avoiding a clash of color. Practically all flowers may be used in bridesmaids' bouquets. Roses alone or combined with many different varieties of blossoms in season all have their place in the wedding ensemble. At a recent St. Louis wedding, bridesmaids' bouquets of pansies attracted attention. According to the designer of the bouquets, they are flowers of personality with every little face speaking for itself.

Because of the wide range of shades roses lend themselves well for the bridesmaids. The three newest roses are the Token, which has an orange shade and blends well with blue apricot or green frocks; the Lester Hilbred, a trifle lighter in hue than the token and the Justine, a decided orange. These roses were combined for the bouquets carried by the special maids of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball last fall. There are several popular, though not new roses that are frequently seen in bridesmaids' bouquets at fashionable St. Louis weddings. These include the talisman with its reddish cast; Joanna Hill, more of a cream; the Briarcliffe, a real pink and the Better Times rose which has taken the place of the almost extinct American Beauty rose. All these, with the exception of the red rose, are combined successfully with blue, pink and yellow flowers. The Joanna Hill rose is often seen in bouquets with African daisies which bloom in many fascinating colors. In the last year or so pink and white bouvardia has been added to the many flowers for the bride's attendants. At this time of the year many St. Louis brides carry armfuls of purple lilacs and later in the season inverted Leghorn hats filled with garden flowers are used at one or more of the large garden weddings.

ORCHIDS come into their own in corsages for informal weddings. Exquisite corsages are made of three or more orchids. The white with purple centers and the large deep purple flowers are the most favored. Their stems are wrapped with matching satin ribbon and they are finished with a small bow. The orchids are worn on either shoulder. It seems that no one had decided this point. They are worn with the flowers up.

Orchid bouquets made to match or harmonize with costumes are termed freak bouquets. They are individual and interesting and include the lady slipper, the dancing girl, moth, butterfly, swan and dove or Holy Ghost orchid. The lady slipper is dominant in brown but it comes in pink and yellow and a rare green. All shades go well with costume suits and afternoon wedding gowns. The dancing girl orchid, which is a small bright yellow blossom, has in the center a tiny dancing figure of a rust red and makes a dainty corsage for the bride, who likes the unusual. A lovely corsage can be made of a small green and very fragrant orchid that has the enchanting name of "Breath of the Angels."

Gardenia corsages are popular and are worn in many fashions. Corsages of from three to six gardenias tied with white or silver ribbons are worn at the shoulder of the informal wedding gown or on the coat of the traveling suit. The V neckline is often marked by several of the flowers. They are often combined with lilies of the valley, but the gardenias alone are thought by florists who cater to the society set much smarter. At this time of the year the large Belmont gardenia is adorning the shoulder of many spring brides.

AFTER the bride has chosen her bouquet and after the bridesmaids' gowns have been matched with roses and fragile and fragrant flowers, what of the bridegroom and the groomsmen? They get a single gardenia and the bridegroom is allowed a strand or two of lilies of the valley—and to pay for the bride's posies.

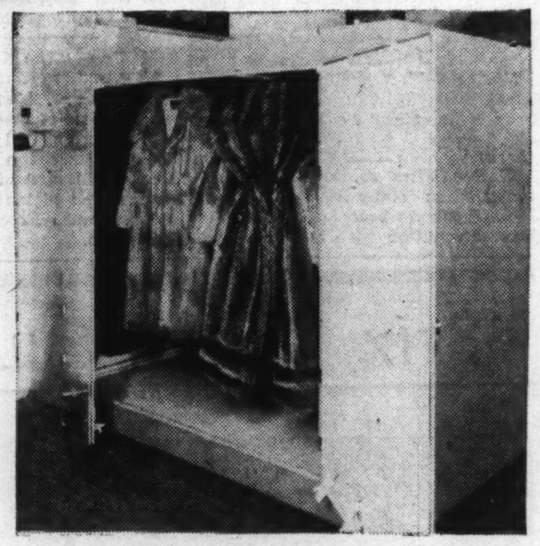
JUST COLD STORAGE ISN'T ENOUGH FOR YOUR FURS « « « « « «

YOUR FURS NEED THE STIX, BAER & FULLER FIVE-POINT SERVICE FOR ABSOLUTE SAFETY AND PROTECTION FROM MOTHS, HEAT, FIRE AND THEFT

Put your furs in Stix, Baer and Fuller's Cold Storage now. VAPORIZING included without extra charge. Every fur needs the preliminary Vaporizing, which will destroy insidious, lurking moth or insect life in any stage. Stix, Baer and Fuller introduces VAPORIZING to St. Louis this year as the most important contribution to fur protection in recent years. No furs are immune in summer or winter to the contagion of moth life. Ordinary cold storage merely suspends the development of moth life which goes right on when furs are returned to home closets. VAPORIZING insures the destruction of moth life in every stage of development; and Stix, Baer and Fuller provides this extra protection at no additional cost to you.

1 VAPORIZING



IS STIX, BAER AND FULLER'S SPECIAL PROCESS

. recently installed in our store and is the first process of its kind in St. Louis. It employs a vapor which the U. S. Department of Agriculture states will destroy all moth life if used in a chamber such as ours. The vapor penetrates every pore of the fur pelt and every fibre of the woolens, so that after 24 hours in this chamber, every vestige of moth life is destroyed. This advantage is yours, in addition to our other fur storage features, at no extra cost.

THOROUGH INSPECTION

Expert furriers thoroughly inspect all garments upon their arrival, and submit estimates for those garments which need any kind of repairing . . . .

BLOWN-AIR CLEANING

Every fur garment is put through a process of thorough beating and blowing which eliminates all loose dust and dirt . . . . . .

INDIVIDUALIZED SERVICE

New! Furs are placed in porous craft bags of our own design; then well-spaced in our cold storage vaults to preserve their shape and texture . . . . . .

CIRCULATING DRY-COLD AIR

Our modern Fur Storage Vaults not only protect every garment from moths, fire and theft, but also against the harmful effects of summer heat . . . . . .

ONLY AT ST. LOUIS' FAVORITE STORE WILL YOU FIND THIS EXCLUSIVE DE-MOTHING CHAMBER WHICH KILLS MOTH EGGS, LARVAE AND ADULT MOTHS BY OUR OWN VAPORIZING PROCESS

Just Call CEntral 6500—Station 266 or 267, and Your Garments Will Be Called For Promptly.

"I like these bargain long distance rates"

"I can't answer letters and put up peaches too—they just don't mix. And Clem is no help. He'd rather be licked than to scratch out a letter. But folks do get sick, and the children get fussed if they don't hear from home regular. So, I just set down to the phone. It's worth the money, especially if you call at night or on Sunday, so as to get the bargain rates."

ORTHODONTISTS OPEN MEETING TOMORROW

Latest Developments in Science of Straightening Teeth to Be Presented.

Latest developments in orthodontia, the science of straightening teeth, jaws and dental arches, will be presented at the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the American Society of Orthodontists, which will be held for four days at Hotel Jefferson, beginning tomorrow.

The society has been closely connected with St. Louis. It was founded here in 1901, this year's meeting is the fifth held in St. Louis, and Dr. H. C. Pollock of St. Louis is president. The society has 450 members, most of whom are expected to attend.

Orthodontic treatment usually is accomplished with wire appliances which exert a steady pressure on the teeth or jaws and cause them to move gradually into the desired position by periodical tightening of the appliances.

One of the most interesting papers to be presented will be that of Dr. Clinton C. Howard of Atlanta, Ga., who has studied the relationship between deformities of the jaws and the general structure of the body. Faulty functioning of the pituitary gland, he believes, may cause excessive or insufficient growth of the lower jaw just as it causes overgrowth or stunting of the body. He will speak at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday.

Exercises of facial muscles to aid in adjusting upper and lower jaws which fail to meet properly will be discussed by Dr. Alfred Paul Rogers of Boston, in a clinical session Thursday afternoon.

Lieutenant-Colonel Leigh C. Fairbank of Washington, D. C., dental surgeon with the United States army, will explain Tuesday afternoon how information he collected during the war on treatment of jaw bullet wounds can be used as a basis for treatment of jaws injured in industrial or traffic accidents.

There will be no scientific sessions tomorrow. Members will register, and the annual golf tournament and dinner will be held at Sunset Hill Country Club. Business sessions will begin Tuesday morning with reports of committees, an address of welcome by Dr. Virgil Loeb, president of the Missouri State Dental Association, and Dr. Pollock's presidential address. Election of officers and the annual dinner will be held Wednesday.

Papers on case histories and methods of treatment will be delivered Tuesday afternoon, Wednesday morning and afternoon, and Thursday morning. Lecture clinics will be held Tuesday evening and Thursday afternoon.

Members of the committee of local orthodontists in charge of convention arrangements are Dr. George H. Herbert, Dr. Albert C. Vogler and Dr. Eric H. Golden. Local members of other committees are Dr. Frank C. Rodgers, Dr. John Byrne, Dr. Thomas E. Prosser, Dr. Joseph H. Williams, Dr. Lehman S. Harrell, Dr. Virgil A. Kimmey, Dr. Leo M. Shanley, Dr. Edward V. Holestine, Dr. Raymond Davenport, Dr. Harry A. Allshouse, Dr. Harry L. Westhoff, Dr. E. Rook, Dr. J. P. Marshall and Dr. Earl Bean.

PAGEANT OF HISTORY OF NUNS OF ST. JOSEPH

Closing Event of Sisters' Celebration of Order's Centenary in St. Louis.

The pageant depicting the history of the Sisters of St. Joseph, which will close the order's celebration of the hundredth anniversary of its establishment in St. Louis and the United States, was viewed at a dress rehearsal yesterday afternoon by an audiece of school children and members of religious communities.

There will be a matinee performance at 2:15 o'clock today in the St. Louis Theater, and evening performances tonight and tomorrow at 8:15 o'clock.

More than 1000 persons are in the cast, creating a dressing-room problem which was solved yesterday when additional facilities in the nearby Missouri Theater and the Pythian Building were obtained. To accommodate the orchestra of 60 musicians it was necessary to remove several rows of front seats in the theater.

From 1650 to Present Day.

The pageant, written by Sister Mary Pius Neenan, head of the philosophy department of Fontbonne College, traces the history of the order from its founding in France in 1650 to the present, with particular emphasis on events since six of the sisters from France reached St. Louis 100 years ago last month and established in Carondelet the first convent of their order in this country.

The performance moves without interruption and the curtain is not lowered until the conclusion of the presentation. It is under the direction of Percy Ramsey, and dancing groups are under the supervision of Miss Anna Agress.

Among the more important episodes depicted are the imprisonment and martyrdom of the nuns during the French Revolution, the departure of the first band of six for America in 1836, their arrival in St. Louis and the hardships which befell them here, their heroism in nursing war and yellow fever victims, their perilous journeys by wagon to establish hospitals and schools, for pioneers and Indians, the reception of the first American novice, Miss Anne Dillon, and the colorful prom of a modern girls' college.

Enlarged Orchestra.

The orchestra of professional musicians is enlarged by inclusion of music pupils of the sisters. Many of those in the cast are from schools and institutions conducted by the order. Most of the adult roles are enacted by men and women who were taught by the sisters in their childhood.

Any profits which may be realized will go to the American mother house of the order at 6400 Minnesota avenue to defray the expenses of the contennial celebration which began Wednesday and will close with tomorrow night's presentation of the pageant.

WALK-WAY IN FOREST PARK TO BE DEDICATED TODAY

Trail 2½ Miles Long, First to Be Developed, Will Be Named for Nicholas Bell.

A 2½-mile walking trail in Forest Park, the first develeped under the direction of the Missouri Walk-Ways Association, will be dedicated ata the entrance, at Skinker boulevard and Clayton road, at 2:30 p. m. today.

It will be called the Nicholas Bell Trail in honor of the late Col. Nicholas M. Bell, who, in 1872, led in the passage by the Legislature of the enabling act authorizing purchase of the land since developed into Forest Park.

Ralph Mooney, president of the Walk-Ways Association, and Charles Connor, superintendent of parks, will officiate, and Merele Shippey of the association will speak. Hikers will be permitted to explore the trail after the ceremonies.

A trail is being developed from Watson boulevard to Highway 66 and from there to the Buder tract at Valley Park; another from Creve Coeur Lake to Babler State Park, and a third down the Mississippi River to Jefferson Barracks and back over the Rives Des Peres right-of-way to Forest Park.

LIONS TO GIVE SCOUTS 250-ACRE CAMP SITE

South Side Club Will Turn Over, Next Sunday, Tract Near Seckman, Mo.

"Lion's Den," a new scout camp for short outings, near Seckman, Mo., will be presented formally to the St. Louis Council next Sunday afternoon by the South Side Lions' Club, which purchased the 250-acre wooded site several years ago.

Ross D. Hogan, president of the club, will preside at the dedication ceremony and J. Lee Johnson, chairman of the camping committee of the council, will accept the tract for the scout organization. Other Lions' Clubs of St. Louis have been invited to send representatives. A boys' band of 75 will furnish music.

For several years after the club's acquisition of the camp, it was used by the Government as a shelter for transients. Enough buildings were erected during the Government's occupancy to provide cabins for the director of the camp, the quartermaster, another officer and three troops. There are also a hospital, bathhouse, power house and six floors and sidewall platforms over which canvas roofs can be placed.

The site has been used occasionally by St. Louis troops for week-end camping. Members of Shawnee Lodge, Order of the Arrow, have constructed a recreation hall of native oak with slab sides, which will be dedicated also Sunday afternoon. The Order of the Arrow will initiate candidates for its three degrees in ceremonies beginning Friday evening.

The camp is six miles west of Imperial, Mo., and 25 miles from St. Louis.

Walter W. Head, president of the national council, John Skinner Wilson, camp chief of the British Boy Scout Association, and Dr. Ernest D. Partridge, director of research for the national council, will attend the opening of the Sea Scout sailing season at the base at Creve Coeur Lake this afternoon.

The first events on the day's program at the lake were to be assembly, colors, and boat inspection, followed by the launching of the boats, with "Polaris," flagship for Region Eight, taking the water first. This afternoon, at 2 o'clock, guests will be received, preceding a general review of the fleet.

Tom Keane, national director of senior scouting, will be in St. Louis Wednesday. He will be guest of honor at a father and son banquet of "Polaris" at Wilson's Tavern, Clayton, and will speak at 7:30 p. m. at Bryan-Mullanphy School at a meeting of troop committeemen of the council. His subject will be "The Job of a Scoutmaster, the Measure of a Good Troop, and the Ideal Troop Committee."

J. Ross Blackford, Charles Kell, A. W. Lantz, and Guy M. Wood have been appointed to the council court of honor and qualified to review tests for life scout awards.

Officers will be elected for the Washington University Chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, scout fraternity, at a meeting in Cupples Hall on the campus at 4 p. m., April 27. Installation will take place May 1 at a dinner at Union Avenue Christian Church.

Troop 1, Mount Pleasant, observed its fifth anniversary last night with a dinner for former members at the American Legion Hall, 9506 Lackland road, Overland. A court of honor followed the dinner.

Ed Spinks, scoutmaster of Troop 1, Rock Hill, received an Eagle badge Wednesday. Members of the troop gave him a scout ax.

Formation of new units of sea scouting, cubbing, and senior scouting was approved by the council last week. The sea scout ship, "Renown," is sponsored by the Friedens Evangelical and Reformed Church, with Harry Keuper as skipper.

The new Rover post which was accepted by the council is administered by a committee headed by George L. Gamp. Jacob J. Spratts Jr. is cubmaster of the new pack, No. 72, sponsored by the Brentwood Mothers' Club. The Methodist church of Marvin Park has applied for a charter for a new scout troop of which Ira Witthaus will be scoutmaster.

General Leaders' week-end camp will be held next Saturday and Sunday at Cedarledge, the Girl Scout camp 40 miles south of St. Louis. Girl Scout and Brownie leaders of city and county will arrive at the camp between 10 and 10:30 a. m. Saturday and will open their program with a sing at 11:30, after which a picnic lunch will be served.

During the two days qualified leaders will give instruction in mapping, judging, nature, exploration, cross-country games, poncho shelters, signaling, singing and folk dancing. Registration should be made not later than tomorrow at the Girl Scout Little House, 4253 Magnolia avenue.

Women in Politics Debated By Men's Club at Dinner

Public Question Organization Discusses Whether They Have Been Purifying Influence or Should Return to Home.

Women heard the political achievements of their sex discussed by men, but had no chance to talk back, at the Public Question Club's final dinner of its thirty-first season, held Thursday night at the Congress Hotel.

The club, a men's discussion group meeting weekly at the University Club, permits attendance of women only at the spring final dinner, and does not call on them as speakers then. Franklin M. Underwood, assistant superintendent of schools, retiring president of the club, presided at the dinner. The general subject for discussion was "Women in Politics."

Three 20-minute talks were made by speakers assigned in advance to different phases of the subject. These were followed by several impromptu 3-minute talks from the floor. The assigned themes and principal speakers were, in the order of the talks:

"Wholesome and Purifying Influence," Carlos F. Hurd of the Post-Dispatch staff.

"Out of Place—Back to the Home," Victor Cullin, assistant secretary Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

"Their Achievements in Politics," Prof. Frank J. Bruno of Washington University.

Hurd's Remarks.

Hurd, the first speaker, said in part:

"Amendments come when things need amending. The Nineteenth Amendment came that way. Men had been nominating and electing our presidents for 130 years, and the best they could do was to make nominations in smoke-filled hotel bedrooms. No wonder the women thought they could do better. They had found, since they took up tobacco, that they could fill not only a bedroom, but a whole parlor suite, with smoke.

"Then, too, the politics of the time was overrun with bosses. The women promised to improve this condition, and we in Missouri can see that they have done so, for whereas we formerly had a lot of bosses in Missouri, today we have only one."

The speaker reviewed the arguments made in the suffrage campaign, and continued:

"When women got the vote, they became theoretically half, actually less than one-half, of the electorate. Call them one-half for convenience, but they are an undistinguishable half; for in most states, a vote is a vote, and the women's vote cannot be told from the men's. It is like the case of the bicycling pair who went to a justice of the peace and were married in their bicycle costumes, the man wearing plus-fours and the girl wearing bloomers. After the ceremony, the justice bestowed his nuptial blessing in the words: 'You two are now one, but darned if I know which one.'

Hoover and Women's Vote.

"It was figured that the women's vote elected Mr. Hoover in 1928, and that is the only time it has decided a presidential election, if it did so then. As to measures, it would be difficult to show that the results have been much different from what they would have been if women had not voted." Prohibition and "the so-called child labor amendment" were cited as instances.

Apprehensions that woman suffrage might occasion domestic difficulty and break up homes have not been borne out, the speaker said, and "partisan differences are among the rarest occasions of family strife, perhaps because such differences do not often exist, the wife being usually, by a coincidence, of the same party as her husband."

The speaker then gave the positive and creditable side of women's participation in politics, listing the educational work and get-out-the-vote campaigns of the League of Women Voters and its present fight for the merit system, and telling of St. Louis women's successful fight against two Republican judges in 1920, in the face of a Republican landslide.

Cullin on "Back to the Home."

Cullin, the second speaker, assigned to the "Back to the Home" theme, said:

"To be in politics, a woman must (1) run for or be a committeewoman; (2) run for or hold elective office; (3) aspire to or occupy an appointive post; or (4) be the wife of a man who holds office. Most women have no choice in having been placed in this last group. But they should be retiring, allowing their husbands the full beam of the spotlight. However, the usurping type has made this domestic station in life a public office.

"By 'Back to the Home' I do not mean an Old Ladies' Home, nor do I mean the housewife, little woman, or ball-and-chain type. Never will I support the mid-Victorian premise that women are put on earth for the sole purpose of bearing children, feeding their husbands and keeping the little nest tidy. I think the League of Women Voters is worthy and worth while, and that every woman should have the vote, and exercise that right independently."

Cullin then proceeded to describe instances of the effect of political activity on individual women, and expressed the opinion that the country would be better off without committeewomen. "The present plan of one committeeman and one committeewoman from each district or ward shows the utter stupidity of both sexes," he said.

"Ma" Ferguson, Mrs. Roosevelt.

As instances of women officeholders and women in politics, Cullin spoke of former Gov. "Ma" Ferguson of Texas, "where men are men, and women are governors;" Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, "a brilliant and charming person, whose main handicap is her sex;" and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, "expert of experts — expert knitter, tatter and piper, expert pacifier, rocker and grandmother, expert broadcaster, builder and arts-and-crafter, expert flyer, front pager and first-timer."

"Women do not belong in politics," was his conclusion. "In the words of Oscar Wilde, 'Women are to be loved, not understood.' If you must be extreme, choose the clinging vine method; don't make the mistake of trying to take man's place—it simply won't work. As one Senator aptly states, it, 'The hand that rocks the cradle often rocks the boat'."

Prof. Bruno's Contribution.

Prof. Bruno, third speaker, telling of women's achievements in politics, gave a psychological study of woman's mentality, as compared to man's, in its approach to the political situations created largely by man. "Woman's life," he found, "is tuned to contact with persons; man's, to solving the problems of reluctant nature or the no less resistant questions of social and industrial organization.

"I don't think it is possible to show that women are better than men," the educator said, "and it would be impolite to claim they are worse. I don't agree with Henry Adams, when he said he never knew a woman whose influence on him was not good. I've known a number whose influence was anything but good. We must look elsewhere for the difference between these two divisions of our interesting race. What I have in mind was expressed by a wise old Judge in Minneapolis, who said, 'Men may unintentionally make a tactless remark; women never do.'

"To anyone who would ask, what have women done in politics, I answer: Look at the League of Women Voters. What women have done as voters, or as officeholders, is not significant. There were just more voters and more potential officeholders when women received the suffrage. But when women formed the League of Women Voters, something new entered politics; a thing men had not thought of, and one they have not imitated. But it is as suited to the nature of politics in our complex civilization as anything ever invented to make politics work.

"Our means of representative government rest upon the fallacious theory that the voter knows how to vote, and all he needs is a chance to express his judgment, supremely oblivious to the fact that both issues and candidates cannot possibly be known to the vast majority of voters sufficiently to enable them to cast an intelligent vote.

"It was at this impasse that the League saw its challenges, and organized its program of education.

"So we shall have to admit that women on coming into the right of suffrage have done the unexpected thing. Whereas some of us thought she would swamp the electorate with her enthusiasm, and some that she would eagerly seek office, and some that she would reform our whole political system, the one real thing she has done has been none of these, but to translate into modern equivalents the faith of our founding fathers that 'Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.'"

Dr. Gustave Lippmann, one of the 3-minute speakers from the floor, took a different view of the League of Women Voters. He said the League, instead of instructing women already well informed, should move its quarters from a West End hotel to one of the centers of foreign-born population, where there is need for its services. He suggested Soulard Market.

In the HOLLYWOOD WHIRL

HOLLYWOOD, April 18.

THE greatest premiere of the year, the opening of "The Great Ziegfeld" gave the stars a chance to show off about everything except the culinary arrangements in their homes to each other and, of course, to the assembled multitudes which lined the streets around the theater night before last. St. Louis and the rest of the country had already seen "The Great Ziegfeld," but Hollywood never considers a picture launched until it is displayed here. Also this was occasion of the return of the once famous and much-sung premieres which have rather died down in recent years. The fact that it was not at the old home of such events, Graumann's Theater on the Boulevard, but at an outlying house made no difference to the stars or the autograph collectors. It was a rare opportunity to publicly appear in new evening clothes and wraps and every one made the most of it.

—o—o—

Myrna Loy, who portrayed Billie Burke in the picture, was stunning in white crepe shot with silver. Her wrap was a full length cape of safari brown sealskin and she wore a lei of pink camelias.

—o—o—

CLAUDETTE COLBERT, who arrived with her new husband, was in a printed satin gown with jacket and girdle of lace. Her corsage matched the floral design of her gown.

—o—o—

BARBARA STANWYCK, who came with her constant companion these days, Robert Taylor, and who began the evening by coming face to face with her ex, Frank Fay, for the first time since their divorce without an exchange of greetings, looked stunning in ice-blue chiffon with a full length coat of ermine.

—o—o—

Parasols and crownless hats made of blue celluloid are very popular and really give great protection and relief to the eyes, they tell me.

—o—o—

AS FOR RIDING clothes, Una Merkel has just returned from the desert with so startling an outfit that I doubt if even Hollywood will adopt it. And here it is. Blue dungarees, regular cowboy heeled boots, brilliant plaid linen blouse of green, red and yellow, a three-cornered scarf, also of vivid hues about the neck, and the whole topped by a ten-gallon hat. Can you imagine our Una in all that?

—o—o—

● NORMA SHEARER, who got the most cheers from the outside crowd when she drove up with her husband, Irving Thalberg, looked queenly, as always, in white organdie set off by bandings of black valenciennes lace. The skirt was cut very full and showed groups of tiny tucks. A cape of white fox and a corsage of white orchids completed the costume.

Joan Crawford and her beaming husband, Franchot Tone, arrived about same time. Joan's dress was in striking contrast being of flower colored chiffon pleated from its high necklines to hem. Over this she wore an ermine cape and a cluster of white orchids and valley lillies.

—o—o—

Virginia Bruce—white taffeta frock with full skirt and puff sleeves, and tiny velvet bow trim. White ermine wrap and orchid corsage. Rosalind Russell—shell pink taffeta evening gown with gray taffeta wrap. Corsage of pink camelias and tea roses.

—o—o—

● A FEW NIGHTS ago Pat Ellis, who goes in for sports in a big way whether it be tennis, badminton, or what have you, blew in all full of enthusiasm over a new low-swung sport roadster she had just been out riding in and breathlessly declared she was off buying clothes and was going to save all her salary for the next six months and buy this honey.

"All but sports clothes," she supplemented, for Pat could no more resist the latest sports model in wearing apparel than she can those of automobiles.

The Warren Hulls and Pat had come in for some badminton and Pat as usual was wearing the last word in play suits. It was a "culotte" of pale yellow tent cloth, and a culotte, in case you may never have met one socially, is just a new version of the old divided skirt which hits one at the calf of the leg and takes the place of slacks or shorts.

—o—o—

At Palm Springs I glimpsed lovely Jeanette McDonald in a most attractive and unusual bathing suit. It was of rubberized white satin, and had a fascinating design of Mexican sombreros and joshua trees painted by hand, decorating it.

—o—o—

JEAN HARLOW was getting a nice tan under one of the new transparent rubberized silk beach-capes. These capes are so soft and fine that they can be folded, as Jean obligingly demonstrated, into an ordinary correspondence envelope. But their greatest virtue lies in the claim that this material so filters the sun rays that the wearer turns a nice beautiful tan without the pain of burning. Harlow had already proved the beauty part, and sorry as I was I had not the time to wait and see about the truth of the latter claim.

—o—o—

Gadgets to grow more important and intriguing. Two new types of lipsticks are much used. One having a clip to hold it in place in the bag, and the other has a tiny mirror which flips up into view when the lipstick is pressed out.

—o—o—

STOPPED TO SPEAK to Jean Harlow at Sardis today at lunch. She is busy on her picture but had taken time out to do a little shopping, and holding up her wrist she showed me attached to the cuff a small jeweled clip, in the center of which was a diminutive watch. Looking at the watch was a mistake for me as Jean discovered she must be on her way, and the only other news I could gather from her was that she is having shoes made to wear with her tailored suits of the same suiting and trimmed in contrasting leather.

—o—o—

Mary Carlisle came to a polo match in an entire suit of lightweight suede which is enjoying quite a vogue. The skirt and jacket were white and the blouse was pale yellow with a cowl neckline and tied in back with leather strips. The cleaning of such a suit might seem to present difficulties even in clean California, but Mary told me she just used an ordinary sponge and did the job herself, but in St. Louis that would be something else again.

—o—o—

JOAN BENNETT has certainly hit upon an unusual dress idea. It is no less than having a dress dyed to match her favorite ring which is a very handsome star-sapphire. Joan took the ring to her modiste and they spent hours getting the exact matching shade. This

THE weather man has at last become fashion-conscious. The Lenten season had scarcely closed when he proved himself a kindly and gallant gentleman by switching the temperature from cold to warm so that St. Louis women could look radiant in their Spring attire. He seemed to sense the fact that they were becoming weary of their tailored suits and topcoats and were longing to get into their sheer jacket frocks for daytime and their filmy chiffons after dark.

A social calendar filled with so many after-Easter activities might have been drab, indeed, if there had not been sunshine instead of rain and balmy breezes replacing chilly ones. Starting with Easter Sunday afternoon when many teas and cocktail parties were on schedule throughout the week there has been a fashion parade worth writing about. Its only disappointment to the wearers of lovely clothes was the postponement of last night's Opera Ball which left many new evening gowns hanging in closets and in the fitting rooms of leading shops.

The sub-debs rather than their elders took the center of the fashion stage for evening when the Opera Ball was postponed. Their Spring Assembly Dance at the St. Louis Woman's Club on Friday night brought out a collection of interesting dance frocks. Perhaps the fact that this was a Leap Year party caused the school girls who will be the debs of tomorrow to get into their best formals. Taffetas, moires, chiffons and nets all scored among the fabrics and there were high shades as well as pastels to add variety to the picture.

Miss Sara Jane Avant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest L. Avant, who is sketched at the center of the group, was one of the most cleverly attired at this dance. Her dancing frock was of white taffeta printed in a quaint design of tiny black flowers. The bodice which had a V-shaped neckline and no sleeves was covered with a very short and tight-fitting Eton jacket made of the reversed material, the background being black and the flowers white. Two bright red poppies adorned the front. The skirt was cut on the bias and was floor length. Accents of red were repeated in the T-strap sandals and in the evening wrap of quilted red taffeta.

MISS MARJORIE SHUTT, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Cleveland H. Shutt, sketched above Miss Avant, appeared in white pique, her dress having a square neckline which was rather low at the front and quite low at the back. Epaulets covered the shoulders. Across the front of the neckline was a row of yellow centered daisies and there was a similar row at the waistline. The skirt was bias and quite wide at the hemline.

Emerald green chiffon was chosen by Miss Elaine Wheaton, daughter of Mrs. Charles M. Polk. Her frock was designed along Grecian lines and pleated all over. The bodice was cut with a V-neckline. A gold kid belt and gold slippers were most effective in supplying a contrast to the tone of the dress. Miss Peggy McMahon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard R. McMahon wore pale blue moire, the neckline being shaped into a wide V and the short sleeves being slightly puffed. Skirt fullness was concentrated at the back. A wide-shaped belt of the material was laced together at the front. Silver slippers completed this costume. Pastel blue also was becoming to Miss Carolyn Lansing, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Lansing. Two straps of the moire of which this dress was made went over each shoulder, emphasizing the squareness of the neckline. The skirt was moulded so that the hemline was quite bouffant. A sash of the moire tied at the side. Miss Lansing's slippers were silver-tinted.

A group of debutantes appeared at the Welcome Inn Roundup at the Arena one night in attractive spring attire. There was Miss Vera Virginia Angert, for example, in a dubonnet red silk frock printed in a flower pattern with blue predominating. This had a tunic buttoned at the center front with covered buttons arranged in groups of three. Sleeves were short and pleated at the shoulders. The neckline tied with a tailored bow. A navy blue Breton sailor and navy footwear were attractive with this frock. Miss Angert's topcoat was of pastel green tweed. A sketch of the costume appears at upper right in a panel.

Sketched at left of Miss Angert is Miss Marie Taylor Spink, another debutante who is recognized for her good taste in dress. She was wearing at the roundup a Tyrolian style of topcoat of soft tweed in the new Jack rose tone which was stitched with navy blue. Her hat of the Tyrolian type matched the coat and her slippers were of navy fabric and leather. Especially interesting also was her frock of printed wool challis emphasizing tones of red and blue on a purplish blue background. This shirtwaist dress had a fly front with buttons underneath and a little standing collar.

NOTED also among the debutantes at the roundup were Miss Betty Brown in a turquoise blue tweed suit having a tailored topcoat and Miss Suzanne Bitting in a short jacketed suit of gray sharkskin. Miss Bitting's hat was a coolie beret of black straw topped with a novelty pompon. Baroness Ilona von Schilling, sister of Mrs. Adalbert von Gontard, who has been included in many of the debutante parties also was there. Her costume was of black sheer crepe, the short jacket being accented with revers of red and white handkerchief print. The white blouse was finished with a rather high cowl neckline. A close-fitting hat of black straw was very modish in shape and had a ribbon cockade combining black and red.

A swanky cocktail party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent P. Ring attracted a throng of smartly dressed St. Louisans. Mrs. Ring and Mrs. Richard L. Weingartner who were joined hostesses wore dinner frocks while the guests appeared in good-looking daytime attire. Mrs. Ring's costume was of black marquisette and had dramatic white pleating arranged in rows at the center front. This pleating extended from the neckline to the hemline, giving the dress a shirtwaist appearance. A black patent leather belt fastened with

Hats of Glass

● Spring styles are filled with absurdities which charm while they surprise even the most sophisticated. Those glass hats in which some women are living this season are among the most spectacular of the oddities. Glass dresses and coats are similiarly inclined. The toque which has a bunch of strawberries posed at the center front and the cartwheel with carrots under the brim cause a smile in spite of envious eyes. Artificial buttercups, carnations and violets which cover some chapeux are rivaled by real posies that adorn more daring millinery.

The little hat which unfastens at the back and lies flat for packing or ironing, the boutonnaire which looks like a frilled paper doily, but turns out to be starched lace, and the glove which wears a watch on its wrist are other oddities of the year.

NEW YORK, April 18.

THERE are two schools of thought about Edgar Montillion Woolley—one cleaving to the thesis that his whiskers are his chief claim to immortality; the other that his prodigious talent for roaring like a lion will identify him to future and gaping generations. Either one would be sufficient recommendation in a society all too deficient both in the field of whiskers and roarers, but, combine these assets with the amiable personality of a very considerable raconteur and a professional man of the theater who knows every one of account on the American stage scene as a personal friend, and one has, in Monte Woolley, the basis for a formidable and characteristic legend. Even before he raised his celebrated pink and white beard (and this seems to bear out the claim of the partisans of roaring) Monte was so popular with the undergraduates of Yale as their director of dramatics that when the university corporation found an unwanted successor they set up a screaming and howling on their own account which made life even more miserable than before for the harassed President Angell. Yale politics contrived to get rid of Monte, although only after fearful tumults and universal condemnation of the corporation and Monte became almost overnight an important figure in the larger world of the theater. He was associated with the production of "Fifty Million Frenchmen," did the staging of "Jubilee" and is the close friend of the inimitable Cole Porter. Now for the first time he is on the professional stage as a player in Dwight Deere Wiman's "On Your Toes" at the Imperial, and very well worth your while, too, if you are asking us. Yales at whom Monte roared and snarled as undergraduates packed the house on opening night, hoping he would muff a line. He didn't.

THE apparent misanthropy of the cab drivers on the Fifty-ninth street hack rank has always been a subject which engrossed our curiosity. We lunched last Sunday at our favorite table of the world, the middle one on the north side of the Plaza Cafe, and even a boned shad broiled with peaches and a strawberry tart for dessert, not to mention the presence of Bob Benchley and an amazing platoon of progeny, all with crew haircuts, at the next table couldn't keep us from watching the half dozen aging gaffers with their victorias across the street. Pat Rafferty wasn't there. Out to lunch or something. But most of the regulars were: the one with the eyeglasses and black and white muffler; the one with the horse that is droopiest of all; the erect old warrior with yellow mustaches, steeple crowned hat and handsome coffee-colored nag that is filled with animation, and the one with the new blue coachman's coat and topper as shiny as that of a St. Thomas' deacon who brushes his herdic out every five minutes with a whisk broom. Their lack of sociability was amazing. They didn't converse, and they didn't engage in badinage with the policeman on duty.

ONE of them saluted a peanut vendor in a sort of abstracted way and, one and all, they glared fiercely at potential customers who were darting timid looks at their rigs. A stern and unbending race, the vanishing jehu, we concluded, his mellow juices turned to vinegar by fate and the declining times. His only gesture, aside from gloomy contemplation of an ungracious world, the occasional readjustment on his nag of a dubious buffalo robe; his only indulgence a vast contempt for the shabby devisings of progress.

More than anything else, the native New York executive and business man dwells in a state of terror of visiting firemen. Buyers, correspondents, territorial representatives and affiliated professional folk who come to town once or twice a year with a gleam in their eye and no vaguest intention of ever going to bed while there is a honkey tonk open, populate his most fearsome nightmares and are probably responsibe for more nervous collapses than the market, the income tax and wife trouble put together. Partly, of course, the fault lies with the New Yorker himself. After a fortnight of such wahoowahing and glass smashing as he never dreams of under ordinary circumstances, he pushes his friends into the Century, bound for home and 50 weeks of recovery, with the assurance that the entertainment has been nothing, "just a segment out of our ordinary life in New York," he says, and the firemen mutter that they don't see how he does it, but plan even more riotous sarabands on their next

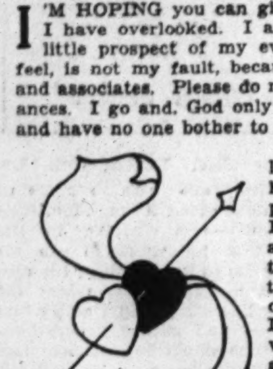
MY OPINION

by Martha Carr

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I'M HOPING you can give me some new angle on my problem that I have overlooked. I am a stranger in St. Louis and there seems little prospect of my ever being anything but a stranger. This, I feel, is not my fault, because it is not my nature. I long for friends and associates. Please do not tell me to go to church to make acquaintances. I go and, God only knows, how cold it is to go time after time and have no one bother to speak or bow.



We are a Western family by birth but lived in the East for a number of years. My husband is a Ph. D. from Princeton, and a professional man, connected with a large St. Louis organization. The men of this concern are friendly, but there never has been any attempt, so I understand, at sociability among the women of the families. And, of course, one cannot force people to come to see one. I am an ex-teacher and interested in the various welfare groups. In the East I gave a day or two a week to such groups, Red Cross, etc., but I have never met anyone here belonging to them so haven't been asked to help. If there is a garden club in Maplewood or Clayton where one can join, I should like to know of it.

Is it customary in St. Louis when people urge a newcomer to drop by and see them, to do so? I have had this experience, but not naving met the wife of these households, I have not accepted, of course.

I've seen St. Louis and its places of interest more thoroughly than the natives. I read and go to various affairs in the city where the admission charge is the only requirement. I often enjoy a friendly chat with someone who happens to sit at a table in a tea room. I am not a snob. I can easily chat with the butcher, the baker and the candle-stick maker. But I do long for acquaintances to make life more interesting. I've found the old families of Boston and Connecticut more friendly than St. Louisans. LONESOME.

I have heard St. Louis accused of this a number of times, but I believe the criticism does not apply to St. Louis more than to other large cities. The life of the average woman in all large cities is a rush. And while she may be utterly unconscious of any unfriendliness, naturally, in her hurry and because the demands upon her time, unless her attention is attracted, either through mutual acquaintance or through a joint interest, she does not single out anyone for attention and she grows rather careless, one might say, of the gentilities which might mean so much to a newcomer.

But I believe you are making a mistake in waiting to know people before offering your services to civic and charitable groups. That is your responsibility. If you would like to acquaint yourself with the possibilities in this line, write to the St. Louis Community Council, 2221 Locust street, sending 50 cents for their very complete directory of these groups. You'll find at least a dozen that will interest you so much you will find it hard to choose.

If you are interested in cultural groups, like the Women's Auxiliary to the St. Louis Symphony Society, the Shakespeare Tercentenary, the St. Louis Woman's Club—to mention only a few—you have, I am sure, the credentials which will admit you.

But you are absolutely right in not accepting these "drop-by-sometime" invitations from anyone, and certainly not from the male members of the family, although their intentions are the best in the world. This is no more customary in St. Louis than elsewhere. A little patience, the right kind of reserve, and activities such as I have mentioned will, I am sure give you the companionship later of those whom you would enjoy.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM contemplating a trip this summer to Pennsylvania and New York. Since you are so kind to help others out with the questions of travel and clothes, I am wondering if you will help me. I am driving with friends and will not need any formal or evening clothes at all. We are to leave the first of June.

Miss

Miss Martha Carr, St. Louis, Mo.

Carr.

I have a navy blue silk dress, rather tailored, a navy off-the-face hat in straw, gray polo coat, navy linen suit, pink cotton cord lace dress, tan dress of the same, tailored. Navy slippers and white ones and would like a white felt tailored hat? What else should I take? I read your column every night and find it very interesting and helpful. Success to you. THELMA.

You can use these clothes you mention, though one cord lace dress is sufficient. But remember that June can be very hot in Eastern cities as well as in St. Louis, and so I suggest that you add a thin print street frock to harmonize in color with the navy blue and gray, though, of course, it should have a gay dash of some other color, perhaps red, and you might indulge in an extra purse of this dash and an extra hat (one with brim over the eyes) of the same bright shade or trimmed with it. You will be wise to buy the print with very light weight navy coat, crepe or sheer to match. A redingote ensemble will solve the problem. As you may go to the shore or on the water, your navy linen suit and gray coat can be worn with the white hat and shoes and gloves, or gray sports shoes if they are of the sports type. You are going to large cities; why not wait until you get there to see if you are obliged to have some of these extras, then buy them. Perhaps you could do without the extra brimmed hat, the extra purse, but not without the print frock.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM A young fellow 23 years old, in love and badly in need of advice. My occupation is flying. I have over 500 flying hours to my credit, and it has been the bane of my life.

The girl I am engaged to, and also my mother, object to this career for me. Unwillingly, I may give up the air, but if I do so my other interest is in the line of mechanical motors and appliances. And you know there is quite a bit of dirt acquired with such work and my fiancee has just about told me to "wash my greasy hands of the whole business." What am I supposed to do? I am not trained nor educated for a white collar job. Even if I were, I'm not certain I would receive employment. What I earn now is through machinery. Giving that a toss would leave me helpless. I am sure the girl means well, but don't you think she should try to see things my way? Should I seek something else or must I convince her that I am what I am? How can I do this? Thanking you for your looked-for advice.

FLYING BLIND.

I think perhaps the girl is allowing her fastidiousness to blind her judgment. You might cater a little to this, possibly, by being a little more careful about your ablutions, and the general condition of hands and clothes. We know that such work inevitably smears hands and clothing; but special garments, sometimes special gloves and protection can be used. Certainly you should take every precaution to appear, when you visit her, as well-groomed as possible (you might be, for all I know, pretty careless since you are so interested in your work. Your writing paper is none too neat.) Give up the work for which you are really fitted? Not at all. I know of a number of cases of young men whose minds and whose talents lie in mechanical work; one who is a positive genius. With the foolish false pride of some mothers, they have been sent to colleges to do academic work. They had neither the aptitude nor the interest to apply to it and the consequence is the old story of the round peg in a square hole. They are drifters and ne'er-do-wells. Our talents and gifts lie with a higher Power; hence it is for us to make the most of them and not to waste or attempt to defeat them.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

Are Illusions Beautiful and Sacred Things?

Or Is It Really the Greater Tragedy to Return Them After Maturity.

By Elsie Robinson

SO someone, or something, has "wrecked your illusions"—

Shattered those fairy-tale notions that have spread their shimmering veil between you and harsh reality since the days of your youth. And you're broken-hearted—yes?

Worse than that, you're bitter. For you've always believed that illusions were sacred things—on a par with a belief in God—and that it was a crime to destroy them.

But you might as well get over that belief right now, stranger, for no more mischievous lie ever crippled the human spirit—or softened the human spine.

Illusiones are NOT sacred.

Illusions are Not beautiful.

ILLUSIONS ARE SIMPLY ANOTHER, PRETTIER NAME FOR DELUSIONS — THE SOONER THEY ARE SHATTERED, THE BETTER FOR YOU AND FOR THOSE WHO MUST LIVE WITH YOU.

Yes, I know how lovely illusions can seem. I have clung to plenty in my time. I know, too, how they can pad existence for us—shield us from the things we dread to know or face—coddle our cowardice and conceit.

But therein lies their very viciousness. For no two-fisted human being, male or female, has a right to a padded or coddled existence—and no PROUD human being would knowingly desire or endure it.

"The illusions of our youth"—how reverently we speak of them; how we grieve when we lose them—and what a swell alibi their loss provides for all our future cussedness!

But it's as tragic to retain the illusions of your youth after reaching maturity as it would be to retain your baby teeth or to toddle. And the grown man or woman who insists on retaining his or her sentimental illusions is as crippled as any idiot? As perverted as any drug addict—and as much a menace to the public at large.

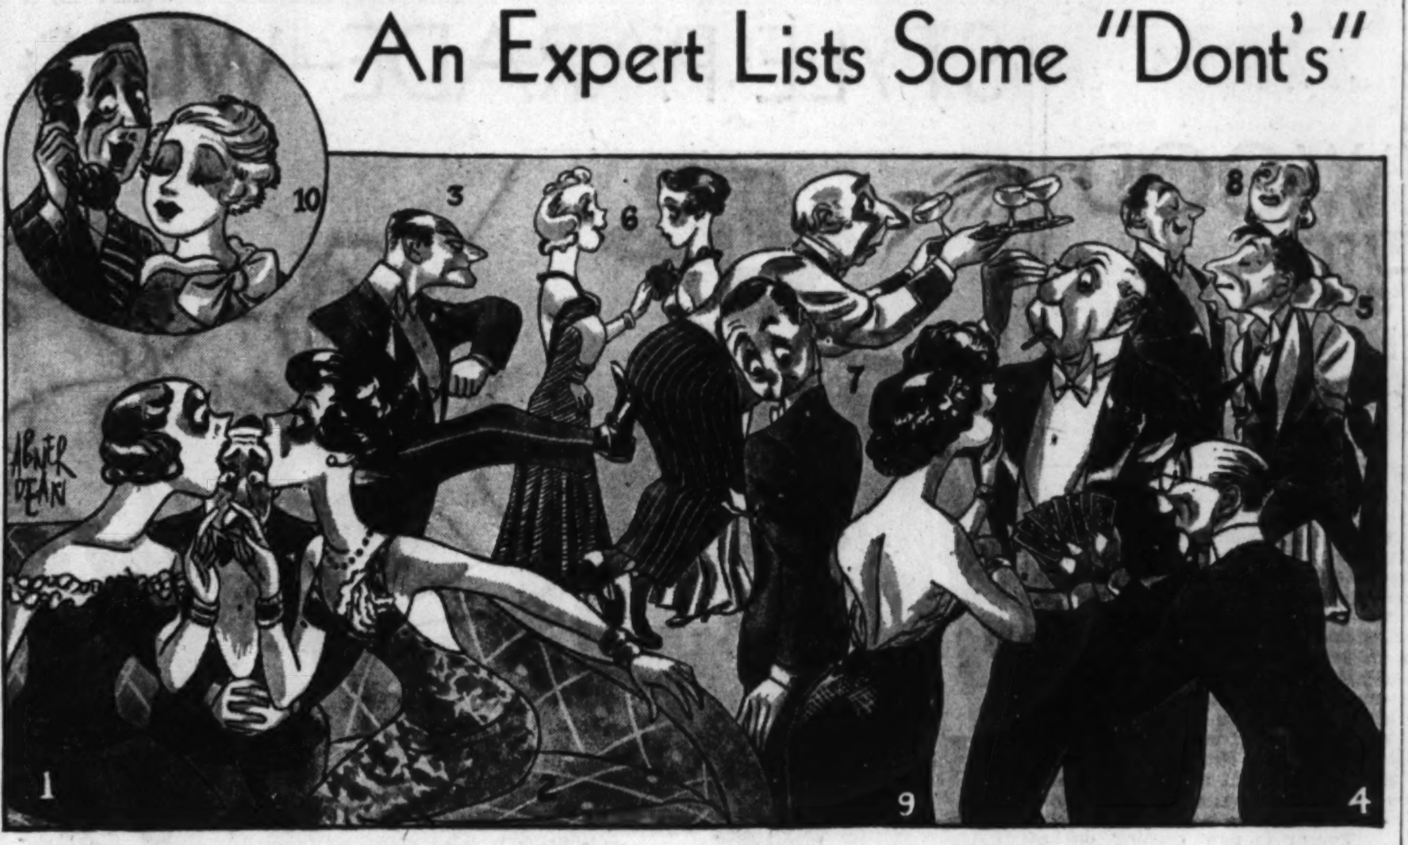
A harsh philosophy? Yet 1000 years ago it was voiced by a battling saint—Paul of Tarsus:

"When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things."

Illusions are "childish things." These adolescent notions that all men are 100 per cent brave and chivalrous and all women 100 per cent pure and tender—and if they aren't you won't play—are as childish and as dangerous in a grown man or woman as a belief in witches, ogres or wishing wells.

Stop living in fairy tales. Stop hiding your head in dreams. Dare to stand upright as a man and face life as it is—not as your ignorance or fear, sentimentality or conceit would wish it to be.

Ten Ways to Social Suicide— An Expert Lists Some "Dont's"



By Dorothy Ducas

KEY TO SOCIAL ERROR CHART

1 and 2—Excluding others from talk. Failing to give your name. 3—Rudeness to subordinates. 4—Inattention to performers. 5—Chronic tardiness. 6—Criticizing another's clothes. 7—Staring is to be deplored. 8—Gossiping. 9—Saying you know somebody important when you really don't. 10—Breaking dates at the last minute.

NEXT time someone comes up to you and says, simpering, "You don't remember me, do you?" banish your feelings of helplessness, and reply: "No, I don't." He (or she) deserves it. For anyone who would perpetrate this on you is guilty of the first of the ten most flagrant social sins, according to Mrs. William R. K. Taylor Jr., New York society leader.

Mrs. Taylor, who was Elsie Lathrop of California and London, before her marriage to the broker-son of an old Baltimore family, says the people of whom you expect the best social behavior are nearly always the worst offenders, and it's time someone taught them the niceties of civilized living.

If you are really well-mannered, you don't have to obey rules, but can get along merely by letting decent instincts guide you, urges the vivacious brunette, who sometimes sings as Kathleen Barrie, and was Park Avenue's first professional among the socialites.

But decent instincts are as rare among Park Avenuites as snowflakes in May. Mrs. Taylor has ceased being surprised by that.

"I decided to start a campaign to make people announce themselves," confided Mrs. Taylor, snuggling in a big arm chair in her apartment that, to use her own words, "faces on Park Avenue even if its entrance is on the side street.

"They ought to say when they come into a group—'I am Elsie Taylor, so glad to see you.' Often you forget names, even with people you know well and think of by their first names alone. A hostess with a big crowd is apt to get confused.

"This business of keeping track of a woman's names, when she is married so many times, is impossible. My husband and I were at a dinner the other night where, of eight couples, we were the only ones who had been married once. Two of the couples had been married twice and the others three times or more. Now how can you remember all the names of people like that?

"I'm in favor of everybody introducing themselves when they are at a private party. Americans are more formal about this than the English. I have known Americans to go to London and the poor souls stand around and won't speak to anyone until they've been introduced, when English people assume that if they are all in a room together they ought to get acquainted without help from the hostess."

BUT if namelessness is the cardinal sin, excluding people from a conversation is a close runner-up. This Mrs. Taylor called a "cruel" social fault. To mention personalities everyone doesn't know, recall good times of years ago when some of those present were not in the crowd, and do the hundred-and-one things that can make a stranger feel luke a bump on a log is, to the mind of this crusading matron, as bad as turning your back directly on a member of a party.

"Women do it more than men," she declared, "especially young women, flappers. How difficult it is for out-of-town girls to take part in conversations led by these offenders."

Fault number three is "rudeness to subordinates." It's to be taught as a sin to the younger generation—then maybe it will disappear. Mrs. Taylor has already started with her son and daughter, who are not allowed to speak crossly to servants or waiters on any occasion.

"This fault is not as prevalent as it was 10 years ago," she admitted. "But shop girls are still criticised for something they can't help, and head waiters are bawled out for keeping people waiting. Sometimes I think the glassy stare most society people give servants is rudeness in itself."

Fault four, inattention to performers either in public or private, Elsie Taylor characterized as "definitely a Park avenue trait." She noticed it particularly at the opening of the Russian room in the St. Regis Hotel, where a white-tie audience made it difficult to hear anything above the babble of conversation. And even when the inimitable Bee Lillie was doing her stuff at a night club recently, one couple talked so loudly Miss Lillie turned to look at them reprovingy.

"I've been terribly embarrassed," said Mrs. Taylor. "We had a guest in our home not long ago ourselves, Marion Chase, the former night club singer, who is now married and whom we coaxed to sing for us. Will you believe it, one of the guests persisted in talking to two men while Marion was performing—and she did it even when shushed!"

Fault five is the oft-lamented one of chronic tardiness, which has led smart set hostesses for years to serve many dishes that can be cooked after all dinner guests are assembled. There seems to be no help for it, although campaigns have been started before.

Offering criticism of someone's clothes or person is Fault Number Six. You know the sort of thing—

"Why did you ever buy that hat?" and "I think I liked your hair better with the curls in the back" and "My, you're getting lumpy."

There's one of these in every circle, sometimes a member of the family and sometimes someone you hardly know. She (it's usually a she) excuses herself by saying: "I'm so frank!" but there is no real excuse, according to Mrs. Taylor.

Staring is the seventh fault in the Taylor category. Staring with raised eyebrows at something out of the ordinary. Staring with a craning of the neck to see what someone is wearing. Staring just to put a person "out of countenance."

Fault Number Eight is gossiping. Oh, no; it's not absent in the big cities where people are supposed to live side by side without knowing beans about each other. In fact, among city people gossip is most rife the higher you go.

SAYING you know somebody important when you really don't is not only Social Fault Number Nine, common among the socially prominent, but it's a sign of uneasiness about social position. It means that the person making the claim wants to appear to be someone, and has to bask in the sunshine of another's importance to make the grade. If you do it, Mrs. Taylor believes, you are pretty sure to get caught.

The Tenth and last fault, a grievous one, is breaking dates at the last minute. This is chiefly a masculine fault, glory be.

"A man calls at 8 and says he can't dine at 8:30," said Mrs. Taylor. "You always feel it's because he has got a better date.

"Yes, men are pretty bad at breaking dates, although they are offenders under Fault Numbers Three and Four, too. In general, however, I'd say women are worse than men. And it's among the women you hear all the talk about correct social behavior!"

Artistic Pottery

The gayety which dominates women's fashions is becoming more apparent in home furnishings as summer approaches. When formal parties give place to informality and the supper table is set on the veranda or the lawn as often as it is in the dining room, bright pottery is the delight of the hostess.

Inexpensive ware that taxes the artistry of one who likes to delve into odd color schemes is on display in the shops of St. Louis. To be very swanky, a table should be set with a variety of different shades of the pattern. A cup, for example, must have a matching saucer and if the plate appears in a third hue so much the better. Red, yellow, blue, green, orange and violet are the shades which are shown most extensively. The shape of many pieces is as unique as the color harmonies.

Strawberry Syrup

Nice to have for flavoring in milk shakes, icings, candy and as a fruit syrup for French pancakes next winter when strawberries are no more. Make a syrup of two pounds sugar and one pint of water by boiling two minutes and skimming. Cool. Mash ripe berries through a bag until you have a quart of juice. Now boil the cooled sugar syrup until it forms a soft ball in water. Add strawberry juice and bring to a boil. Skim, chill, bottle and seal.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

by Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, April 18.

EASTER arrived, precisely on schedule, and with the joyous feast Marie Brennig approaches the very peak of her bride season. From now until the end of June Miss Marie will be up to the armpits in twittering maidens seeking advice on the fine art of getting married beautifully yet economically.

Miss Marie, though she has never faced the parson herself, has sent some 2000 brides smiling on their way to the altar in the past six years—a record to daunt the marryingest minister. She advises the girls on their nuptial finery under whatever budget their circumstances demand.

Miss Brennig tells me her unique and valuable enterprise was depression-born, like so many. Mad about weddings and brides since childhood, she felt sorry for the girls forced by bad times to cut down on their bridal toggery. As she had spent some years organizing braid shops in Fifth avenue stores, she was an expert on how to get the best veil and most orange blossoms for the money.

"I like brides because they are always happy," Miss Marie tells me. "They float into my office on pink clouds, and I float them along to the altar on clouds of chiffon. I may marry some day—just now I have my brides to tend!"

The long, slender, useless looking hand is no longer the greatest thing in life, according to Peggy Sage, who knows more about hands, probably, than anyone in America. The hand to be desired, these days, is one that is graceful and perfectly kept—yet which looks as though it does things!

Peggy, whose life for years has been devoted to keeping Gotham's paddies beautiful, believes that it is a sign of our times that the practical hand is now considered the most attractive. Though the hand of Alice Duer Miller, the writer, is long, it has accomplished millions of salesable words, and looks businesslike. Janet Olcott, though a deb, is an accomplished pianiste, and works hard at it. Her hand is small and plump—with fingernails cut short.

The swanlike hand, so beloved in our grandmammas' day, is no longer sighed over. Give us mitts that are lovely—and useful, too!

FAY GILLIS WELLS, war correspondent just back from Addis Ababa, brought home a baby leopard, which she has been lugging around with her to welcome-home teas. When he is nine months old, Ole Debill Zoo will get him—at present he is making hearty meals of hotel rugs.

GLADYS PARKER, enfant terrible of designers, gave a fashion show the other day. Rube Goldberg, cartoonist and wit, took one look at her flapper face and her great mop of flaming hair and said, "Good gosh, girl, you look like an exploding cocoanut!"

AGNES WRIGHT, wife of Editor Richardson Wright of "House and Garden," gets a diamond from her husband each year—on their wedding anniversary. To date she has 20 beauties, and a beatiful bracelet growing annually. She's a frantic flower-lover. This year, she gave up an extensive spring wardrobe to put the money into a new garden!

BETH BROWN, whose stories you know, hurled a cocktail party the other day at her Riverside Drive home to hail the advent of her latest novel. Oh, yes — the name of the tome is "Riverside Drive"! —Katherine Cornell, who, with the Lunts, is Gotham's theatrical passion, has just turned over $336 to that grand charity, The Actors' Fund of America. She charges 50 cents apiece for autographed photographs, but pays for the pictures herself. The proceeds all go to the poor, old, sick members of her profession. Grand?

This is the story of The First Lady and the Amateur Fiddler from Arkansas — as winning a human interest yarn as has passed these alert ears in months. Not long ago, lunching at the Biltmore, Mrs. Roosevelt was approached by a man with a sad story. He said he was from Arkansas, and would give anything for some sort of a job so he could stay in New York.

During the luncheon she mentioned the case to Dorothy Shaver, vice-president of a Fifth Avenue store. "I'm from Arkansas, too," said Dorothy. "We'll have him come to the store, and find out about him." The next day the Arkansas traveler turned up. It was learned that he was an amateur violinist who had hitch-hiked his way hither to fiddle on a radio amateur hour. But his fiddling found no favor, and he was stranded. Dorothy, and an other fellow-Arkansan at the store, clipped in and bought him a ticket home. So, clutching his Ozark Strad, the man from Arkansas rode gaily back again—on the cushions!

THIS is the flowery season in our stone canyons—never have so many blooms been seen on the streets. Yet our famous florist, Mr. Max Schling, lover of posies though he is, utters words of warning about their overuse.

Some of his maxims: Don't wear such huge corsages that they distract attention from your own charms. Never have tinsel and ribbon about orchid stems—the orchid is so gorgeous it needs no fussy adornment. Don't wear flowers that are too dramatic—poinsettias, African daisies, bird of paradise. Stick to the simple, homey, old-fashioned nosegays. Carnations are fine."

With these wise words, Mr. Schling sold another orchid.

● It beats all—especially the men-folks—how women are getting in everywhere. Our daddies used to tell us of the astounding wit and wisdom of such impromptu speakers as Chauncey Depew, in the days when gals weren't even allowed at public dinners. The other night I listened avidly to the finest living after-dinner talker—a woman, and no less a woman than Anna Steese Richardson, author and editor, and spry as a cricket at 71! Mrs. Richardson was speaking at the dinner honoring 24 men of achievement during the current year, and naturally was one of the honorees. She was also the oldest. The youngest was Doris Byrno, brilliant New York State lawyer and legislator at 30, and a gallant battler for all legislation affecting the welfare of women.

Frenzied fashions, either to adopt or chuckle at:

Paris is now sending us feathered vests. If you fancy the robin you can wear a weskit of red feathers, or of yellow if the humble canary is your pash. There's even a blue-green one to represent the haughty peacock.

So get ready to chirp, girls! The world grows goofier!

Anne Nichols, the girl who wrote and produced "Abie's Irish Rose" nearly 15 years ago and made $5,000,000 from it, is on Broadway again with a new play, her first in years. She's done 30 altogether. Looks grand, too . . . The prettiest name in New York "Society" is Donna Marina Torlonia. But my favorite is Miss Gretchen Uppercu.

ON BROADWAY

with Walter Winchell

Letter from Jim Tully

MANY people wonder, Walter, what I see along Hollywood Boulevard. An old Frenchman, named Fabre, saw a universe in a nest of insects. I never thought how this sounded until I wrote it. For me, the Boulevard has more interest than Broadway. It hasn't the numbers, of course, but one gets closer to the bubbles who rise and fall; and we have our snobs. Lucifer was one in Heaven. But the leveling process is so terrific that humility is somewhere in the makeup of the more successful people. Now that "The Great Ziegfeld" is clicking in your burg—they are reviving anecdotes about The Great Guy.

JIM TULLY.

There was the time when he knew his days were numbered. Sidney, his faithful valet, hadn't been paid for nearly six months—so broke was Flo. . . . The valet never squawked about that, though.

One dreary night Ziegfeld sent for Sidney. "I wish," he said sadly, "I could leave you more than this." It was a wallet. After the funeral Sidney opened it. . . . It contained two I. O. U.'s!

—o—o—

There appears to be a to-do out here about the picture. There usually is when it is a click. This time, "Little Egypt," the only koochy dancer who worked at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893, is said to be fussing from the convent where she is now. Although there have been many "Little Egypts" she was the only one at that Fair—pictured in the film. She doesn't want any money or anything like that in the threatened action—she merely wants to injunction the whole thing and keep it from the public.

—o—o—

Any columnist should know that Florence Nightingale was a heroine during the Crimean War. At any rate, they recently decided that a movie should be screened about the brave woman. When the subject came up several firms wanted to do it. Warner's and Metro had to submit it to Will Hays for arbitration. . . . Suddenly came the word that Jock Whitney's man, Dave Selznick, also wanted to film it.

"Why should Selznick want to do it?" Hays is alleged to have argued, "he hasn't any singers under contract!"

—o—o—

● WE'VE GOT A COP out here, Walter, named Earl Reed. If he were at Forty-fourth and Fifth avenue in your town he would be considered just a friendly fellow. Out our way it's different. He was shot three times a few weeks ago and next year he is liable to be one of the leading actors in the films. Until Reed came to Vine and Hollywood Boulevard, no cop remained there long. Reed's been there going on eight years—doing his duty unflinchingly among a lot of children who hate to be reprimanded. Talk about service with a smile. It will never be completely exemplified until Reed gives you a ticket. He'd be polite to the hangman.

Bill Mizner was with Mark Kelly and me one night when he told the one about Reed having two burglars on the corner waiting for the wagon. A movie director, thinking he was on a set, made a wrong turn. Reed, according to Bill Mizner, left the burglars standing there and went to give a tag to the director.

Now Reed's version differs from Bill's. He claims that he said to them: "Now I've known you boys a long time when you were both doing good as actors. So just stay right here and talk about yourselves until I come back." They were both playing Hamlet when he returned. He took them to jail.

—o—o—

All fine sports writers become attached to fighters. They revel in the game. That's why sports writing is above the average.

When I covered the Baer-Carnera fight with Damon Runyon he turned to me while Carnera was bouncing. . . . "What round is this, Jim?" "It's the ninth." "You're crazy," says Damon, "it's the eighth." It was the eleventh.

—o—o—

● BUT LET'S FOCUS on that best detective on the West Coast. . . . Lefty James. He can pick a "rogues' gallery" face out of any crowd. Lefty has a sort of roving commission. He never reports anywhere so far as I know. He never carries a gun. I recall one night how a big gunman was taken by Lefty to a vacant lot. The gunman had said something, and Lefty made him settle it "man to man." After it was over Lefty came back and watched a prize fight. Only three men knew.

It is useless for a "wanted guy" to try to get on a train if Lefty is at the depot. He has more faces stamped in his brain than a pawnbroker has watches.

—o—o—

And we have tales that would thrum in the heart of Balzac.

Jim Cruze and Tom Geraghty were in a humorous mood. They decided to call the Central Casting Bureau and ask that an extra be sent to have dinner with them. He must be in full dress.

He reported at seven that evening, was seated at the place of honor, while Cruze and Geraghty solemnly entertained him.

The meal over, Cruze signed his ticket in order that he might collect his seven dollars and half as an extra.

Both men were silent after he had gone. The extra had once been a famous name in Hollywood.

—o—o—

● I SAW "Boy Meets Girl." It is the funniest travesty on these birds yet. One of the gags in it is a convulser, and I am sure you will burn a little when I tell you how it was burgled the other night on the radio. There must be a law about such things, kid. When you and Runyon beef about the thieves cribbing your stuff, although the copyright line is conspicuously put at the head of the column, that isn't enough. Nor is a good sock to their jaws. If I ever write anything good enough for them to theft—they'd better don't. Anyway, that gag in "Boy Meets Girl," when one of the wags uses the ham's hospital room phone to call a guy in Paris. When the hambo growls about someone using his phone the clown says: "All right, all right—here's your nickel!"

Bob Hope, Teddy Bergman and their authors used it practically word for word on the networks the other night. If they don't see this—will you please send it and don't give them my regards?

JIM TULLY.

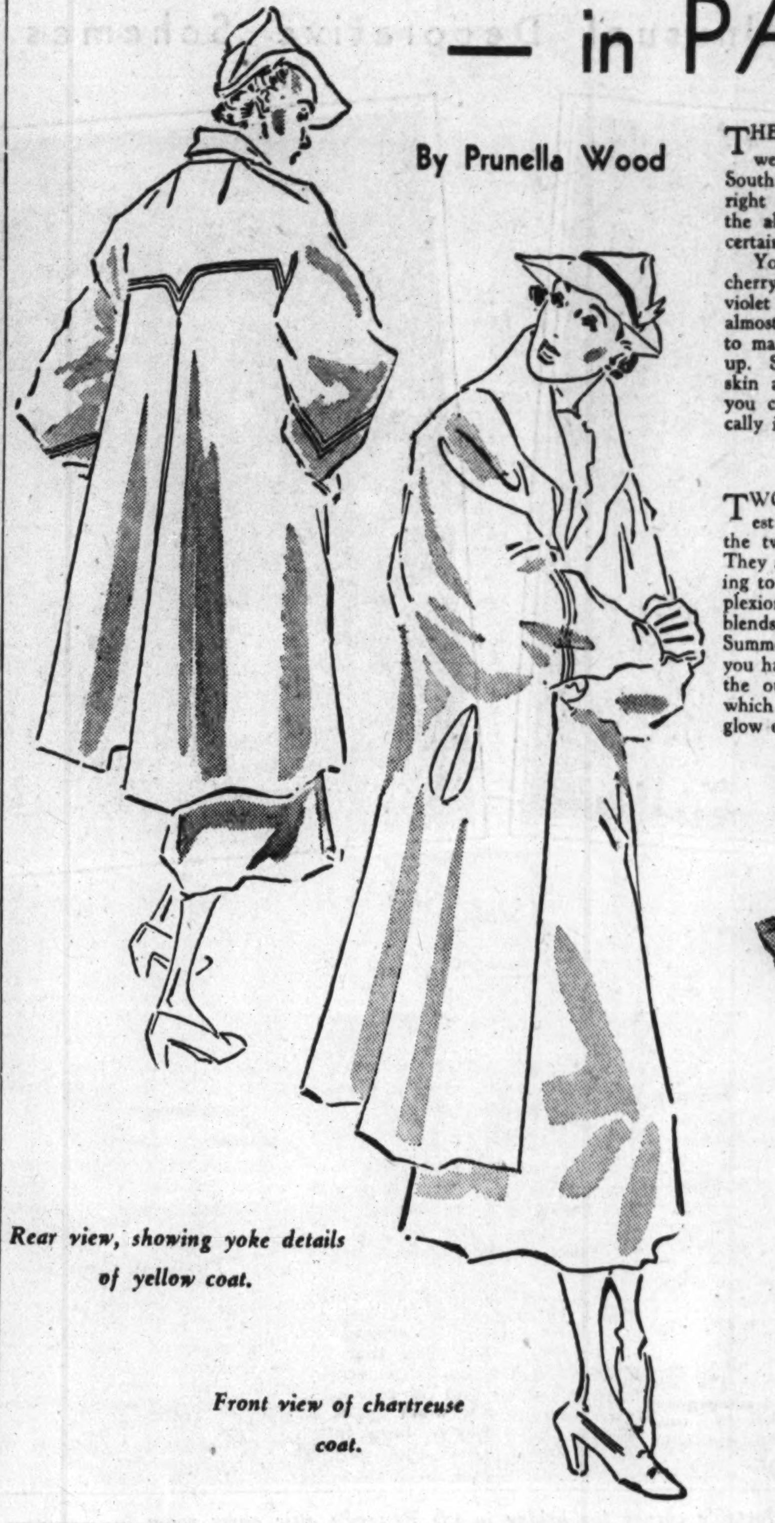
CLOSE-UP of ST. LOUIS FASHIONS

GETTING the ANGORA — in PASTEL

By Prunella Wood



Rear view, showing yoke details of yellow coat.

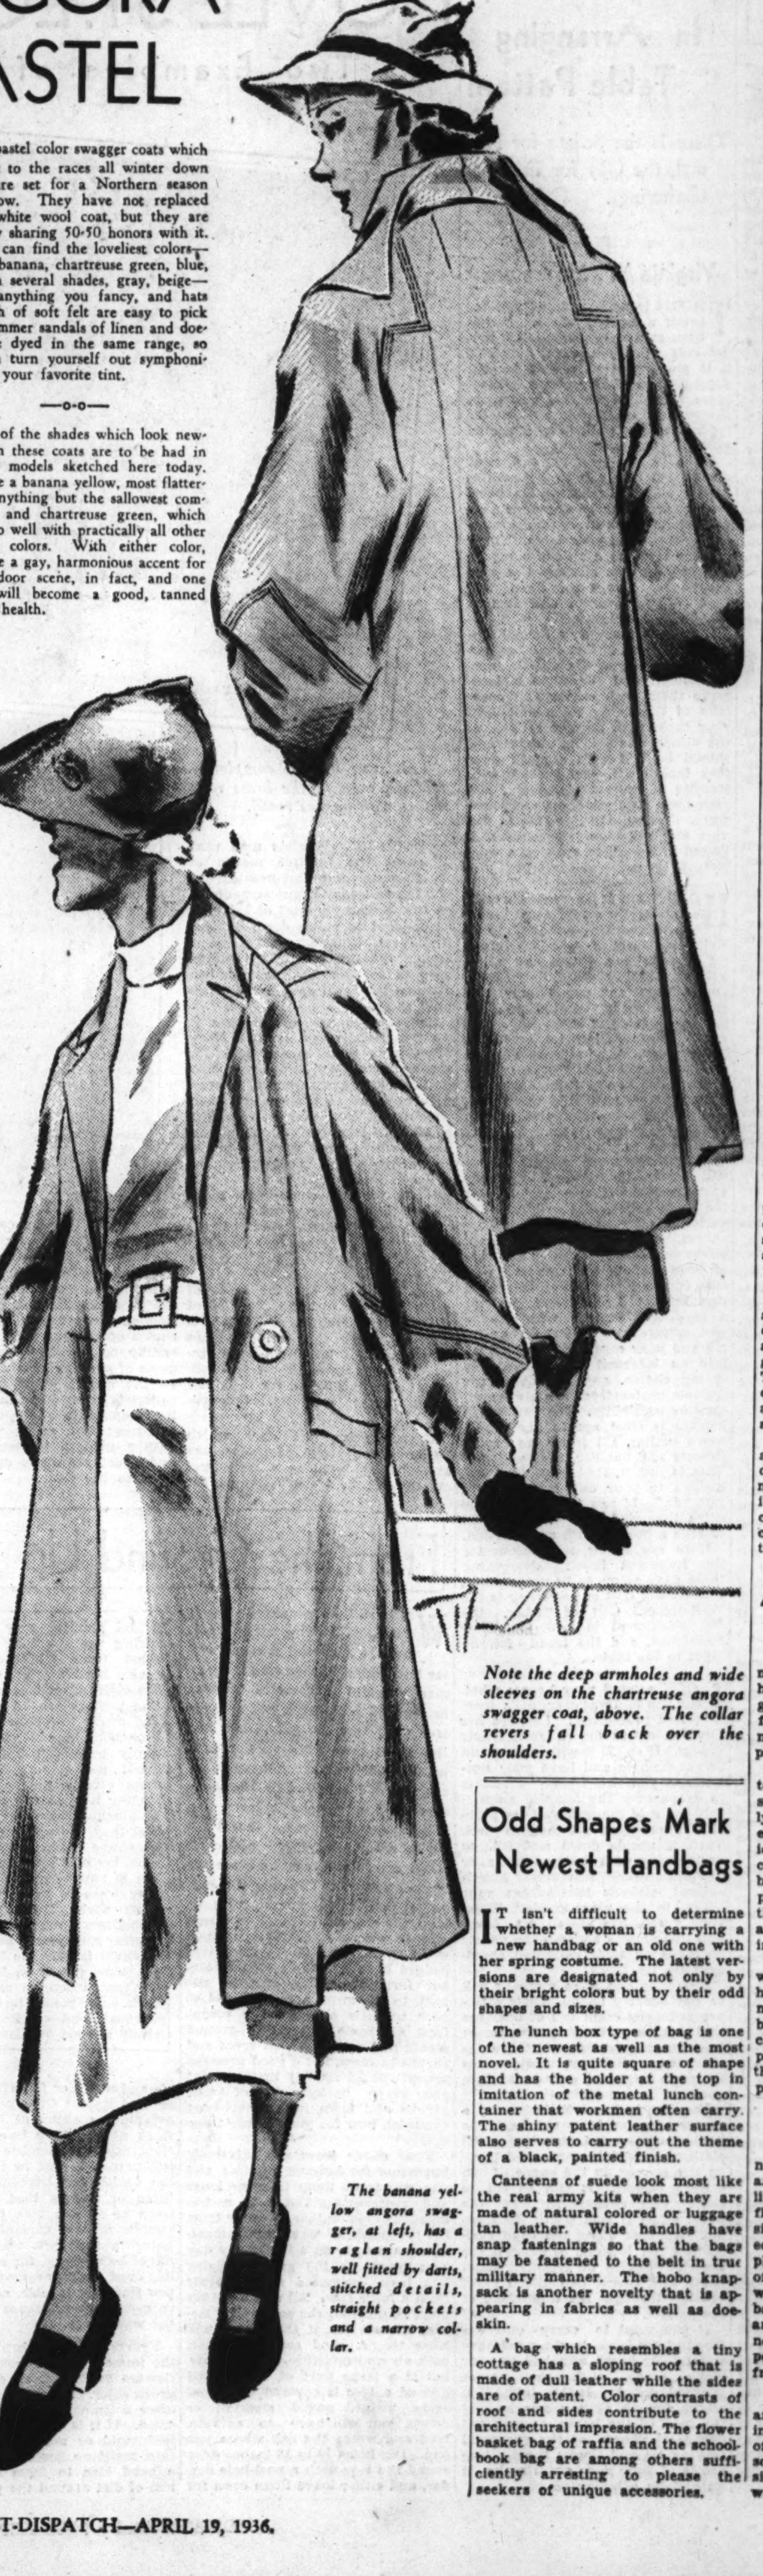
Front view of chartreuse coat.

THE pastel color swagger coats which went to the races all winter down South are set for a Northern season right now. They have not replaced the all-white wool coat, but they are certainly sharing 50-50 honors with it.

You can find the loveliest colors—cherry, banana, chartreuse green, blue, violet in several shades, gray, beige—almost anything you fancy, and hats to match of soft felt are easy to pick up. Summer sandals of linen and doeskin are dyed in the same range, so you can turn yourself out symphonically in your favorite tint.

—o-o—

TWO of the shades which look newest in these coats are to be had in the two models sketched here today. They are a banana yellow, most flattering to anything but the sallowest complexion, and chartreuse green, which blends so well with practically all other Summer colors. With either color, you have a gay, harmonious accent for the outdoor scene, in fact, and one which will become a good, tanned glow of health.



Note the deep armholes and wide sleeves on the chartreuse angora swagger coat, above. The collar revers fall back over the shoulders.

The banana yellow angora swagger, at left, has a raglan shoulder, well fitted by darts, stitched details, straight pockets and a narrow collar.

THE FASHION PARADE

What St. Louisans Are Wearing

a brilliant buckle. Mrs. Weingartener's frock also followed the general shirtwaist trend although it was of aquamarine toned lace over the same shade of taffeta. It had a high collar of the taffeta which fastened with a tailored bow, a wide stitched belt of taffeta and buttons of the same material extending from neckline to hemline.

Navy blue predominated among the shades worn by the guests and sheer fabrics were much in evidence. Mrs. Dale Stanza, who is sketched at extreme left, was one of those who wore a navy sheer costume. It was a jacket frock having cape-like sleeves on the coat, and trimming of blue and white checked silk at the neckline and belt of the dress. Mrs. Stanza's hat was a modified mushroom type of baku straw adorned with a tiny bunch of blue cornflowers and a navy veil. Her ties were of blue gabardine trimmed with matching leather.

Another very chic costume was that of Mrs. J. Carl Anderon. It was a bolero suit of navy blue woolen worn with a frilly white blouse. White pleating edged with Valenciennes lace framed the neckline and front of this blouse. An unusual three-cornered sailor of navy blue was edged with white pique arranged in the form of rickrack braid. Ties of navy blue kid leather and a navy blue bag were well chosen.

Mrs. Bernard C. MacDonald's navy blue sheer jacket costume used white accents. White silk poplin formed a very narrow vest at the front of the blouse. Sleeves were short and tailored on the dress but long and bell shaped on the jacket. The collar of the coat was high and stood up straight at the back, rolling into long revers at the front. A dark blue rough straw sailor was banded with the white silk poplin. Black patent leather pumps completed this costume.

Outstanding among the tailored suits was that of Mrs. Andrew C. Heilman. It was of oxford gray woolen with a very fine stripe. The jacket was mannishly tailored and the skirt straight of line. A very frilly lace jabot was worn so that the frills extended outside of the coat and Mrs. Heilman repeated the feminine note by a very lacy 'kerchief worn in her jacket pocket. Her black Breton sailor was banded with white and she wore black strap pumps.

IF you are in doubt as to the proper attire for a certain occasion or desire other style information, write to Sylvia Stiles, fashion authority of the Post-Dispatch. She will be glad to assist readers in planning their wardrobes and in selecting color combinations to suit individual types and needs. All queries should be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

SOME very striking colors and color combinations have been worn this season. Designers have been very clever at mixing their shades and developing unusual harmonies. This has been true especially of their tweed costumes. A stunning example of the new developments in tweed was the suit which Mrs. J. Reynolds Medart wore to a luncheon at the Junior League club rooms. This blended a bright fuchsia tone with violet blue. The jacket was made of the two shades used in an indefinite checked pattern and lined with fuchsia silk crepe. A short-sleeved blouse was of the same bright crepe. It had a rolled collar tied with a bow. The skirt was of solid colored violet tweed and had a kick pleat at the center front.

The exact shade of the fuchsia was matched in the felt hat which Mrs. Medart had selected. This had a modified derby brim and a high, manipulated crown. British tan accessories including calfskin tongue strapped footwear, a swagger bag and short gloves were most effective with the costume, a sketch of which appears in the panel at lower right.

A Mixed Dye

It is not easy to dye articles black satisfactorily, as they are apt to have a rusty tinge. It will be found, however, that good results may be obtained by using one packet of navy blue dye and one packet of black, dissolving the dyes as directed, and then mixing the two thoroughly.

Wool and Knitters

Knitters should always remember that good wool is not an extravagance. It adds greatly to the pleasure of knitting; it wears well, and it washes satisfactorily. Wool should never be wound tightly, or it will become impoverished.

Odd Shapes Mark Newest Handbags

IT isn't difficult to determine whether a woman is carrying a new handbag or an old one with her spring costume. The latest versions are designated not only by their bright colors but by their odd shapes and sizes.

The lunch box type of bag is one of the newest as well as the most novel. It is quite square of shape and has the holder at the top in imitation of the metal lunch container that workmen often carry. The shiny patent leather surface also serves to carry out the theme of a black, painted finish.

Canteens of suede look most like the real army kits when they are made of natural colored or luggage tan leather. Wide handles have snap fastenings so that the bags may be fastened to the belt in true military manner. The hobo knapsack is another novelty that is appearing in fabrics as well as doeskin.

A bag which resembles a tiny cottage has a sloping roof that is made of dull leather while the sides are of patent. Color contrasts of roof and sides contribute to the architectural impression. The flower basket bag of raffia and the schoolbook bag are among others sufficiently arresting to please the seekers of unique accessories.

FACING the FACTS

by Helen Jameson

IF there is one woman who can upbraid fate with oratorical fireworks it is she whose hair, two days after the shampoo, looks as if it had been dipped in oil. She believes that all she needs is a pair of tusks and some whiskers to look like a sea lion. Well, it's bad enough, but not as bad as that. When yowling about beauty griefs, members of the universal sisterhood are likely to step beyond the bounds of truth.

Let's get down to brass tacks. Beside the hair root is a tiny oil well, put there for a purpose. If the shaft of the hair were not lubricated it would break, become dead tissue. Oil is a protective agent on skin as well as on hair, but it happens all too often that these small gushers are too eager for work, produce more oily substance than the glorious tiara needs, with the result that tresses cling close to the scalp, wave lines break, curls go limp. And lamentations rend the air.

Soap scum left on the hair after the shampoo, is mistaken for oil and the latter gets credit for the unhappy state of affairs. Sometimes a change of soap and a more thoroughly cleansing will so change conditions that there is a big surprise waiting. Hair looks twice as thick, takes on new life, stays in curl.

—o-o—

THE vinegar rinse is helpful mainly for the reason that it cuts away soapy deposits that may remain after the shampoo. But it makes the hair slinkier and has a depleting effect upon the permanent wave if the hair is unusually fine and silky. You know; the kind that has the quality of cat fur. Vinegar should be rinsed away with clear tepid water.

Resorting to the dry shampoo is only makeshift. A mixture of powdered orris and corn meal is applied, removed with a brush, the bristles of which are covered with absorbent cotton. Unless the cleansing medium is thoroughly removed, it is likely to leave a gray film which is anything but attractive.

The thing to do is to get down to first principles, to cut down on oily foods and starches so that the sebaceous glands will not be overactive.

—o-o—

Whenever possible, the scalp should be frictioned with eau de cologne. Its alcohol content acts as an astringent. The friction can be given without disturbing the wave. Trickle on the liquid with a medium dropper, using just enough to touch all portions of the scalp, use thumbs and fingers actively.

Cold water used as a final rinsing after the shampoo will subdue oil ducts. During the shampoo it is a mistake to use water very hot. Have it warm enough so that the soap can be frothed up into a thick, live, crackling suds, no warmer than that.

And Now— Swagger Sticks

The woman who has adopted the mannish mode for springtime and has added a Homburg hat, chamois gloves, a tucked bosom shirt and flat-heeled shoes to her tailleur needs a gay walking stick to complete her ensemble.

These swagger sticks are faddish to be sure, but they are no more so than the carrot, violet and Kelly green accessories which are an essential part of the season's fashions. To be very swanky, the purchaser of a stick chooses it with bright decorations to match some part of her costume. Two-tone themes predominate, the ferrule and the top being a brilliant hue in contrast to the stick itself.

If a devotee of the new styles wishes to be more extravagant in her selection there are sticks ornamented with silver or gold metal ball effects and those having a carved animal head in colorful compositions. When she ventures into the jewelry realm she finds clips, pins and bracelets to harmonize.

Spring Pleats

Pleats appear on many of the new spring frocks. Pleated ruffles are used for hemlines, or the hemline is raised to show pleated ruffles in a taffeta underskirt. A black silk crepe frock has ruffles of pleated white handkerchief linen in plastron effect, trimmed with bands of red. The short sleeves are edged with similar frills tied with the red bands. Pink pleated chiffon frills are used for a dark blue sheer afternoon frock. Black lace ruffles compose many of the new evening frocks.

Knitted garments have a firmer and more even edge if the needle is inserted in the back of the stitches of the first row. When knitting socks for men do at least the first six inches in purl and plain, as they will then keep up better.

The House You Live In

LET ME SUGGEST

by
Josephine Walter

The author of "Let Me Suggest" will answer in this column questions on interior decoration addressed to her in care of the Women's Sunday Magazine.

NO sooner are "blond" woods mentioned as one of the vogues of the moment than pieces of this type begin to appear in the St. Louis shop windows and most charming they are, too. And don't feel that you immediately have to toss out all of your mahogany or walnut in order to use any of this new furniture, because it combines beautifully with pieces in the dark woods.

White mahogany, knotty pine and dealwood, which is really the English name for pine are three of the most favored of the light woods being used, either in their natural finish or "pickled." One of the local shops is displaying a very handsome secretary in white mahogany, treated with the pickling process, while another is showing several very interesting pieces, including a low cabinet with grilled doors in dealwood. In addition, one St. Louis architect has been designing some most attractive furniture in knotty pine, effectively finished with a coat of white wash which is wiped off and then rubbed down with wax.

And lest you get the impression that these pieces are suited only to modern homes, let me add that most of them are designed in eighteenth century English or Georgian Colonial styles. They may be used alone or, as has been stated before, as a lighting effect in rooms furnished with the more usual dark woods.

● WHETHER THERE IS such a thing as a rebirth of souls is not within the province of this column, but that there is such a thing as the renascence of houses I am firmly convinced. A case in point is the spic and span appearance that almost every house in two certain blocks on Westminster presents. As you drive along these streets you notice that most of the houses have been painted and freshened up, lawns trimmed and Venetian blinds placed at the windows. The answer is that many of the young marrieds in St. Louis have discovered that these grand old houses have not only decorative possibilities, but are ideal for raising growing families and incidentally fit into modest budgets. I might add that I own no property along here and am not trying to make any real estate company's life easier; I am merely very glad to see some of these lovely old houses come to life again.

—o-o—

● IF FOR YEARS you have been spouting about some pet theory, it is a great relief to find that somebody else not only has the same theory, but is doing something about putting it into effect. Renting pictures much as you might rent a new novel has always been one of these pets, and now the Artists' Guild, under the direction of Peter Mariner, is carrying out some such plan. At the present time they are only equipped to handle subscriptions from 100 people, who would like to rent the pictures of various St. Louis artists and try them out on their own walls, rather than merely seeing them in a gallery. If, however, this idea works out successfully, they hope in time to develop a regular rental library of pictures, and we, for one, are sending along our own little hope for their success.

This Week's Decorating Term: Parquetry: A wood mosaic for floors, forming an ornamental pattern. Today these may be obtained in big sections, saving the cost of laying each piece separately.

● QUESTION: My house has a central hallway with the living room on one side and the dining room on the other. I am using white Venetian blinds across the front of the house, but I would like to use different colored tapes in the two rooms. Do you think this would look badly from the outside?

MRS. J. H. K.

Answer: All windows on the same floor are supposed to present a uniform appearance on the exterior. However, you may still have different colored tapes in the two rooms by having plain white tapes, sewed on the outside of the ones that face the street. In this way the colored part will be in the room and only white will be visible from the outside.

—o-o—

● QUESTION: We are repapering, but at the moment can only afford the most inexpensive of wall papers. We much prefer painted walls, but have found that all the plain papers in unusal colors such as brown and emerald green, which give the effect of painted walls, are very expensive. Could you offer any solution to this problem?

MRS. J. G. W.

Answer: Why don't you, for the present, paper your walls with perfectly plain ceiling paper in white? That will for the time being provide a clean, fresh background, since white fits in with almost any decorative scheme. Then, later on, when you are financially able you may simply paint over this paper in any color that you desire. Casein paints are ideal for work of this type.

"Composition" In Arranging Table Pattern

There Is the Sedate for Formal, the Gay for Informal Gatherings.

By
Virginia W. Maremont

TRUTH is no less significant for being a homely truth. It has been said many times that it is not only what you serve, it is how it is prepared that makes for the successful meal. To this statement there should be added a still more obvious truth, homely or exotic, foods are more appetizing if served in an attractive setting!

Set your table-tempo and your guests will follow suit. The entire pattern of your breakfast, luncheon, dinner or other gastronomic occasions, is outlined by the atmospheric feeling of your table. Think of your table as a unique composition of your own making. Use your silverware, glassware, linen and food as your palette and success will be in the picture.

If you are planning a formal dinner with wines and walnuts, adhere to the formality of the stiff-bosomed gentlemen and decollete ladies—serve them with caviar and cocktails in the living room and light your table with slender candles in the dining room. The sedate table should be laid with damask or a fine lace cloth, embellished with sterling in correct placement, and your most gracious china and glassware. Your dinner, precise in service and selection. Thus each is linked to the other, making a complete pattern.

HOWEVER, if your table is to be a setting for an informal luncheon, perhaps your best friend's birthday, select a frivolous cloth, set it with gay dishes and serve a light meal! Colors, these days, are so important, particularly with spring shining in the windows. Suppose your table is laid with a turquoise linen luncheon set, accent its fresh color with amethyst glass plates and goblets! For a centerpiece, polish two or three dark purple egg plants until they are glossy, and pour pansies in shaded yellows and purples over them. Literally pour them, for the more carelessly they fall, the more charming they will appear. Fruit salad luncheons on warm days always appeal. For the more substantial eaters, add a variety of sandwiches, cream cheese, cucumber-celery, chopped olives or chicken. Garnish the edge of your sandwich platter with several rows of jumbo purplish-toned ripe olives. For dessert, perhaps a raspberry mousse with orange iced sponge cakes. Thus your table and your menu will be blended into an informal combination of spring charm, and appetite-allure.

Table centerpieces are always an exciting possibility. The indifferent hostess is most apt to say "oh—I won't bother, I'll just use some flowers and candles, that will do." That is just it, that is all that will happen to your dull table, it will just "do." If you will use a little extra time and ingenuity you will emerge a hostess with a reputation.

Here are a few suggestions for the furrowed brow. Everything these days seems to be paradoxical. The Gibson Girl of yesterday is the Well-dressed Girl of Today, the Old Fashioned is now the New Fashioned, and the trend follows right to the table.

—o-o—

LOOK around your house; what can you find was grandma's most prized possession? Perhaps her Dresden sleigh drawn by cherubic cupids. If so fill it with violets and forget-me-nots and have your florist send you two "reins" of smilax to drape over the dimpled arms.

If you raid the attic you can probably unearth an old leghorn hat. Turn it upside down and fill to overflowing with spring flowers, or lily-of-the-valley bouquets. Attach colored ribbons that accent your china, to the place cards. When your guests are seated, let them pull the ribbons and pin the dainty blossoms on their delighted shoulders.

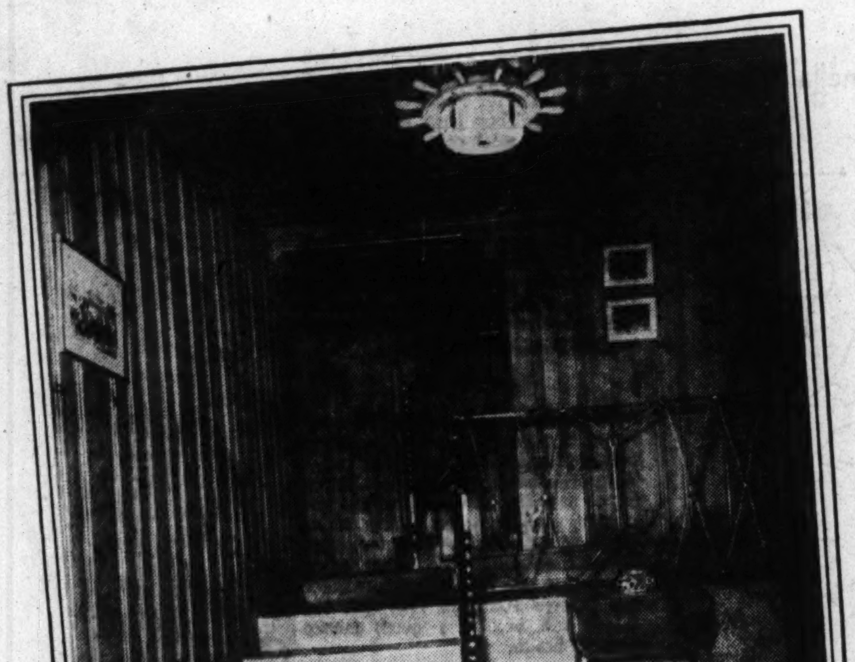
New England grandmothers will be particularly useful. Their attics are generally cram full of antiques that can be utilized by the clever hostess. Especially useful are the old pewter bayberry candle molds that can be found only in antique nooks.

For the truly artistic souls, a center piece such as this will be doubly appreciated. Select a pastel cloth of a delicate shade and place on it a mirror, in the shape of an artist's palette. It can be cut to order very reasonably, and the novel effect is well worth the trouble. Arrange along the edge varicolored flat flowers, to suggest the assorted shades of freshly oozed paint, and thrust two gilded paint brushes through the thumbhole of the palette.

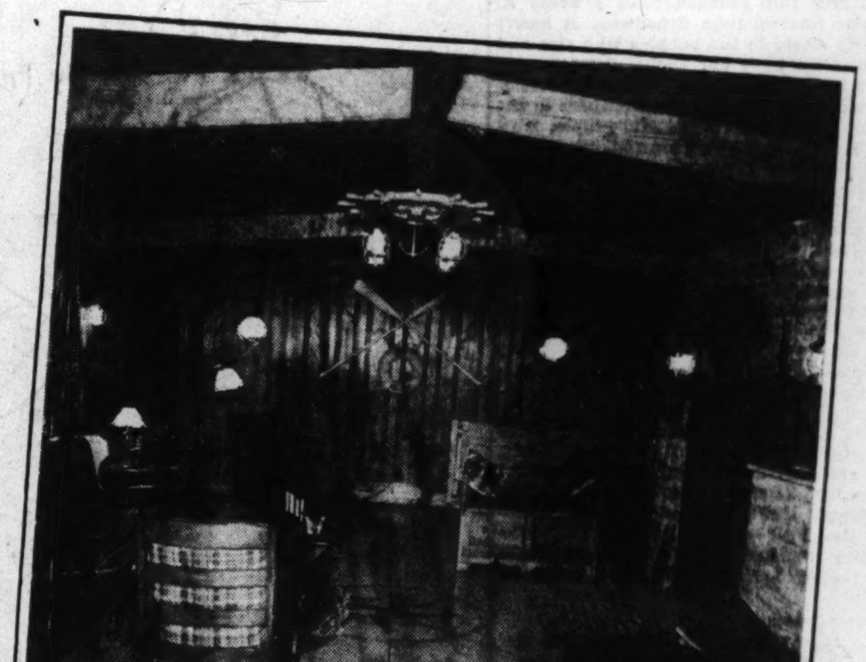
If you want to carry out the mood of the table, have an ordinary water-color brush attached to your place cards, with the names brushed on in India ink. You might don an artist's smock and the man of the house, assume the debonair charm of the perennial flowing tie and floppy beret. The praise of your guests will make it an artistic achievement.

NOVEL ST. LOUIS RECREATION ROOMS

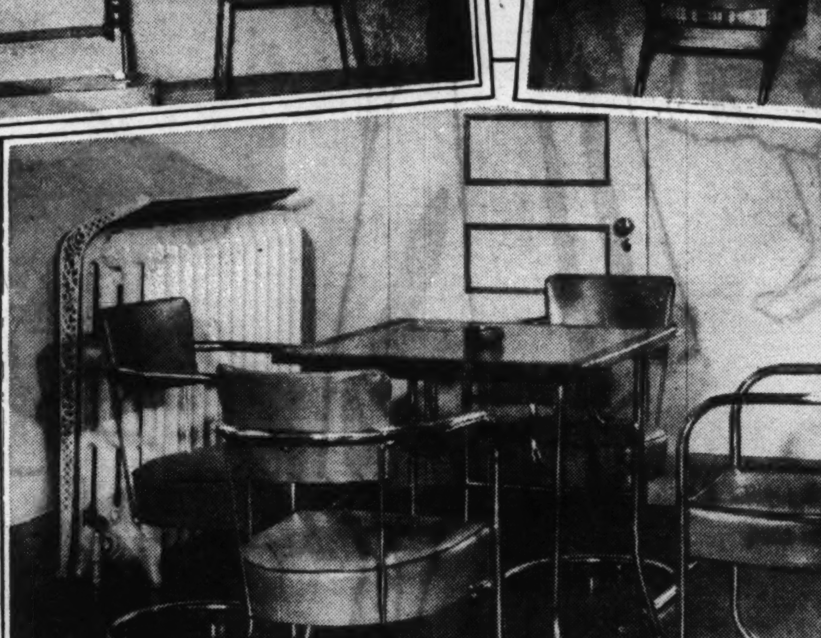
Two Examples of Unusual Decorative Schemes Reviewed



This stair hall is completely nautical, even to the brass rope railing with anchor motif.



This rumpus room in the Mellow's home has port-hole windows to provide illusion for moonlight dancing.



A comfortable corner for bridge in the Renard's attic game room.

POLITICAL theorists may rant about the relative merits of Fascism versus Communism and dog fanciers may argue strenuously on the various "points" of Pekinese as opposed to police dogs, but you find real heartfelt disagreement among those people whose preference is for the basement or the attic as the ideal spot for a "rumpus" room.

So here we are endeavoring to present both sides of the story. "You pays your money and you takes your choice" and a very hard decision it is apt to prove, because both of these rooms are extremely well done. You may not, in fact, be able to come to any conclusion about where you would place a similar room in your own house, but you can hardly fail to decide that you should have some such room, no matter where you put it.

Such strong adherents of the "underground" theory are Mr. and Mrs. R. Wesley Mellow of 70 Fair Oaks that they tunneled under their house and took out 200 loads of earth in order to build the type of room they desired. "Room" is hardly the term to describe it, since a whole suite has been built, including hall, powder room, kitchenette, and ship's cabin, for the decorative theme is nautical throughout.

Upon opening the door which leads to this group of rooms, one immediately becomes a passenger on the "S. S. Helen"—named for Mrs. Mellow. The walls of the stair-hall, as well as the main room, are lined with knotty pine and the floors are finished with terazzo. Coming down the steps one has a choice of holding on to a real rope railing or, on the other side, one made of copper rope with an anchor as the center motif. This latter railing is repeated on the stair landing leading to the powder room. Overhead is a ship's wheel fitted with a modern indirect light and under-foot are signs of the zodiac set into the floor.

The powder room, to the left, is a concession to the feminine contingent on board, done as it is in tones of peach and blue. Walls are in peach tone and the wooden dressing table is in cream, striped in peach. The top of this table is of mirror and another big mirror is set into the wall above it. The blue coloring is brought in through lamp shades and the seat pad on the stool. Off this room is a lavatory.

In the next level he placed the little kitchenette which, I believe, in sailors' parlance would be called the galley and a more ship-shape little room was never seen on land or sea. Walls and cabinets are in lemon yellow with accenting notes of black and set into the floor are designs of kettles and pans. On the shelves of the cabinets are kept every type of kitchen equipment, as well as gay red and blue pottery tableware, and here the children of the family may have everything from taffy pulls to weinie roasts.

Finally comes the main room of this boat and here no effort has been spared to sustain the nautical illusion. The slant of the ceiling with its huge supporting beams, the port holes, lighted from behind, in the end wall, and the floor which has been most ingeniously laid in shaded tones of blue to give the feeling of waves on water, all cater to this fancy. Ship's lanterns serve as sidelights and are combined with a wheel for the center fixture; while crossed oars are hung above the life preserver, giving the name of this "boat."

In addition, however, to this maritime flavor every provision for comfort has been made as well. A huge stone fireplace provides warmth on a chilly night, as well as an excuse for using a most unusual screen, appliqued with brass stars and moon. Furniture is all of maple, upholstered in plaids or red leather, and the red chintz draperies are patterned with ships and lighthouses. If all ships provided such snug berths as this room does, one could readily understand the lure of a sailor's life.

And now give heed to the other side of the story. Among the attic advocates are Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Renard of 5 Forest Ridge and their game room, although equally attractive, is just as different in spirit as it is in location, from the Mellows'. Completely modern in treatment, it has been planned primarily to provide space for a fast game of ping pong or a serious rubber of bridge.

No structural changes have been made to accommodate this room under the eaves; but no effort has been spared to make it attractive as well as practical. Walls in a cool gray tone are brightened by having the baseboards painted a vivid orange tone and the ceiling in deep blue to match the linoleum floor. Window shades are of dark blue with scalloped edges bound in orange, while the curtains are of an open weave material in orange tone with fringed edges. The two windows at either end of the room, which are set into the eaves, are fitted with glass shelves, filled with blue glass and greenery, and beneath these windows are placed seats with pads of orange leather.

ALL of the equipment in this room has been made decorative in spite of being completely utilitarian in function. The ping pong table has been painted in a bright blue tone to match the comfortable couch beside it, which is upholstered in chevron striped modern fabric with a deep gray fringe around the bottom. The bridge setup consists of chairs and table of chromium, combined with orange leather; while the piano is painted gray with orange stripings. Before one of the windows is set a tiny bar, painted orange, trimmed in blue, with a monogram set in the front and a chromium rail. Before this bar and placed at intervals around the walls of the room are stools made to resemble beer barrels, which are painted bright, blue banded with silver and with silver leather pads on the top. Chromium and frosted glass lighting fixtures complete the modern feeling of this room.

Ships' cabins, circus tents or some purely decorative motif; and "upstairs or downstairs," it does not matter how you express your latent desires in a room of this type; but just that you do express them. Certainly, this kind of room is guaranteed to keep the young ones home, at least one or two nights in the week, and also is guaranteed to keep the rest of the house "burn and spill proof."

JOSEPHINE WALTER

From the Ground Up ⁚ By Amy Lu Schmitz

WE have been peeping into gardens and looking around corners to see what ravages winter left behind it. We find the popular oriental arborvitae looking brown and sere. It is not a hardy tree in this locality, and, although it may survive our mild winters, the freezers will get it every time. Replace with American arborvitae or various junipers. The magnificent boxwoods around town are in a bad way. They just can't stand severe winds or long periods of zero weather. Consider the Japanese yew, large mugho pine or even the simple barberry in specimen sizes before you invest in boxwood again. The California privet hedges have had their tops frozen, but fortunately they can be cut back to the ground and allowed to send up new shoots. The recent frost did some damage to ground plants and early buds on trees and shrubs in town, but a good growing season should remedy matters. Get your green background of trees, shrubs and lawn in a flourishing condition now for your future flowers.

Your shade trees are extremely important for summer comfort, and you will want them to grow large and vigorously. There is a tremendous evaporation of water from the thousands of leaves that actually cools the air on a hot sunny day—as much as 150 gallons a day has been estimated to evaporate from a large tree. All this moisture must come from the soil, and if nature doesn't put it there, you will have to. A good soil will admit both air and moisture to tree roots, but if a large part of the ground around a tree is covered with concrete walks, paved streets or drives, you will have to aereate, feed and water the soil where you can. Dig holes 12 to 18 inches deep round the tree with a post-hole digger, and either leave them open for air and water or fill with peat moss or leaf mold. Give your trees an overnight soaking at least once a week unless there has been sufficient rain. Remember that impartial nature is just as interested in the health and happiness of the fungi or insects that destroy the trees as in the tree itself. Look your trees over carefully for small holes in the bark where a borer might be at work, for scaley deposits, dead limbs or cavities, and if you find any trouble, call in a tree surgeon before disease has spoiled the whole tree.

● IN planting new trees this spring use the long lived hard wood trees wherever you can (oaks, hard maples, elms). The box elder, silver maple, and Carolina poplars are all short lived and their branches are easily broken by high winds. The lombardy poplar is the shortest lived; use it only for immediate effects, and plan on removing it in eight or ten years. In placing your new trees, see that they will not interfere with telephone poles or wires at any time, because lineman are ruthless in cutting out limbs or topping trees to make room for their wires. Don't give them a chance at yours. If a tree is to be near a driveway or any place where it is likely to be bumped, put some guard on it. Remember that a bruised and scraped bark on a young tree produces a rough and crooked old tree easily subject to disease.

Evergreens and shrubs will be the immedate background for your flowers and must be of a healthy green color. Spade the soil as soon after a rain as the top inch has dried. If it is heavy, work in some leaf mold or manure to help retain moisture for future use. It's a good idea to form a saucer or rim of dirt around the plant, as far out from the trunk as the branches extend, to keep the spring rains from running off before they can soak in.

Your lawn is another important part of the green background. If there are barren patches on slopes where the rains are washing away soil, rake deeply and spread on a top dressing of manure and leaf mold, and sow with seed. If you have found this unsatisfactory, either lower the grade on the slope or plant a ground cover such as trailing honeysuckle to hold it. All bald spots on the lawn should be raked, covered with a top dressing, and seedspread. A good grass seed mixture for St. Louis lawns is made up of half blue grass, a quarter red top and English rye, and a quarter white clover. If you buy grass seed prepared, you might check the proportions. The red top and rye will come up quickly giving shade and protection to the slower germinating blue grass and clover.

If the dandelions dot your lawn with their persistent yellow, and are too numerous to be conquered individually, let them grow to about 6 inches in height and mow them down. Be sure to catch them before their heads turn white and the hundreds of fuzzy seeds are spread over all your lawn.

Unless you have it on good authority that your lawn needs lime to neutralize an acid condition, don't use it. You will spare yourself a large crop of weeds. Arm yourself with a paring knife, a small hand rake and a pocketful of grass seed, and take a weeding walk. Wherever you see a weed, dig it out, getting all the root, rake the spot over, and sprinkle a little seed. If you do this regularly you are bound to improve your lawn. When you water your lawn, do it just once a week and let the water soak in for hours. A light sprinkle develops roots near the surface which are burnt out by our hot summers.

Practical Yet Gaily Moded Furniture

NOTHING, not even clothes, tells the story of the happiness and blithe charm of spring as do the shops devoted to house and garden furnishings.

New furniture for terrace, porch and garden is most attractive and very practical. Like with many of the new fashions, the inspiration of the gay nineties is manifest.

This year's Gibson girl will sip her cooling drinks seated on chair or bench of wrought iron, done in all sorts of interesting and intricate designs and painted white or in some unusual color, such as navy blue. Indeed, white with navy blue promises to be a big garden number this summer and we are all for this color scheme.

There are sofas of wrought iron with cushions of various colors done into a mattress-like roll. Tables of wrought iron and glass done in all sorts of designs and shapes will take their stand by chairs to form pleasing groups.

One lovely porch piece that we particularly admired is a combination bird cage and flower stand done in gilded wrought iron and glass.

Then there is a set of wrought iron garden furniture with a demure Victorian air that we found fascinating. The chairs and sofa have high backs done in a lovely shell design and there is a round table with the wrought iron done in a scalloped design with glass.

But it isn't all wrought iron, and won't be as long as bamboo continues to be fashioned into such handsome furniture as is the case this year. Not only bamboo furniture, but handsome bamboo accessories are on display this year. A handsome bamboo lamp with a shade of natural-colored linen makes a splendid accessory for the porch or for any room for the summer. So does a screen fashioned of strips of bamboo placed horizontally.

Many of us do not think it an undue extravagance to put away our winter china and splurge with a set of glass or china ware keyed to summer and used with colorful linens.

We saw some bluish glass, opaque, ringed in white and made into plates with a matching vase that would make any luncheon table. Then there is a pale pink pottery salad set that just smacked of spring.

What Wood Is Most Desirable In Furniture

Chestnut Much Used for Occasional Pieces Besides Older Standbys.

WALNUT, maple and oak are the three most popular woods. Red gum is often used with a walnut or maple finish but it isn't so durable as these other woods. Walnut is excellent both for durability and for finishing, as its surface takes the various finishes beautifully. It is used in veneer form for all types of good furniture. Maple has the same qualities, but hard maple is better than the soft variety, which finishes a yellow brown, while hard maple finishes a rich reddish brown.

Maple is used more often for bedroom and dining room suites than for living room pieces. Chair rungs and upholstery frames are often of maple.

Mahogany is one of the loveliest woods, for its beautiful grain is ever a delight. It is much used for veneer. Inferior woods from various regions are often sold as mahogany but the real mahogany comes only from the West Indies and Central and South America. It is well to ascertain where the mahogany was produced when buying pieces made of this wood. A good shop always will give this information or endeavor to acquire it for you.

Birchwood is being used a great deal, especially for furniture of the provincial and colonial types, as well as for bentwood pieces. Chestnut is now being used much more than formerly. It lasts well and takes light brown finishing beautifully, making it good for bedroom and dining room suites.

Now there is much occasional furniture in chestnut. Ash and Southern pine are used for medium grade and cheaper furniture. Southern pine is much used for kitchen furniture, china and linen closets, bookcases and also for hotel furnishings. Fruitwoods are coming into prominence as the demand for modern classic furniture increases. These woods are very beautiful and give a different aspect to a room.

When buying pieces with a mirror, such as dressing table and vanities, look to the quality of the glass. Also have a guarantee that the silvering will last, unless exposed to unusual climatic conditions. See to it that all hardware is of excellent quality and properly secured, especially those pieces such as drawer-knobs which come in for plenty of usage.

Sunday Night Supper

SUNDAY night supper is a favorite in many households when this meal does not mean just some cold cuts, an indifferent salad and a tasteless sweet. A nice cheese dish, or other savory main course, some hot biscuits, a good, crisp salad and a nicely-made sweet or some mixed stewed fruits, together with some cookies and plenty of coffee, make a most tempting supper menu. So here are some recipes to help the good cause along:

Here is a new way of serving cream cheese: Mix it first with its own weight in bread crumbs, then for each two ounces of crumbs, stir in the yolk of an egg. Season with cayenne. Heat this mixture over a low flame and when thoroughly mixed, spread on a plate. When cold form into little balls or sausages, dip in egg and bread crumbs or batter and fry until a golden brown.

For delicious deviled sausages, mix a teaspoon of French mustard with a teaspoon of ordinary mustard, a teaspoon of curry powder, a teaspoon chutney, half ounce butter, a squeeze of lemon juice and salt and pepper. Broil about one pound of pork sausages until nice and brown all over, then split and cover with the mixture. Place the halves together and put in the oven until thoroughly hot. Serve with a good gravy, mashed potatoes and grilled tomatoes.

For baked eggs and rice, grease a baking dish and place in it half pint cooked rice mixed with half pint of tomato sauce. Break six eggs carefully onto the rice and sprinkle with a gill each of grated cheese and grated bread crumbs mixed together. Add dabs of butter and bake in a hot oven for 10 minutes.

For another savory baked dish, boil together half pint of milk and quarter of a pint of water, stir in six tablespoons of broken macaroni with a pinch of salt and continue boiling for 10 minutes. Cool and add one ounce of grated cheese and the yolks of two eggs. Bake in buttered souffle dish for 15 to 20 minutes. Serve at once.

Food and Drink

SAUCE for the GOOSE

by

Irma S. Rombauer

Mrs. Rombauer is a St. Louisan and an accepted authority on things culinary. She has written several books on the subject, the most recent of which is "The Joy of Cooking," soon to be published.

FORMERLY we had a short but intensive strawberry season. Now, like poor relations, they are always with us. What a pity! Strawberries are no longer a novelty or a thrill—just an every day "happenstance" that leaves us unmoved.

Speechless we gaze upon their one glowing cheek balanced by another of incredible greeness and anticipate their acid flavor that will undoubtedly be strong enough to draw the holes in our stockings together (if we are "that kind"). Shall we buy them? And if we do, what can be done to modify their obvious underdoneness?

Several things. In the first place they make marvelous sauce, hulled, crushed, sugared and permitted to stand for an hour or more. This is good "as is" with waffles, puddings, cake, with rice cooked with milk, with uncooked cereals, with cream or whipped cream. As the latter is highly "calorious" and adds unnecessarily to the expense of an every day meal, we decide upon an old standby, cornstarch pudding.

—o-o—

● NOW PLEASE DON'T SAY: "My William will not TOUCH cornstarch pudding" and let it go at that. Use the following sales talk. "William dear, this is not an ordinary cornstarch pudding for it lacks the heft and gumminess of the well known and justly condemned vulgar variety. This is a hybrid—delicate, rare, scented, grown on the best kitchen stoves and warranted to entwine itself about the hearts of the household. Give it the sunlight of your approval that it may flower frequently."

Here is the recipe that is to break through the wall of William's prejudice:

Cornstarch Balnc Mange

6 servings.

When carefully prepared and thoroughly chilled this simple pudding is delicious.

Scald:

2¼ cups milk.

Combine and stir until well blended:

¾ cup milk.
¼ cup cornstarch.
2 tablespoons sugar.
¼ teaspoon salt.

Add these ingredients to the hot milk. Stir and cook them over a very low flame, or in a double boiler, until they thicken and the cornstarch is cooked (when you can no longer taste it).

Beat until light:

1 egg.
2 tablespoons sugar.

Pour the hot mixture over the egg, beat it and return it to the fire for a minute or two. Stir it constantly until the egg thickens, then remove it from the fire. When cool, add:

½ teaspoon vanilla.

Chill the pudding. Serve it with:

Crushed sweetened fruit.
Fruit juice or cream.
(Canned loganberries, strained, make a very piquant sauce.)

Now, if William remains obdurate, refuses the pudding and turns the dark of his countenance to his newspaper, do not despair—be resourceful. Most men fall an easy victim to cheese. Dismiss all idea of strawberries for a week (by that time they may have ripened).

Purchase large, perfect, luscious berries. Prepare the following French dish known as Fromage a la Creme or Fromage a la Coeur (the latter when it is molded in a small heart-shaped tin).

French Cheese Dish

6 servings

This very simple dessert is as good as any elaborate concoction I know. Whip until stiff:

1 cup heavy cream

Beat until soft:

9 ounces (3 packages) soft white cream cheese*
2 tablespoons cream
One-eighth teaspoon salt

Fold the cheese into the whipped cream. Place these ingredients in a wet mold or in individual molds. Chill the cheese thoroughly. Unmold it. Serve it with:

Fresh unhulled strawberries, raspberries or other fresh fruit

*The original recipe calls for 1 pound of soft cream cheese. Use more cheese if you wish.

Place on each plate a serving of cheese, six or eight unhulled berries and a small mound of powdered sugar. The berries are dipped first in the sugar and then in the cream.

● BY THIS TIME we expect to have William completely enthralled. However, there are Williams and Williams. We shall give one more recipe on the chance that your William happens to belong to the second group.

Strawberry Chiffon Pie

One 9-inch pie

Prepare:

A baked Pie Shell

Chill it for 3 hours.

Hull and slice:

1½ cups strawberries

Pour over them:

¾ cup sugar

Permit these ingredients to stand for 30 minutes.

Soak:

1 tablespoon gelatine

in:

¼ cup cold water

Dissolve it in:

½ cup boiling water

Add:

1 tablespoon lemon juice

Add the gelatine to the berry mixture. Chill these ingredients until they are about to set.

Whip until stiff and fold in:

½ cup heavy cream

Whip until stiff and fold in:

2 egg whites
⅛ teaspoon salt

Fill the pie shell with the strawberry mixture. Garnish the pie with:

Whipped cream (optional)

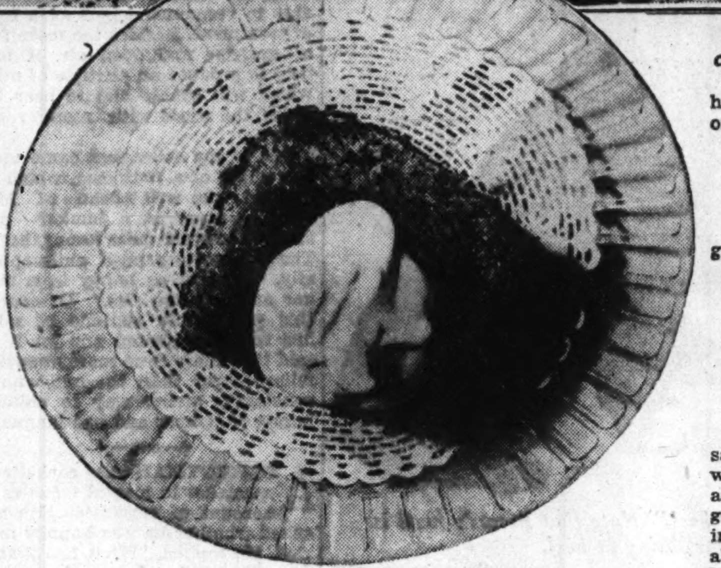
If this recipe doesn't bring results serve chocolate cake. And if the chocolate cake fails to please—give up William. Let some other woman have him.

GOOD MIXERS for the TABLE

Housewives In a Hurry Can Save Time With These Recipes

For a hot bread or, cold, for sandwiches, try caraway loaf.

Easy to make are these icebox cookies.



Whipped Cream Tops This Jewel Cake

SHADES of our grandmother's kitchens! What a long step back it is from the subject of this contest to the homemade yeast concoctions, baking powders and other leavening agents of old-time homemakers and the long hours of preparation necessary for cakes and other flour mixtures.

Consider the self-rising flours, completely packaged for use; the biscuit mixes requiring only the addition of liquid and a few minutes of baking; the packaged cake and muffin mixes which may be served easily within an hour of the time they are started. Waffles, gingerbread, nut bread and cookies all may be purchased in commercial packages, ready to be combined with a liquid, popped into your oven and baked to highly desirable standards of palatability. Even those who have difficulty in making good pie crust will find it ready mixed for them on the grocer's shelves, requiring only a minimum of effort on their part to achieve the most lucious of pies.

All of these mixes are packaged with adequate directions and recipes for their use and service. But we were curious this month to discover additional ways in which our readers use these products in their homes—whether they use them frequently on "hurry-up" occasions; whether they find them useful from the standpoint of saving themselves time and energy, or whether these mixes have found a useful and permanent niche among their favorite foods for recipes of satisfaction and desirability.

Desserts are leaders among the recipes. Shortcakes, steamed puddings, deep-dish pies, upside-down cakes, fruit rolls and fruit dumplings are all present, utilizing numerous fresh and canned fruits, with a variety of spices, and all very easily and quickly prepared. Waffles and pancakes of every description are also among the popular recipes that use these various mixes, which also seem to have found a happy medium of expression through the mixes.

Caraway Loaf

Two cups prepared biscuit mix.
Two tablespoons granulated sugar.
One-half teaspoon baking soda.
One tablespoon caraway seed.
One-half cup seedless raisins.
One cup buttermilk.

Combine biscuit mix, sugar, baking soda, caraway seed and raisins. Stir in buttermilk until mixture is well combined. Bake in a greased loaf pan in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) about 35 or 40 minutes. This recipe makes one medium-sized loaf.

Jewel Cake

Five tablespoons butter, melted.
Three-fourths cup granulated sugar.
Two cups cranberries.
One orange.
One-fourth cup seedless raisins.
One package gingerbread mix.
Whipped cream.

Pour melted butter into a 9-inch square cake pan. Sprinkle sugar evenly over this. Put cranberries and orange through food chopper, using finest knife and spread with raisins over sugar and butter in pan. Prepare gingerbread mix according to directions on package and pour over mixture in pan. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 40 or 50 minutes until done. Remove from pan. Serve with whipped cream. This recipe makes one (9-inch) cake.

Southern Muffins

Intriguing Dishes for Spring

HERE'S a spring grab bag filled with all sorts of intriguing recipes. We hope that you will find some that interest you and that the dishes you make will win favor with the family and so become fixtures when planning your menus.

We'll turn things round by starting off with a dessert, a good recipe for using up bread left-overs. Combine two cups bread crumbs, four tablespoons melted butter and one cup brown sugar. Put a layer of crumbs in buttered baking dish, then a layer of sliced apples. Add lemon juice and grated ring of half lemon to one and a half cups rhubarb. Then spread layer of rhubarb over apples. Repeat until dish is full. Top with crumbs. Bake 30 to 40 minutes in moderate oven and there you have rhubarb and apple betty.

After a betty we think it nice to give a susan the floor, or rather, the table. So here is a recipe for a grand salad of brown-eyed susans. Put two and a third cups of sliced dates into quarter cup French fruit dressing and allow to stand while preparing four oranges. Pare oranges as you would an apple, cutting a continuous circular peel removing outside membrane surrounding sections. Cut out each segment separately, leaving center membrane in one piece. Place a small mound of dates in center of lettuce leaf and surround with radiating whole sections of orange. Serve with additional French fruit dressing.

Macaroons for tea aren't exactly news but when they're fruited, then start tea table talk. Here's a quick and failure-proof recipe for same. Mix one cup sweetened condensed milk and two cups shredded coconut together. Add one cup dates finely chopped. Drop by spoonfuls on well-buttered baking pan about one inch apart. Bake in moderate oven until a delicate brown (two dozen).

Salad Bowl Hand-in-Hand With Spring

Numerous Greens Permit Almost Endless Variety of Combinations.

by Katharine Fisher

THE birds are flocking back to their summer haunts, and the spirit of adventure's in the air! We are off into the open and through the woods to hunt for the first dog-tooth violets and jack-in-the pulpit, for the Solomon's seal and the fragrant arbutus. On the sunny slopes the dandelions are beginning to come up thickly, and we stop to bring back a supply for the salad bowl, in which the products of the good earth may be compounded into crisp, appetizing spring tonics.

My salad bowl—a squatty and capacious wooden one—is never relegated to the shelf, winter of spring, but with spring it is brought more frequently into use. There is a great variety of greens and new vegetables for the makings of a delicious salad, and the possibilities of a salad served in a bowl seem endless. They are limited only by your own artistry and imagination.

There are just a few things to remember in creating a masterpiece in salads. See that the greens—the dandelion leaves, romaine, endive, lettuce—are cool and crisp and dry. After washing them, take time to pat them lightly between the flods of a clean towel. If you do this, the salad dressing will glisten on the leaves. Do not hesitate to serve a mixture of greens, but do not add the dressing until the salad is just about to be served or the leaves may wilt and lose their crispness. Toss the salad ingredients lightly together with the dressing, using a fork and spoon.

You may add to the greens in the salad bowl a mixture of early vegetables—radishes, whole or in slices; tender young scallions; asparagus, cooked and chilled and cut in suitable pieces; thin rings of green peppers or slices of avocado of a luscious ripeness. Tomatoes, cubed or in slices, blend well with the mellow flavor of the avocado. So do raw strawberries, halves of cooked prunes and sections of orange or grapefruit, fresh or canned.

—o-o—

A bowl of salad invites the simple and effective use of leftovers that collect in the refrigerator. A lone strip of cold bacon may be cut in small pieces and added to the salad. And toss in that one cold potato, cut in cubes, or the spoonful of peas or string beans, or the one remaining stalk of asparagus. Slices of hard-cooked egg or pieces of cold meat, chicken or fish contribute to a hearty salad.

Cheese is always a welcome addition to the salad bowl, cheese of all kinds—cream cheese, American cheese and those delicious American editions of the European cheese: Camembert, Swiss, Roquefort and others. In adding cheese to the salad bowl, it may be chilled and cut in small cubes or broken into pieces, or it may be served as an accompaniment to the salad. And you will enjoy a cheese dressing!

—o-o—

ABOWL of salad and toasted crackers may be a luncheon in itself, especially if cheese, hard-cooked eggs, meat or fish are used. Or with chops done to a turn, well-seasoned broiled Hamburg cakes, broiled filets of fish, or with any meat or fish dish, salad will make a delicious and satifying one-course dinner when served with hot rolls and coffee. And you may wish to add to this menu new boiled or steamed potatoes, cooked in their jackets.

I have almost forgotten one of my favorite seasonings for the salad bowl—garlic! I like a decided flavor of garlic, and so I let a small bud stand in the salad dressing for a while. You will, of course, get a more subtle flavor, if you wish, by merely rubbing the inside of the salad bowl with the garlic.

As for the salad dressing, choose your favorite homemade or bottled dressing and, by way of variety, add various seasonings to your dressing — cheese, minced pickle or stuffed olives, and the like. I often use some tarragon vinegar in the dressing, or lemon juice instead of vinegar.

Tomato Loaf Salad

● For a novel salad this is excellent in spring. Simmer three cups of tomato juice, one small grated onion and half teaspoon sugar for five minutes, and add salt and pepper. Soak two tablespoons of gelatine in half cup of cold water for five minutes, and dissolve in the hot tomato mixture. Divide in three equal parts. While cooling, prepare one cup chopped boiled ham and mix with one teaspoon prepared mustard and enough salad dressing to moisten well.

For the dressing beat one cup cream cheese with two tablespoons sour cream and half teaspoon salt. Grease sparingly a loaf-shaped mold and wipe it out with a paper napkin to remove any excess oil. Pour one part of the tomato mixture into the mold and let it set. Then spread the ham over it and add the second part of the tomato mixture. Let set again and then carefully spread with cream cheese. Add the rest of the tomato, then put into refrigerator until ready to serve.

When Parsnips Are Prepared For the Table

DID you ever serve parsnips? Well, here are four very appetizing reasons why you should:

Parsnip Chowder

Two tablespoons diced salt pork
Two cups diced parsnips
Four cups diced potatoes
Two onions, chopped
One teaspoon salt
One-fourth teaspoon pepper
Three cups bottled milk or
One and one-half cups evaporated milk and one-half cup water
One tablespoon flour
One tablespoon butter
Two tablespoons cold milk

Saute the finely diced salt pork in a kettle until golden brown. Add the vegetables. Cover with boiling water and cook until the vegetables are tender—about 45 minutes. Add the salt, pepper and milk, and let come to a boil. Thicken slightly with the flour and butter cooked together and combined with the two tablespoons cold milk. Serve hot with crackers. Serves six.

Parsnip Souffle

Four medium-sized parsnips
One-half teaspoon salt
One-eighth teaspoon pepper
One teaspoon butter
One cup medium white sauce
Two eggs, separated

Scrub the parsnips and cook until tender. Peel and force through a potato ricer. Add the salt, pepper, butter and white sauce. Add the beaten egg yolks. When the mixture has cooled, fold in the stiffly-beaten egg whites. Turn into a greased baking dish and bake in a modern oven of 375 degree Fahrenheit for 20-30 minutes. Serve at once. Serves six.

Parsnip Turnover

Two pounds parsnips
Two pounds potatoes
Three tablespoons hot fat
One egg
One-eighth teaspoon pepper
Four tablespoons butter or margarine
One-half cup milk
One and one-half teaspoons salt

Pare or scrape parsnips, cut in thick slices and cook until tender. Pare potatoes and also cook until tender. When all are tender, drain, mash and combine, and season with butter or margarine, milk, salt and pepper, and add the beaten egg. Have ready in a larger frying-pan the hot fat, turn in the parsnip mixture and let it brown slowly, lifting it from time to time with a spatula. When crisp and golden, fold over like an omelet and serve hot. Serves six.

Scalloped Parsnips With Tomatoes

One onion, sliced
One tablespoon butter
Two cups canned tomatoes
One and one-half teaspoons salt
One-fourth teaspoon pepper
Speck cayenne
One teaspoon sugar
Two cloves
Three cups diced cooked parsnips
Two tablespoons grated cheese
One-fourth cup buttered bread crumbs

Saute onion slices in the butter until golden brown. Add tomatoes and seasonings. Simmer until smooth. Place a layer of diced, salted, cooked parsnips in a shallow greased baking dish, then a layer of tomato sauce and proceed until dish is full, having a layer parsnips on top. Sprinkle the cheese and buttered crumbs over the top. Brown in a hot oven of 450 degrees Fahrenheit. Serves six.

Mushrooms as An Added Zest For Hamburger

A Connoisseur's Dish With Dressing—Dandelions for the Salad.

By Gladys T. Lang

Hamburger Mound
Mushroom Sauce
Savoy Cabbage
Dandelion Salad
Glazed Ginger Apple Pie

Hamburger Mound

If you have any leftover chicken or turkey dressing mold into a mound. If not, make a dressing by soaking two cups of broken stale bread in a small amount of half milk and half water until well moistened, then squeeze dry. Mince a large onion and one cup of finely cut celery and saute in three tablespoons of vegetable oil until soft and yellow. Add this to the bread with one-half cup of currants or raisins which have simmered until soft, then drained. Season highly with salt, pepper, poultry seasoning and paprika. Place mound on a buttered baking pan and over the dressing spread seasoned hamburger about two inches thick. It will take about two pounds of hamburger. Top with strips of bacon placed closely together. Put in oven with a shallow pan of water beneath cover and bake for 10 minutes. Remove cover and continue baking for three-quarters of an hour in all. Place on heated platter and surround with mushroom sauce.

Mushroom Sauce

Slice and saute one-half pound of mushrooms. Dredge with two rounded tablespoons of flour and stir until flour is melted. Gradually pour on one cup of tomato juice, one can of bouillon, and the same of water. Let simmer for about 10 minutes. Season with salt and pepper.

Savoy Cabbage

Cut a large savoy cabbage in half and remove outer leaves and core. Cut into pieces. Wash and cook in boiling, salted water to cover, for 20 minutes. Chop one tablespoon of onion and fry in two tablespoons of butter, add one tablespoon of flour and let cook for just a few minutes. Drain and chop the cabbage, add it to the butter, flour and onion and pour on one cup of milk. Season with salt and pepper and let cook slowly for 15 minutes.

Dandelion Salad

Cut off roots and dark green leaves from dandelions. Place in cold water to crisp. Drain and wipe day. Toss in a bowl until well coated with a highly seasoned French dressing. Over top rice hard cooked eggs.

Glazed Ginger Apple Pie

Line a deep pie pan with pie dough. Make a syrup of one and a half cups of water and one cup of sugar, the juice of one lemon and one-half cup of currants, letting it come to a good boil. Peel, core and slice thin, eight medium-size apples and drop into syrup. Let cook until the apples are tender. Drain apples and currants from syrup and cool, then place in the uncooked shell. Add two tablespoons of minute tapioca and two of sugar to the syrup and cook about five minutes until clear and thickened. Pour over apples. Slice candied ginger in slivers and place over apples (optional) then lattice with strips of dough. Place in a hot oven to brown, then reduce heat and bake about 25 minutes. Serve warm, not hot, with a piece of snappy cheese.

Cocktail Gadgets

The cocktail hour won't become prosaic as long as the designers of gadgets continue to have ideas. Among their latest are colorful feather sticks that may be used to pursue an illusive cherry around the bottom of a glass or may take the place of a more substantial muddler. Since the feathers come in sets of a dozen each flaunting a different hue, they may serve as identification flags. A round pasteboard container is sufficiently decorative to put these accessories in the gift classification.

Another aid to the hostess who wants to add swank to the cocktail hour is the paper bib for the glass. The little socks of knitted material and the sneakers of linen have been familiar figures in the shops but it is only recently that the paper one has appeared. These bibs, which have bright trimmings, are boxed by the hundred. Paper cocktail napkins are designed to complete a harmonious ensemble.

Week's Favorite Recipe—Cherry Sponge

Soak one and one-half tablespoons gelatin in two tablespoons cold water for five minutes. Drain juice from a can of red pitted cherries and bring to boiling. Pour over gelatin and when dissolved add the cherries. Allow to cool and when just beginning to thicken fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Mold in individual dishes and chill. Serve unmolded with a yellow or soft custard made from the two egg yolks. This recipe serves six to eight persons.

OFF the LEASH

by
H. F. Owen

H. F. Owen is the nationally known St. Louis dog trainer. He will answer questions concerning dogs addressed to him in care of the Women's Sunday Magazine.

LET us get to our weekly lesson. Today we will talk about leading and heeling. Every dog, large or small, should be taught to lead properly, and after he has learned to do that on the leash, he is taught to conduct himself the same way off the leash. The latter is called heeling.

We will start with the very young dog. You need have no fear of hurting him or making him afraid. A young dog should have a collar fitted on his neck. Nothing else is done to him until he becomes accustomed to the collar. You can put the collar on him when he is as young as eight weeks.

After he is accustomed to the collar, snap on a light leash and start walking him, coaxing him along and guiding him with the leash. Keep him on your left side, with his head in line with your body. (See illustration.) Keep him in this position, neither a shoulder ahead or behind your knee. If he lags behind, give him a quick, sharp jerk, and say, "Come on, heel." If he comes to your side at once, stoop and pat his head and say, "That's right.' But do not let him jump up while you are petting him. If he pulls ahead or away from you, give a sharp tug on the leash, so as to jerk him back into position and say, "No, heel." When he is at your side, again in the correct position, praise him with your, "That is right." Then walk forward as before.

Stop every once in a while in your walk, and pull up on your leash just enough to hold the dog's head up, and say, "Sit." If necessary, push him down to a sitting position by pressure on his hips. You should repeat the command every time you stop, which will teach him what you mean by "sit." He will soon learn to sit every time you stop, even without your command, on or off the leash. Your puppy has now learned the meaning of the word "sit"; that will be of use in a great many later exercises.

You must be honest and natural in words and tones with your dog. Show him what you want and be really pleased when he does it, and show it by your tone when you say, "that's right." Be equally expressive in saying "no," when he has not done things properly. Never fool him by word or gesture or he will soon believe you are not reliable and will ignore your commands. He will probably think you are just fooling him again.

Correct the dog who has been leading you, instead of allowing you to lead him. This is a bad habit and is often due to children who like to have their dogs pull them. Many grown people feel that they might hurt the dog by holding him back when he pulls on the collar, and that it is kindness to the dog to let him go wherever he wishes.

There are several ways of breaking a dog of pullling on the leash. The easiest, I think, is to pass the leash around the dog's stomach, putting the snap end through the loop at the other end of the leash. (See illustration.) Then draw the leash tight enough that it will not slip off. Put the snap end through or under his collar. Now you are leading your dog as always, except that when he pulls, he is bringing the pressure to bear upon his stomach, as well as his neck. When he realizes that by pulling, he is causing himself unpleasantness, he will stop it, for if he walks properly the annoyance ceases.

Next week we will tell how to train the dog to come when called.

● THE DOG LOVER, who has no dog but wants one, has a bit of a problem. He has, of course, a wide variety of breeds from which to select the one which comes nearest to filling his particular needs. There are dogs, such as the terriers, spaniels and dachshunds, which very ably fill the role of dual-purpose dogs, since they are equally useful for the person who wants a small dog which will not get in the way in a small apartment, and at the same time act as an active companion and watch dog.

For the woman who desires a companion of the smaller size, the toy breeds will prove the correct choice. Among these would be the pekingese, the pug, chihuahua or the pomeranian, and they are all excellent house dogs.

For the persons with sporting inclinations, the choice would be among those breeds which have been bred to bring game to the bag—pointers, setters and spaniels will provide many glorious days of sport in the open and grand companionship during the off season.

The dogs included in the working group are the ones to turn to if an efficient watch dog and protector is wanted. Some of this group, such as the German shepherd, doberman, Dane or collie, have won fame for their ability to help mankind, in a variety of ways, such as leading blind people, herding their master's flocks and acting as most efficient guardians of their master's property and person.

In general, it should be realized that there is a breed for almost every need and that it is a mistake to buy a dog simply because of one or two meaningless points which momentarily appeal to one.

Several St. Louisans are in Kansas City, Mo., this weekend for the annual Kansas City dog show which begun Friday and ends today. Among them are John Banks, the St. Louis handler, who took a truckload of St. Louis dogs which will compete for ribbons. William D. Amenda will show his trained doberman, Muck. Mrs. K. Pflueger made the trip in her new stationwagon that was loaded with dachshunds. Dr. P. H. Gregory will show cocker spaniels and Harry Brunsen will enter his Turk in the German Shepherd trials.

—o-o—

● Mr. Owen: I would like very much to have you tell me how to break my dog, a wire-haired terrier, six months old, of the three offenses mentioned in your last Sunday's article: "Deaf" when called, jumps on master, pulls on leash. F. J.

The above lesson answers, of course, your third question. Next week's lesson will answer your first and we will discuss your second question in an early lesson.

The St. Louis district will be well represented at the Boston Terrier Specialty Show which will be held in Kankakee, Ill., next Sunday. Among those who will make the trip are: Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pelman, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Walton, Miss Anna M. Carey, Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Faherty, Mr. and Mrs. M. E English, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Slingerland, East St. Louis; George A. Knottnerus, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. White and Mrs. S. M. Tyler, Granite City.

John Banks announces that the Welsh terrier, Red Crag Penant, owned by H. Preston Wolfe of Columbus, O., has won his chamionship. Banks handled the sire of Red Crag Pennant, Champion Penhill Pennant of Sy-Paw, St. Louis dog, that made its championship late in 1933. So Banks has accompanied the second generation of this breeding to victory.

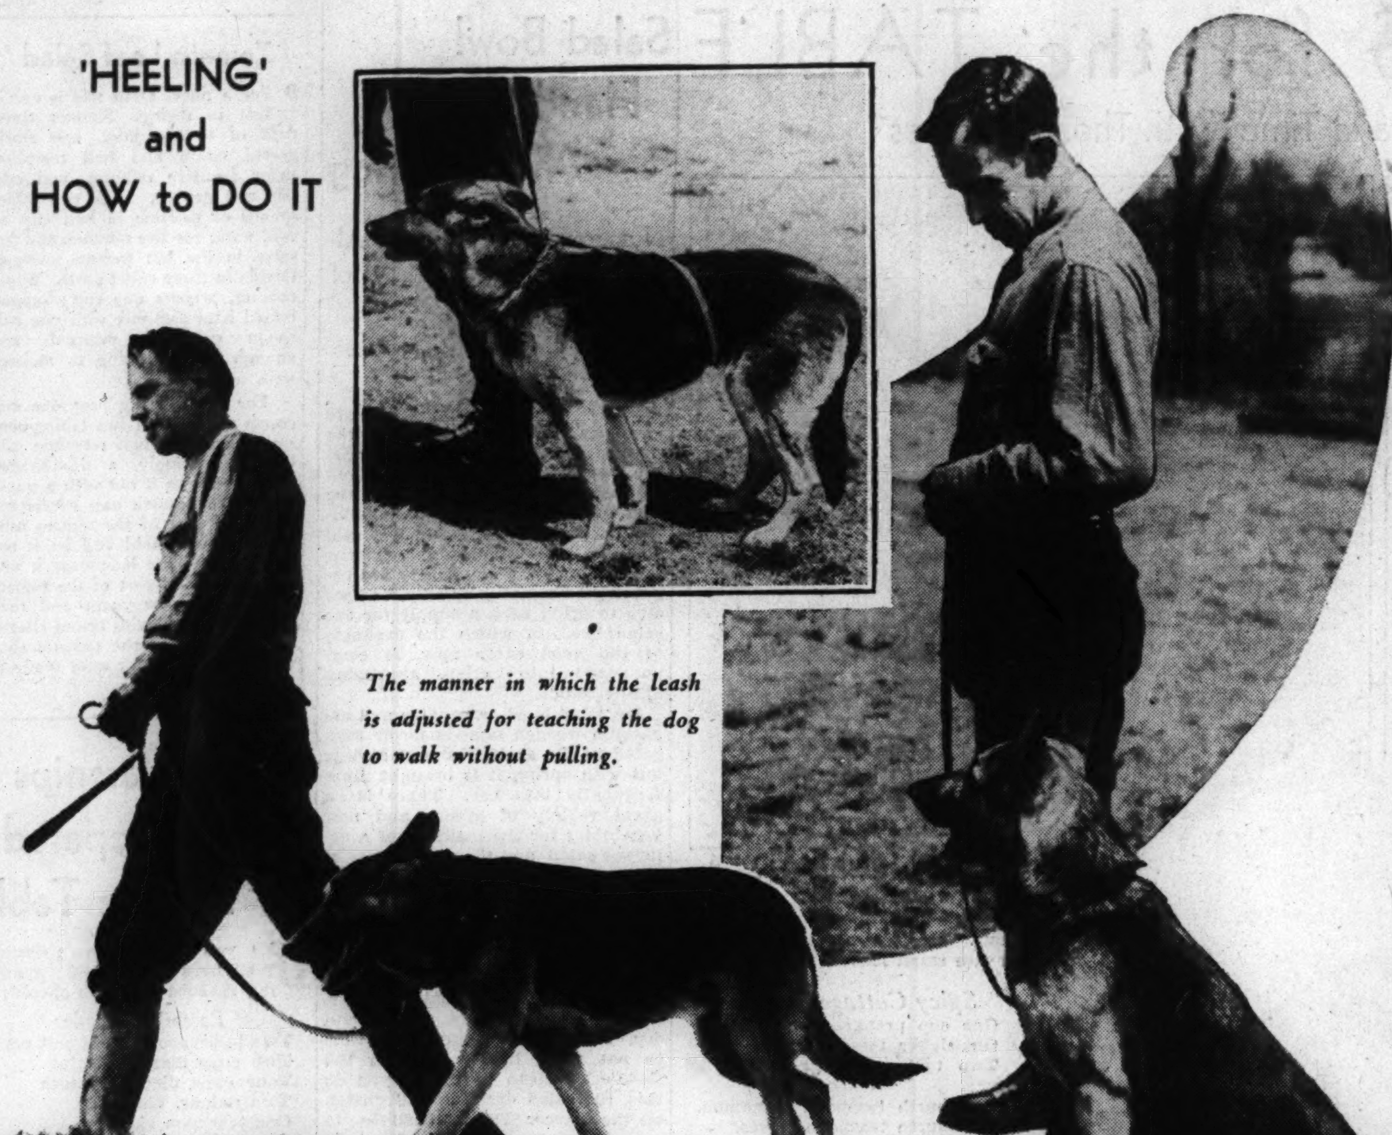
The Shepherd Dog Club of St. Louis will hold its spring field trial at Brown and Lackland roads next Sunday. Competition, open only to members, will be for a leg on the club's cup. This is the club's regular semi-annual field trial. The member who wins three contests will become owner of the trophy. It has twice been contested for. Harry J. Brunsen won the first trial with his dog Turk, and George Harff won the second with his Nira of Owen Park. J. E. Holman Jr. will judge next Sunday's contest.

The Cause of a Headache

Never work in a kitchen where the gas oven burners and several other burners are going full tilt without having ventilation in the room. The air need not be directed on the stove, but air there should be. One lighted burner is said to consume as much air as four adults.

'HEELING' and HOW to DO IT



The manner in which the leash is adjusted for teaching the dog to walk without pulling.

Trainer Owen and his police-trained Bereta of Costilla show the proper manner for walking at "heel." Note that Bereta's head is in line with her master's left knee. Right and above, the proper position for sitting at heel.

The Stamp Review : : by John Chamberlin

STORIES of "stamp finds" are not at all unusual, but here is a collector who made a find in a St. Louis stamp dealer's office. About ten years ago, William H. Semsrott of 7560 Ethel avenue, an attorney for Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney, went into a St. Louis dealers' office, and purchased for 55 cents, five covers which he "turned" in a few weeks for $600. But let him tell the story:

"I went in and asked to see some old United States stamps. The dealer, I won't tell you who it was, told me he had nothing but foreign stamps just then. His office girl suggested to him that there was a small lot of U. S. covers he had recently purchased. The dealer explained to me that they were nothing but some common '57s and '61s on cover, one bunch priced at 10 cents a cover, and the balance at 15 cents a cover. I went through the lot anyhow, picked four from the 10 cent pile and one from the 15c stack; paid my 55 cents and left.

—o-o—

"I HAD two Pony Express covers in beautiful condition, and three very nice patriotics, the Civil War covers with patriotic pictures on the envelope. I sent the five covers to Herman Toaspern in New York, and he sold them for me for about $600.

"The cover that brought the most money was a Patriotic with a head of Abraham Lincoln. One eye was normal, but the other eye was enormous. Underneath was printed 'The Allseeing Eye'. It brought almost half of the money.

"I was glad to get that money, too, because I was wondering how I'd get together enough to pay my tuition to Washington University Law School."

Semsrott is a collector of early United States from the 1847 issue through the 1869 issue, including the re-cut varieties. He says his collection is rather small. It starts out with a dozen or so of the five cent '47, and just a few of the 10 cent.

Anyone discovering old stamped letters or documents, or old letters with queer cancellations or markings, but no stamps, should never cut, alter, deface, or soak off or otherwise remove stamps from the original wrapper paper or envelope to which they are attached. The value of old stamps is increased when they are on the original envelope. Sometimes the only value of old stamps, some of which are very common, lies in the postal markings on the envelope, which should be entire.

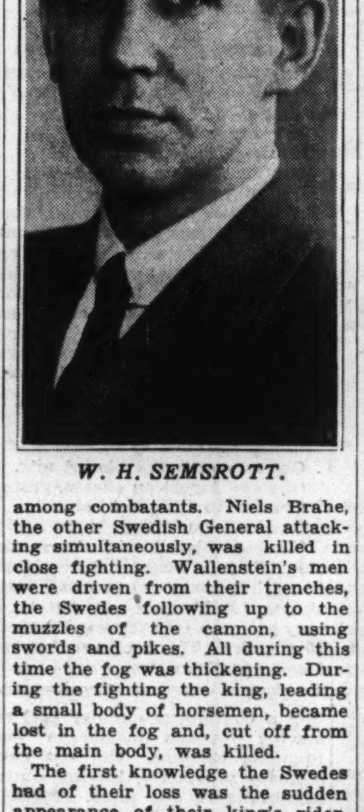
Nov. 16, 1632, on a misty morning, began the battle between Gustavus Adolphus II, the great soldier king of Sweden, and Wallenstein, head of the Allies at Lutzen, in Prussian Saxony. Under heavy fire, the Swedish regiment, led by the king, charged Wallenstein's trenches, while mist drifted among combatants. Niels Brahe, the other Swedish General attacking simultaneously, was killed in close fighting. Wallenstein's men were driven from their trenches, the Swedes following up to the muzzles of the cannon, using swords and pikes. All during this time the fog was thickening. During the fighting the king, leading a small body of horsemen, became lost in the fog and, cut off from the main body, was killed.



W. H. SEMSROTT.

The first knowledge the Swedes had of their loss was the sudden appearance of their king's riderless war horse among them. The knowledge of their leaders death so enraged the Swedes that they swept over the hostile lines and completely routed the enemy.

"After a long and almost fruitless search," Schiller writes, the corpse of the king was discovered not far from the great stone, which, for a hundred years before, had stood between Lutzen and the canal, and, from the memorable disaster of that day, still bears the name of the "Stone of the Swede."

The battle of Lutzen is known as the bloodiest battle of the Thirty Years War.

In 1920 a stamp was issued in commemoration of the 300th anniversary of the establishment of a Swedish post between Stockholm and Hamburg by Gustavus Adolphus II. The stamp (Scott's type A 19) shows the head of the King with the victor's crown of laurel leaves. The stamp is line engraved, and was issued in coil form on tinted paper (Scott's No. 126). The following year the same stamp was issued in sheet form (Scott's No. 134).

A design (Scott's type A27) purporting to show the death of Gustavus Adolphus II was issued in 1932 commemorating the 300th anniversary of the King's death at Lutzen, Nov. 6, 1932 (Scott's Nos. 228 to 233, inclusive). These stamps may be purchased for less than $1.

—o-o—

A booklet has been issued by the Canal Zone Postoffice Department listing all the stamps on current sale in the Zone, and an account of each of the subjects on the stamps, dates of issue, and other interesting information. Mr. W. L. Howard, postmaster in charge of the philatelic agency, will send this booklet for the asking. Address Postmaster, Balboa Heights, Canal Zone.

—o-o—

The demand for the United States 1930 Graf Zeppelin consisting of the 65 cent, $1.30 and $2.60 (Scott's Nos. 1312 to 1314, inclusive) has been so great in the past few months that the price for the set has been steadily rising. Many dealers' stocks have been exhausted and an Eastern dealer is advertising to buy fine sets, either used or unused, at $27.50, almost twice the retail price of the stamps several months ago.

—o-o—

IN order to get plate numbers at the postoffice at Ninth and Olive, on values of 3c or less you must buy the entire sheet; 4c to 10c, blocks of 20; 11c to $5, blocks of four. The Philatelic window is open from 1 to 3 o'clock on Saturdays and from 3 to 6 o'clock on Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Some Benefits To Health in Playing Golf

A Physician Discusses the Physiological Aspects of the Game.

By
Logan Clendening, M. D.

I HOPE by the time these lines reach the reader's eye that the snows of winter will have passed, that the verdure will begin to look exciting, and the voice of the golfer can be heard in the land.

Golf is a game which naturally attracts doctors, and golfers should be able to learn from the doctors methods of controlling their bodily reactions which would improve their game of golf. Let no one begrudge the doctors their pleasure on the basis that they are neglecting their duties. As an eminent Scotch medico-golfer said, "Though all the medical men in Edinburgh were to stop work for a week to play golf, there would not be a death more in the city."

For his patient, the wise doctor is able to recommend golf as a form of treatment. Besides the mere fact of exercise and open air, it may help to produce an attitude of mind which will enable him to bear the ills of the world with more resignation.

One of my colleagues came upon a member of a foursome, which he thought was well ahead of him, hacking away at a bunker and said, "You seem quite happy there." The bunkerite replied philosophically, "I'm just as happy in a bunker as anywhere else." Of course, this philosophic attitude of mind has to be cultivated and let it be said that there is no more annoying fellow-player than the one who is constantly giving way to childish bursts of temper and bad language.

—o-o—

A CLERGYMAN once consulted a specialist in mental troubles on account of repression. He was asked whether he was happily married. He replied, "What has that to do with it? I refer to the repression of bad language at golf." When he was advised to give it up he said, "Give up what—the bad language, the golf or my profession?" The doctor said, "Try giving up the bad language and then if you meet with no success, give up golf." The clergyman replied that he would prefer to reverse the order and give up his profession. If golf has no better lesson to teach you than that, you are getting no benefit from it, physically or mentally.

Another piece of medical wisdom which, though a mere side issue, is still an important part of the game, was promulgated by the great Scotch oculist, Dr. R. Argyll-Robertson, whose name has come down to us on account of his description of the Argyll-Robertson pupil. His advice about the eye in golf is this: "When seeking a lost ball, go exactly to the spot where you saw it light, then take 20 steps back and there you will probably find it."

Hair Brush Is Essential for Looking Best

By Helen Follett

Grace Moore

Her Handsome tresses receive careful grooming every day.

BRUSHING is to the hair what the plucking of dead leaves is to a plant. It is necessary for the well-being of the glorious crown. But alas! Few women even own hair brushes any more. Their explanation is simple; why pay money for an elegant finger wave and destroy it by currying?

When the hair falls it is particularly necessary to use the brush. Every hair that lodges among the bristles is dead and done for, live hair can't be torn out that easily. The sooner the old shafts are removed, the sooner the little young fuzzer will appear to carry on.

Cleanliness of the scalp is imperative and that's why one should not hang onto the finger wave too long. Since the hair lives on the blood streams, scalp massages is helpful. Spread out fingers and thumbs, give the brain roof a tingling, rousing friction.

Oily applications keep the scalp free of dead skin scales, impart a glitter to the hair shafts. So, before the shampoo, apply light-gravity mineral oil which washes out more easily than olive oil or castor oil and alcohol.

Daring in Colors

Add a splash of color to a dark costume and bring it up-to-date. See that the color is very bold and that it is applied with assurance.

High shades in accessories have become so much a part of spring fashions that a bit of daring in their use is necessary to attract attention. One way of achieving the unusual is to wear a little cape or bolero that is bright green or bright red over a modest daytime frock. Another is to combine gay belt and gloves, being careful not to repeat their tone elsewhere. A brilliant sash or cummerbund is a flashy and fashionable accent as is a vivid toque of chiffon or tulle which has a pouf of the transparent material at the center front.

Shoes and hat of cherry red or violet will do wonders toward achieving a fashionable appearance, providing that the outfit is all dark or all dull between the head and the toes.

Man's Outfit Needs Right Accessories

They Help Set Off the Suit—Some Spring Style Suggestions.

By Esquire

WHILE it is true that a good suit adds immeasurably to any man's appearance, the effect is lost if the accessories are shabby, in bad taste or inappropriate.

The black Homburg hat is practically the only alternative to the bowler for wear in London and it is receiving wide acceptance in this country. It is particularly smart with a dark blue or grey business suit or with an oxford grey or black jacket and light grey or checked trousers. It is also perfectly correct for wear with the dinner jacket. In fact, it is the only felt hat that is proper for evening wear.

The newest tapering crown snap brim shows a marked Tyrolean influence. In this hat no dents are worn in the side and the brim is definitely belled.

The porkpie hat is designed for country wear. It has a welt edge and a very narrow band. The brim is moderately wide. This hat looks best in shades of brown or green, but the new blue porkpie is achieving a great following as well.

The brown blucher reversed calf, with a heavy crepe rubber sole, is essentially designed for country wear. The sole makes it very valuable for deck use aboard ship and it is also practical for golf. One of the handsomest innovations in men's shoes is many seasons is the new Norwegian type calf skin shoe. The construction of this shoe is on totally new lines and the result is as comfortable as it is pleasing. The shoe is also for country wear.

—o-o—

THE most formal of town shoes is in black calf and has a plain toe-cap and the square custom toe. The beauty of this shoe depends on its simplicity of line and neatness of effect.

Belts, too, can vary in smartness and a shabby or badly made belt never looks well. A smart cowhide belt with a new buckle, and a braided leather belt, is very smart. Solid color garters are in excellent taste.

Among the bold checked neckwear, which is brand new this spring, the large Glen checks look well with most types of clothing. The bold hound's tooth check is particularly smart with starched collars and solid shirts. The shadow check is suitable for either town or country wear. These are available in a variety of colors to go with any ensemble. Additional checked patterns are also shown at smart stores.

The latest thing in underwear is the deep toned shorts with the white waistband. This combination is so smart that many men will regret the necessity for covering them with trousers. Worn with them a Swiss rib shirt assures a close fit.

The plain sleeveless undershirt and the latest innovation in jockey type shorts are comfortable and roomy and the angle at which the legs are cut insure complete freedom. Great steps have been taken recently in the design of men's underwear.

Brooms may be washed by adding soda and a little disinfectant to the water. Scrubbing brushes are also cleaned in this manner, and may be stiffened by steeping in cold water. Blackhead brushes can be cleaned with the aid of turpentine.

THE PSYCHIC DEPARTS

By
Ely Culbertson

ONE of the most encouraging signs of the times as applied to contract bridge is the virtual disappearance of psychic bidding. Like an absconding cashier, it sneaked away into the night, unmourned, unhonored and unsung. Of course, the money it took with it was remembered wistfully by thousands of hare-brained depositors, but at least they learned their lesson and will undoubtedly choose safer depositories in the future.

Now that the world of bridge has returned to sanity, I can confess that psychic bidding had me greatly worried. I realized that it was undermining and destroying the very foundations of the game; that if it continued on its rampage the game itself was doomed. At flood tide contract was a nightmare. Players who could hardly count trumps indulged in orgiastic psychic bidding on the theory that the more luck and less skill they could put into the game the greater chance they had. Since the theory was built on an anarchistic scheme, naturally it was fallacious. When four of these anarchists played with each other it was fair enough—simply a toss-up whose throat was cut. But in a game of psychers and sane players, the carnage among the former was frightful to behold.

I am so often misunderstood that I feel I must qualify the foregoing remarks. Even in psychic bidding there were the questions of selectivity and degree. I do not condemn all psychic bids, any more than I condemn the possession of firearms by qualified persons. I do maintain that I would not give a child a loaded revolver for a toy. And even where supposed adults are concerned, I feel that the bridge table is not a suitable place for target practice.

● FAILURE TO FOLLOW a partner's signals unless one has an excellent reason is not only one of the most arrogant and insulting gestures a player can make—it is also one of the most expensive. Almost always one partner is in a better position to dictate the proper line of play than is the other; it is both courtesy and common sense to defer to him on such occasions. In the hand shown below West paid no attention to his partner's follow-suit cards; as a result he presented the declarer with an unmakable contract.

	♠QJ107 ♥QJ6 ♦10543 ♣A5
♠A986 ♥A32 ♦KJ7 ♣762	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠5432 ♥4 ♦AQ92 ♣KQJ3
	♠K ♥K109875 ♦86 ♣10984

The bidding (both sides vulnerable, both 40 part score):

East	South	West	North
1♦	1♥(1)	1♠(2)	2♥
2♠	3♥	Dbl.(3)	Pass (4)
Pass (5)	Pass

(1) A dangerous overcall, induced by the score.

(2) Prefers a shaded spade bid, fearing that he will be unable to show the suit at a higher level.

(3) Knows South to be a "stepper" and senses that he is "pushing" this time.

(4) Has a redouble, but doesn't trust partner's bidding.

(5) A close decision, motivated by the same reasoning as his partner's.

—o-o—

● WEST OPENED THE diamond king and East followed with the deuce. Disregarding this command for a shift of lead, West continued with the diamond jack. Luckily for him, no damage was done as yet—South had to follow. But when a third round of diamonds followed, the fat was in the fire. Declarer ruffed and led the king of spades. West took the ace but now was helpless. He shifted to a club, but the ace promptly went up and declarer's three losing clubs were thrown on dummy's good spades. The ace of clubs was the only trick remaining for the defenders, and the contract was fulfilled.

Obviously, both from the angle of following orders and from a study of the dummy, West should have made an immediate shift to clubs. Nothing could then have prevented the defenders from defeating the contract by one trick.

"Cherub" Coiffure

Are you the cherub type or sufficiently near it that the right sort of coiffure will transform you? If so, then you're a lucky person and very much in style. All you need to complete a perfect fashion picture is a good hairdresser, an off-the-face hat and a skirt quite wide at the hemline.

Authorities whose opinions on coiffures and cosmetics are regarded as important advocate the cherub look when it can be achieved without incongruous results. To attain this the hair is cut rather short and arranged quite flat against the head all around. The ends are then rolled up in a halo effect, this forming a frame for the little-girl type of hat. Foreheads invariably look higher with this arrangement and with the right sort of make-up a girl is certain to achieve an expression which says "I wonder what it's all about!"

TAKING A LOOK AT MARRIAGE

A Famous Psychologist Discusses Problems

By Havelock Ellis
Famous British Psychologist.

IF not a defect or a morbidity, is it some deep-lying difficulty in the very nature of sex which leads married couples to discontent and divorce? That is the problem to which some would bring us. There is much to say for it.

The marriage relationship is undoubtedly the most difficult of all personal relationships, and in our civilization that fact has always been more or less concealed.

We throw a veil of romance over marriage; we assume its happiness as a matter of course. Even if that can be said to prove true for the majority, there remains a minority who quickly find that their happiness is not a matter of course and who feel in consequence, sometimes even before the honeymoon is over, that they have been caught in a trap.

That does not mean that we are entitled to fling marriage away, and, after the manner of some, declare that it is bankrupt. It is only so for those who imagined a fairyland remote from life. In reality, it is the most intense and essential part of life.

Success in marriage demands, only in a higher degree, all the skill required for any success in life. All life is a discipline and all living is an art. If we attempt to escape either in marriage it is at our peril.

Finally we come to those who ask whether the modern movement toward divorce is not due to the special stage of civilization we are just now passing through. Here again we may admit an element of truth.

—o-o—

THERE are such phases in civilization. We see something comparable in the Roman Empire when the patriarchal system was losing its rigidity.

The movement toward the social equalization of the sexes, the feminist movement, the legal change which confer new rights and new freedoms on women, are really the manifestations of an evolutionary process which occurs in all civilizations at a special stage, and are not due to any single influence.

It so happens that we are passing through that special stage of change and that ultimately we shall find that marriage and divorce are once more stabilized, but on a different foundation from that which restricted their movement in the earlier periods.

When we then survey the question broadly and consider the main possible answers, we see that on every hand they act to favor the frequency of divorce. That may alarm the conservative upholders of marriage on its ancient foundation. Yet there is no ground for such alarm. We find marriage in every phase of our civilization, and in every other kind of human culture; the forms change endlessly, the substance remains.

Life involves perpetual change, and the lack of it is death.

In England for many years past high legal authorities and experienced Magistrates have advocated an extended power of the Divorce Court to dissolve marriage. The extensions proposed have varied, though none go as far as that "mutual incompatibility" which is admitted by some States in Europe and America.

So far British inertia in social legislation has stood in the way of any real changes here.

At the present time Mr. A. P. Herbert is bringing forward a Marriage Bill which may offer some prospects of success.

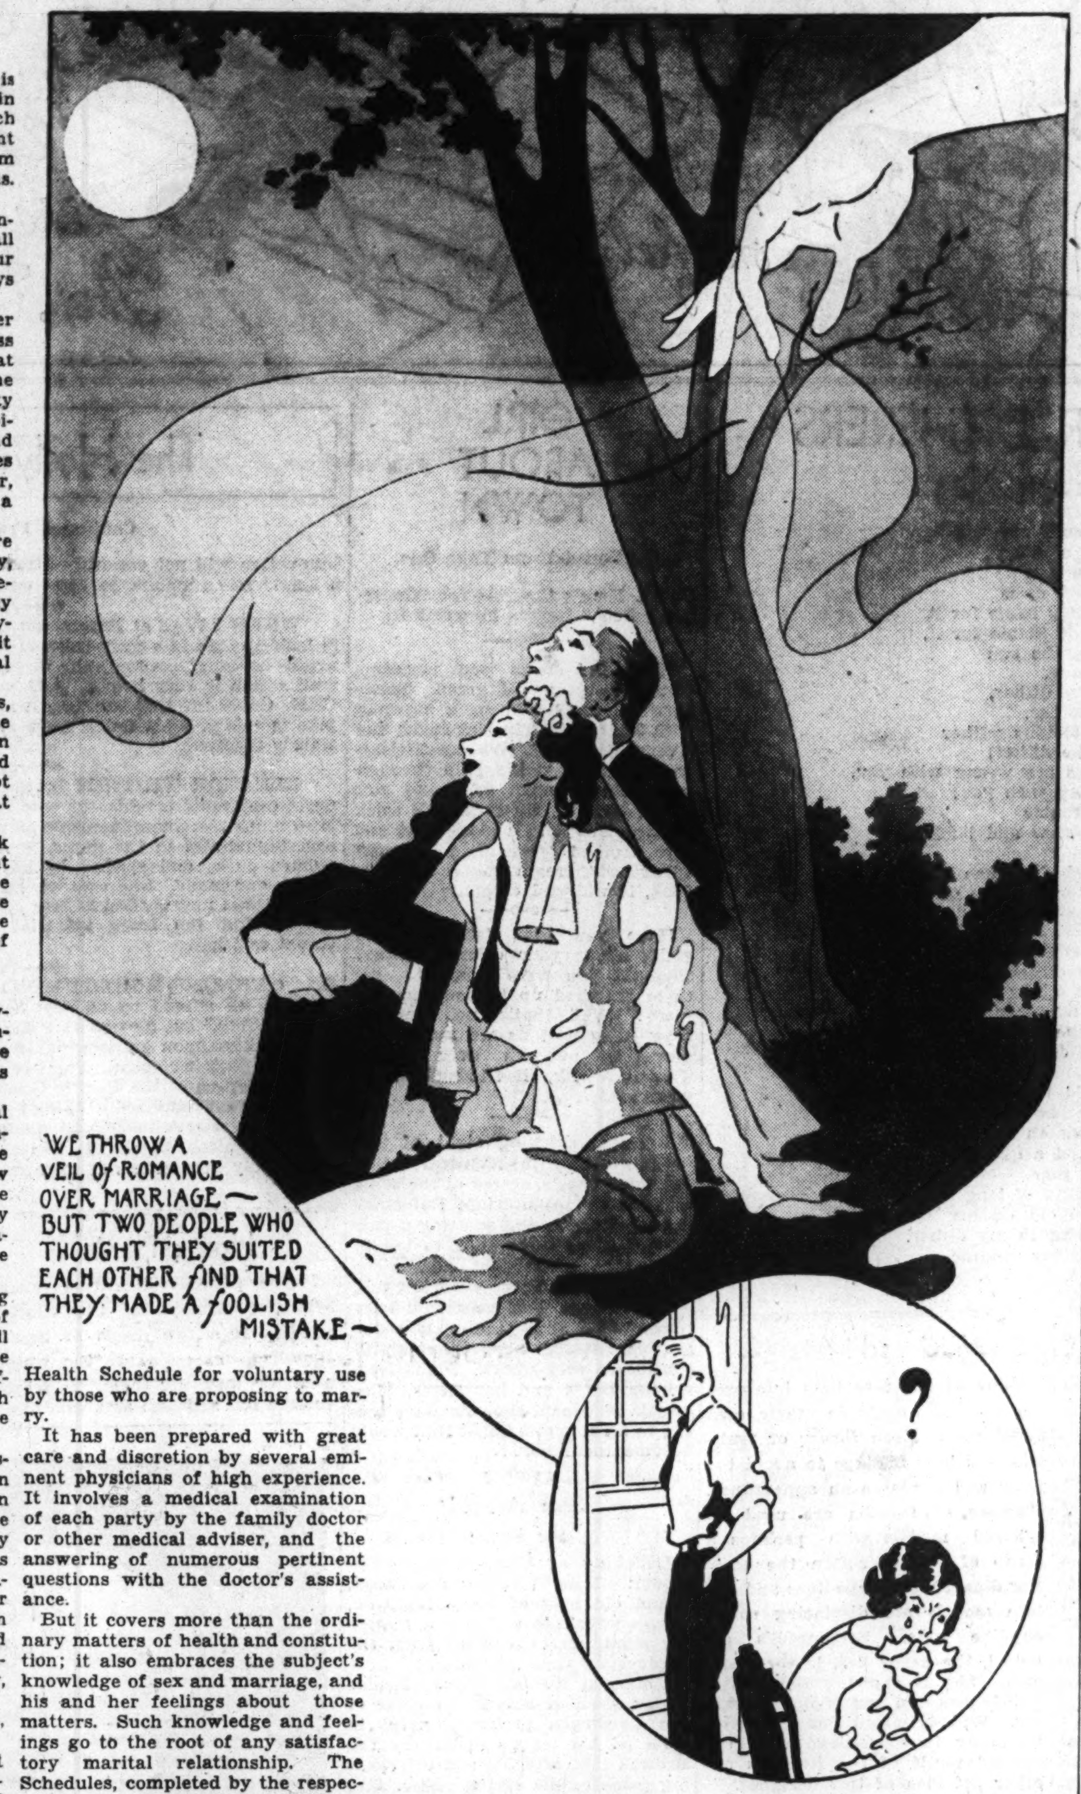
It not only seeks to placate the Churches, which are now indeed becoming more liberal in these matters but to make proper provision for the special needs of the poor, and also, for the first time, to introduce the machinery of conciliation into divorce proceedings, much on the lines of the Domestic Relations Court long familiar in America.

The facilities for divorce, we may be sure, will go on increasing. Yet, in the end, I would turn round and say that while the facilities increase, divorce itself should decrease, and that it is quite reasonable to expect that it will.

For it is always unsatisfactory; it is always a confession of failure. Two people who thought that they suited each other find that they made a foolish mistake. That is so even when they fall back on the simple plea of "mutual incompatibility."

The Divorce problem becomes the Marriage problem. We have been attacking at the wrong end. "Compatibility" is of the essence of marriage and it might well have been ascertained at the outset. It ought never to be necessary to plead the absence of so essential a factor.

Indeed, as we know, even where Domestic Relations Courts exist, self-respect, or the persuasion of relatives prevents resort to the Court, and married couples suffer in secret what often they need never have suffered at all, if they had entered marriage with knowledge and open-eyed intelligence. That is indicated by Dr. Katharine Davis's studies of women college students and by their low divorce rates. Happiness in marriage goes with knowledge and intelligence.



WE THROW A VEIL of ROMANCE OVER MARRIAGE—BUT TWO PEOPLE WHO THOUGHT THEY SUITED EACH OTHER find THAT THEY MADE A foolish MISTAKE—

As I write, the London Eugenics Society is issuing a Premarital Health Schedule for voluntary use by those who are proposing to marry.

It has been prepared with great care and discretion by several eminent physicians of high experience. It involves a medical examination of each party by the family doctor or other medical adviser, and the answering of numerous pertinent questions with the doctor's assistance.

But it covers more than the ordinary matters of health and constitution; it also embraces the subject's knowledge of sex and marriage, and his and her feelings about those matters. Such knowledge and feelings go to the root of any satisfactory marital relationship. The Schedules, completed by the respective doctors, are then ready for the two young people to exchange.

The need for some such preparation as this for marriage has long been vaguely recognized. We have had to wait till today to see it made a practical proposition. Man is, indeed, a queer animal; he is ready to explore the stars and penetrate into the stratosphere, but the practical investigation of his own most intimate affairs comes last!

—o-o—

WHEN we learn to approach marriage in a reasonable way, and with an adequate preparation to meet all its difficulties, we shall be better able to discover the people who are not fitted for marriage. It is they who are largely responsible for the increase in divorce.

Quite true that unfitness for marriage is largely due to defects which might easily have been remedied if taken in time.

But there are some men and women who appear incurable; they marry; divorce follows; they marry again; and again divorce follows; possibly a third time. These are the unmarriageables.

The unmarriageables constitute a serious problem; they are a trouble to other people and they are a trouble to themselves. They must be dealt with. Perhaps now that we are at last beginning to approach marriage seriously, we shall learn how to deal with them.

So that when we take a wide survey we see that the facilities for divorce will go on increasing, and that it is quite right that they should. But we may also see that with a growing knowledge of the real nature of marriage the necessity for resorting to those facilities will constantly decrease.

Plant Care

To keep plants watered when away from home, place in a zinc tub as many bricks as there are flower pots; pour enough water in the tub to cover the bricks and place a pot on each brick. The bricks will soak up enough water to keep the plants in good condition for a long time.

Those Halts In Progress Of the Child

Thorough Effort to Determine Underlying Causes Is Essential.

By Angelo Patri

"I REGRET to say that Simon has made no progress this term. He has made no effort whatever to keep up his grades. He will have to be left back unless he shows marked improvement before the end of next month."

Simon has a high I. Q., but he is at the bottom of the class. Nothing his teacher has said, nothing his parents have said or done, has moved him. He never knows that place in reading lesson. He never finishes his work, if indeed he begins it. He yawns frequently and wiggles constantly. His eyes are on the window or the door, as though he longed for escape. When school is out he is active and happy.

"Why don't you study your lessons?"

"I do."

Now what? He says he does and you know that he does not. You can't talk him into industry and intelligence. He seems to have the ability. Yet he does nothing with it. He has no pride, no shame, as far as school work goes. He simply does not care. His not caring, however, is not simple. It is complex in the extreme, and it is going to take all there is in the teacher and the parents to solve the riddle of a boy who can and who does not.

First, test the I. Q., again. Have an expert do it. Many times I. Q.'s are inaccurate because of the human factors involved. They will always bear re-testing. Then have the expert physician examine the child to make certain his body is functioning normally. Any lack of function is certain to make trouble. Attend to these things first.

Now test his right to be in his present grade. He may be a grade too high, or too low. It is quite as bad to have him graded too low as too high. No child will grow properly unless he has to reach a little, to exert himself a little, stretch his body and mind a little, to accomplish his task. Growth depends on effort always. No effort, no growth. If the work is too easy, even if he does not know it, he will have no interest in it.

Would I promote a child who failed in his grade? If examination results pointed that way, yes. Grading is a means to accelerate teaching, a way of getting the best possible instruction for the most children. There is nothing sacred about grades except their service to the children who comprise them. The service is sacred because it means the growth and development of power in the children, and the grade itself is only the means to that end. Certainly, if an examination discloses that a child has more power than he is using, promote him and give him a chance to stretch himself.

OUR GALLERY OF MODERN TITANS

Unless we are mistaken, historians of the future will toss their hats into the air and cheer hysterically whenever the name of Balboa B. Doakes is mentioned in drawing room or hovel. Mr. Doakes, as everybody admits, is Secretary of the Oversized Truck Owner's Association. For years he fought almost singlehanded for legislation to prohibit taxpaying motorists from using public highways. He contended this simple plan would cut down highway accidents and speed up truck traffic. Discouraged but not defeated, he finally perfected the Noxious Exhaust Gas system. By equipping trucks it was discovered that motorists would twitch, squirm and cough, and finally yield the highways to trucks. He also initiated the present system of feeding truck drivers corn so they would act more like road hogs.

Strawberry Pie Always Is Welcome

by Alice Lynn Barry

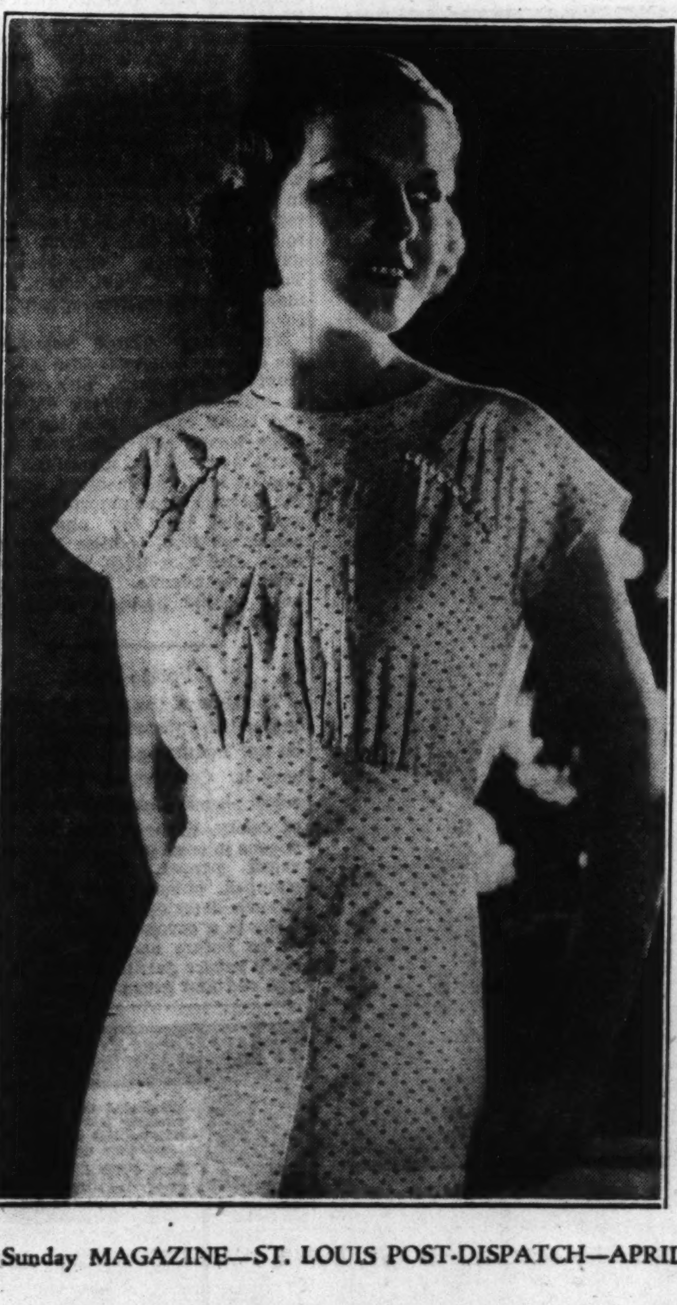
SPRINGTIME or autumn, it's always pie time, and there are always happy faces when mother announces that a batch of home-aked pies is on hand. So we thought that today should be pie day, with plenty of pie talk.

We'll begin with a recipe for plain pastry and one for hot-water pastry. For the latter, cream three-quarters of a cup of lard and beat in half cup boiling water. Cut in three cups of flour and one teaspoon salt sifted together. Chill. Roll out. Bake a shell at 425 degrees for about 15 minutes.

For the plain pastry, sift two cups pastry flour with three-quarters teaspoon salt. Cut in 10 tablespoons lard with a dough blender. Do not cut it in too finely. There should be pieces of fat as large as peas through the mixture. Add five tablespoons water all at once and mix with a fork until the pastry gathers together and leaves the sides of the bowl clean. Roll out. Bake a shell at 450 degrees for about 15 minutes. This will make a double crust pie or two shells.

With strawberries as good as they are this year, let's have a strawberry chiffon pie. Line a nine-inch pie pan with pastry, making a fluted rim. Prick well. Bake at 450 degrees, 12 to 18 minutes. Add one tablespoon gelatin to quarter cup cold water. Beat four egg yolks slightly, add half cup sugar, one tablespoon lemon juice and half teaspoon salt. Cook in double boiler until thick, stirring constantly. Add softened gelatine and stir until dissolved. Add one cup crushed strawberries and juice; heat one minute. Cool. When mixture has thickened and becomes somewhat stiff, fold in the egg whites beaten stiff, to which has been added quarter cup sugar. Fill the cold pie shell. Chill. Top with half to one cup of heavy whipped cream and quarter to half cup sliced strawberries.

PATTERN FOR A SUMMER FROCK



By Anne Adams

HERE'S what to make now for summer, if you want to look cool and delightful while the mercury soars! It's Anne Adams' latest version of the popular "action" frock—as smart for a round of shopping as it is for sports wear. It's trim yet feminine; and there's a nice bit of flattery for your figure in the high-rising waistline that gives a princess effect. It's so easy to make, you'll hardly miss the time you take to turn it out! The perky little sleeves and yokes cut together are just one of its work-saving features. As pictured here, this model is interpreted in a novelty cotton that's both smart and highly practical. You'd also find it adorable in pique or crash; shantung or other wash silks. The pattern is X2701, designed in sizes 12 to 20 and 30 to 42. Size 16 takes 3⅛ yards 36-inch fabric.

Send 15c today for pattern X2701 to St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Pattern Department, 243 West 17th Street, New York, N. Y.

Flower Motifs

Flower prints and flowers play a major part in the mode. Floral prints and floral cut-outs and appliques are used with good effect. Flower prints of vivid design often are misted by an overdress of black net. A full-length cape of black point d'esprit lace is worn over a frock of brilliant carnation print on black. The shoulder straps are formed of masses of carnation cut from the print. A violet print on white taffeta is veiled by an overdress of silk marquisette, caught at the corsage with a clump of violets.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

WOMEN'S SUNDAY MAGAZINE

ON THE RECORD

by

Dorothy Thompson

SOME years ago Louis Adamic wrote a book which ought to be in the library of every patriotic American. It was called "Dynamite," and it described the anarchy in American industry. Mr. Adamic brilliantly traced the origin of much of American gangsterdom and crime directly to practices traditionally prevailing in American industry whereby employers—and workers—fight out their battles through the intervention of industrial spies and private hireling armies.

It is now over a year since Fortune published an amazing article entitled "Strikebreaking," a factual investigation into the activities of Pearl Bergoff, of 551 Fifth avenue, New York, America's No. 1 organizer of mercenary armies for industrial warfare. Fortune showed that amongst the industries which had found use for Mr. Bergoff's services in the past were some of our leading railroads, several municipal street railway companies, and the Standard Oil Co. of New York.

A more sensitive public morality would have stormed the state and Federal capitols demanding legislation to deal with the conditions exposed in that article. For the magazine's reporters revealed that Mr. Bergoff, a private citizen and private detective, hires "thugs and subthugs," 10 per cent of whom have criminal records, arms them from a private arsenal containing everything from brass knuckles to tear gas and machine guns; is able to secure the co-operation of ward politicians and often gets his thugs sworn in for labor troubles as deputy sheriffs; that they are not above fomenting labor troubles themselves through agents provacateurs, to induce strikes which the agency then breaks with the gangs—at a cost of thousands of dollars to employers and misery and heartbreak for workers. And out of this whole outrageous business, the result of which is to subsidize crime, encourage industrial anarchy, and stimulate class hatreds, Mr. Bergoff boasted that a single labor war sometimes nets him a million dollars!

—o-o—

● IT MAY BE recalled that the late Arnold Rothstein was also in this business. He "sold" thugs to trades unions and employers alike. Where the thugs are not acknowledged gangsters they are excellent gangster material, as indeed are many of their employers, the big shots who run this most profitable of rackets. The late William Burns, who, as Fortune says "should have known," described American private detectives as "the biggest lot of blackmailing thieves that ever went unwhipped of justice." The recruits for labor spies and strikebreakers come out of the scum of the slums; the "Captains" understand every known racket; the "lieutenants" are referred to by the gangster term "gorillas." But even they are preyed upon, for whereas the industry pays the racket $10 to $20 per day per man the thug only gets half that much; his employer pockets the rest.

—o-o—

● OBVIOUSLY, AS LONG as conditions such as these can endure, our pious talk about the unspeakable practices of European Fascist governments is somewhat hollow. For what in the world is this form of organization except a peculiarly immoral private Fascism? And what content does the great word "Liberty" have, as long as Liberty means the brutalizing interference of hired gunmen and stool pigeons to accomplish what industrial employers and organized workers fail to work out for themselves: And where do the rest of us come in? The rest of us who may live in communities into which such a crew is imported and who also help pay the bill for crime?

I recommend a campaign against this system to the American Liberty League.

Fur for Spring

Fur-trimmed suits for spring are very popular all over the country. Very often such suits have loose packets with tuxedo borders of fur, fox being favored. We like a suit of wine-colored basketweave woolen with revers of fox shaded from dark to light gray. Brown suits with collar and revers of beige fox are also going well, as are blue suits with azure fox. Ermine-trimmed black suits are starting to register although this fashion was not expected to be in demand. But when there is much color, it always seems to set up a demand for black and white. A black suit has a high collar and wide, loose revers of the snowy ermine.

IT is of course proverbial that New York lives off of out-of-towners who arrive with two dozen dinner shirts and an unquenchable yen for the gaudier sin spots, but it is also true that numbers of New Yorkers die as a result of their own hospitality. Business men whose regular routine of things calls for no more than a theater party a week and a highball or two a day suddenly discover themselves howling their way through Leon and Eddie's at three of a morning, tapering off with a couple of hours of screaming and falling at Josephine Baker's and drinking breakfast at the Madison Avenue Longchamps. Meanwhile they have promised to do the whole thing again that evening. At the end of a couple of weeks of this demented way of life, when everyone has been reduced to a state of acute schizophrenia and is eating his napkin and wiping his face with the fish, the outlanders, full of wonder and Clos de Vougeot, head for home and sanity. The New Yorker orders a new dinner jacket from his tailor, has the refurbishers in to repair his apartment and prepares to take on the next batch of pilgrims whose thirsty yodeling can already be heard somewhere up the Hudson Valley.

SONG FOR DITHERERS

By Ogden Nash

I JOURNEY not whence nor whither,
I languish alone in a dither;
I journey not to nor fro,
And my dither to me I owe.
I could find a pleasanter name for it
Had I somebody else to blame for it,
But alas that beneath the sun
Dithers are built for one.
This is the song of the dither,
For viol, bassoon or zither,
Till the greenest simpletons wither
This is the song of the dither;
When regular troubles are wrong with you,
Others are guilty along with you;
Dithers are private trouble
Where you privately stew and bubble.

COME hither, somebody, come hither,
Would you care for a share of my dither?
I want somebody else to be mad at;
"Have at you!" to cry, and be had at.
I am tired of being angry at me,
There is room in my dither for three,
There is room in my dither for two;
We could butt at each other and moo;
We could hiss like the serpent, and slither
Through the tropical depths of my dither;

LIKE bees we could fight along bee lines,
Or spit at each other like felines;
I care not who gaineth the laurel,
All I want is a foe and a quarrel.
Alone in my dither I pine.
For the sake of the days of lang syne,
For your white-haired old feyther and mither,
Come along, come along to my dither.
With no foe in my dither but me,
I swoon, I lay doon, and I dee.

Tailored Hats

Many of the new hats interpret the tailored mode in their own sweet way. Even flower or fruit-trimmed hats manage to avoid too frilly and feminine an appearance. Clusters of flowers are used on tailored models with perhaps a scrap of veil to soften the edge. For dinner wear, cape-lines and off-lace models are displacing small, cap-like hats. Schiaprelli's pet model, the derby hat, is very popular. She is showing flat, beret-like toques and saucer-shaped sailors. Wide-brimmed Panamas with trimming to correspond with the printed motif of the frock is another pet idea of this designer.

● CATCHING ROBERT MONTGOMERY on a set yesterday I found him not all stirred up as how he was doing in his new picture, "The Suicide Club," but he was very much concerned as to how he was doing in a backgammon game which was being played at lunch hour in his portable dressing room. For two years Robert has been the backgammon champion of the Pacific Coast. But a day or so ago a casual visitor to the set admitted a liking for the game and the result was a new champion. So yesterday all made up and in his dress clothes and a lunch forgotten, the battle was on to regain the coveted title. Seeing and deadly earnestness of their faces I tiptoed on, but I do hope Robert won.

House Plants

House plants will thrive much better, especially in the winter months, if a few drops of liquid ammonia are added to the water used for watering them. It freshens the soil and also acts as a tonic to the roots, improving the color of the leaves and increasing their growth.

For quick seasoning, a large shaker filled with one-quarter part of pepper and three-quarters of salt, mixed, is a great help in the kitchen.

Menu for Sunday

A CHARMING contribution to the amenities of Sunday in a great city is the tally-ho hunt breakfast, or brunch, served in the beautiful old English setting of the panelled room of a New York hotel. There, each Sunday noon, bright young things and mellowed older souls gather to enjoy fine food and conversation, two things most important to a well-ordered civilization.

The hotel chef, an understanding soul, asks visitors to suggest their pet Sunday brunch dishes and each week he selects certain recipes and features them.

Now that nice Sundays are here and guests are driving in from out of town, why not serve brunch, too, incorporating in the menu some of these delectable tally-ho dishes?

Werner Haechler, the good chef of the hotel, was persuaded to part with some of his treasured recipes, also some contributed by prominent society women, when he learned that women everywhere are indulging in Sunday morning brunches as the newest and smartest type of hospitality, especially in the country.

One very good dish recommended by Chef Haechler is shrimps a la Lombardy. Combine two cups boiled rice, one pint cream, six drops of tobasco sauce, salt, one pint mashed shrimps, one tablespoon butter and six tablespoons tomato catsup. Bake in buttered baking dish at 350 degrees F.

Much cheese is wasted by becoming mildewed or "mossy." This can easily be prevented by placing two pieces of lump sugar underneath the cover of the cheese dish. Cheese will then never get dry and always keep fresh.

New U. S. Social Security Law Contrasted With British System In Operation for Last 25 Years

England Recognizes It as National Problem—Review of Two Books That Helps Understanding of Complicated Legislation.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

WASHINGTON, April 18.

FOR an understanding of the new social security program, John G. Winant, chairman of the Federal Social Security Board, is recommending two recently published books. The first of these is "Social Security in the United States" (Whittlesey House) by Prof. Paul H. Douglas of the University of Chicago. The other, describing the British experience with Social Security for American readers, is "Insurance or Dole?" (Yale University Press), by E. Wight Bakke of Yale University.

Anyone who has tried to read the social security act passed at the last session of Congress has been immediately aware of the need for a guidebook to that highly complicated law. It is so complicated that employers who must comply with it have had to appeal to their legal aids for light. For employers particularly, the Douglas book should serve as guide.

We in America are beginning where the British began 25 years ago, Bakke makes plain. The difference is that when the British started their unemployment insurance system there was comparatively little unemployment and that of relatively brief duration. Here unemployment insurance is being started in the face of an army of 12,500,000 unemployed who do not come within the provisions of the law. The British system, Bakke says, has been adjusted to meet the demands of mass unemployment; it has been expanded, in a more or less logical and orderly way, to meet the strains put upon it during the last six or seven years.

Criticism of Present Act.

Professor Douglas is very critical of social security legislation passed last year. It is, he says, inadequate, needlessly complex, liable to work grave injustices between State and State, and because of the way in which it is drawn up open to serious constitutional objections. At best, he says, it is a beginning. Summing up in his preface he writes:

"In its larger aspects, the law is in the tradition which the Western European nations established during a period of expanding capitalism. Whether our newly established system can survive in its present form will depend not only upon the Supreme Court but also upon whether or not capitalism itself will continue in a substantially healthy state. If unemployment should maintain its present level for a long period, then it is quite clear that we shall have to use methods very different from those laid down in the present act."

A fundamental objection that Douglas offers is to the method of raising funds to pay for unemployment insurance and the system of compulsory old age insurance. To meet the costs of unemployment insurance a Federal payroll tax—eventually 3 per cent—is levied upon the payrolls of businesses employing eight or more persons. But the Federal government will remit nine-tenths of this tax to any State that establishes a compulsory unemployment insurance law containing certain minimum standards and assessing a similar State payroll tax. This "offset provision" will undoubtedly be attacked, Douglas says, on the ground that the taxing powers "are here not being used to obtain revenue but to compel the states to enact unemployment laws."

Constitutional Objections.

"It will therefore," he adds, "be alleged that it is regulatory and coercive in its nature and that according to the precedent laid down in the second child labor case it should be declared unconstitutional."

Under title 9 of the social security act one-tenth of the payroll tax is retained by the Federal government and goes into the general funds of the Treasury. In title 3 provision is made for direct grants to the states to pay the costs of administering state unemployment insurance laws. These grants come, of course, out of the one-tenth kept in the Treasury.

Apart from the constitutional objections, Douglas criticises this method, of financing unemployment insurance, through a payroll tax, because, he says, it will tend to make the workers pay for their own insurance. And where wages are already low this will be a serious burden as well as a reduction in the general purchasing power. Employers, says Douglas, will inevitably pass the payroll tax on to employes.

Other Methods Suggested.

Two other methods were urged upon the administration at the time the social security measure was before Congress. Certain groups favor a direct Federal unemployment insurance system which would recognize that unemployment was not a local problem but a national problem. To the argument that this would increase the centralization of the functions of government in Washington, it was answered that the law could be administered in a series of regional offices.

The second method proposed was through direct Federal grants in aid to the states to finance their own unemployment insurance systems. The funds from which such grants would be made would come from increased income taxes. Douglas favors this plan. It meets, he says, the objections of those who argue the right of the states to administer local laws. And it is clearly a more constitutional method than the "offset" method, Douglas states, because the Supreme Court has repeatedly upheld the right of the Federal Government to make grants to the states.

Flat Rate Opposed.

Still another objection which Douglas raises in his critical analysis of the law is that the "offset provision" fixes a flat three per cent tax rate, regardless of the wide variations in unemployment from state to state.

"It should be realized," he writes, "that the three per cent assessment upon employers provided by the Federal act will not give a very appreciable amount of protection. If a three weeks' waiting period (until unemployment benefits begin) is used, the average which can be promised for the country as a whole will probably not exceed 14 or 15 weeks, of benefit per year.

"In the states with low unemployment rates such as South Dakota this can of course be increased, but in states with high unemployment such as Michigan, even less than this can be given. Such provisions are of course grossly inadequate and it is desirable to extend the benefit period to at least 20 weeks and if possible to 26 weeks. But to do so will require additional funds in all except the states with extremely low unemployment rates . . . "

With the 3 per cent provision in the Federal law, it is not likely that the statse will provide larger amounts, Douglas says, because of the fear that to do so will handicap industry. Thus, if the Wisconsin law provided a 4 or 5 per cent payroll tax and the Michigan law only 3 per cent, industry in Wisconsin could complain it was under an unfair disadvantage in competing with industry in Michigan.

Two kinds of old-age pensions are included in the law. The first

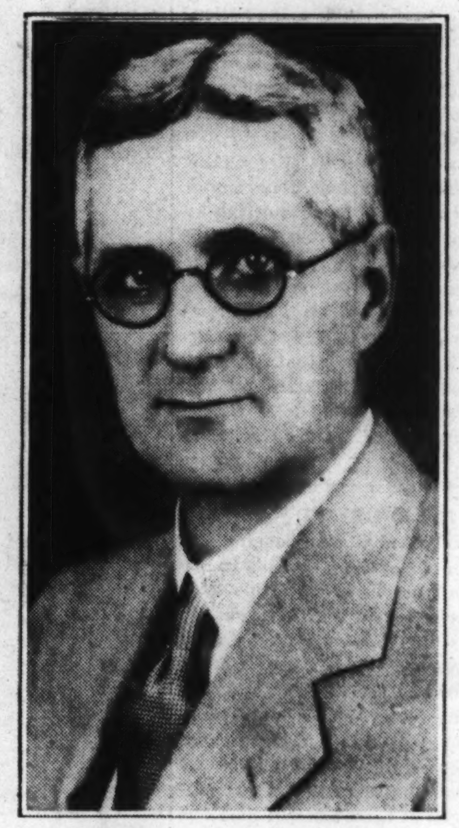
The CASE for CONSTITUTIONAL REVISION

—By DR. CHARLES GROVE HAINES

"Those of 1787 to 1789 and of 1861 to 1865 Did"

Political Scientist Admits There Would Be Strong Opposition—But Thinks Calling of Convention by Congress and States Not Impossible.

THE AUTHOR



CHARLES GROVE HAINES

HE was born in Maryland 57 years ago and educated at Ursinus College in Pennsylvania and at Columbia University from which he holds a doctorate. His teaching connections have been as follows: Ursinus (1906-10), Whitman College (1910-1914,) University of Texas (1914-1917 and 1918-1925), University of Chicago (1917-1918) and University of California at Los Angeles since 1925. A political scientist with special interest in constitutional problems, he has written several books, including "The Conflict over Judicial Powers in the United States" and "The American Doctrine of Judicial Supremacy" He is a frequent contributor to French publications on government and public law.

By IRVING DILLIARD,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

ANOTHER professional student of the United States Government and the constitutional problems involved has come out in favor of a thorough-going revision of the Constitution, preferably by a constitutional convention expressly charged with responsibility by Congress and the States.

He is Dr. Charles Grove Haines, professor of political science in the University of California at Los Angeles. He has set forth his reasons in a scholarly article in the Yale Law Journal entitled, "Judicial Review of Acts of Congress and the Need for Constitutional Reform."

Arguing against the probable adequacy of any check on judicial invalidation of legislative acts which might be devised, Dr. Haines finds the American people are by force of circumstance brought face to face with a real challenge to twentieth century statesmanship. This challenge, as Dr. Haines phrases it, is "whether we shall take steps to overcome the extreme rigidity of our constitutional law by adopting a series of constitutional amendments which will carry out the purpose and intent of the constitutional development of more than a century to make the United States in reality a nation, and whether we shall begin an agitation in favor of a constitutional convention with the object of securing a thorough revision of the Federal fundamental law."

Dr. Haines Puts Two Basic Questions.

Accordingly, he has written two questions on the blackboard and it is evident that he hopes that the issues which they raise will be widely discussed. His first question is:

"Will the statesmen of the twentieth century fail to take the necessary steps to adjust their government to the prevailing conditions of economic and political life?"

The second: ...

"Will national policies and progress be confined permanently within the express restrictions and judge-made limits of a written constitution prepared essentially to suit eighteenth century conditions, or will both the Constitution and its judicial gloss be changed, as Jefferson and Lincoln insisted they should, to accord with the progress of the life of the people?"

The cue for the American people today is to be found in the past, Dr. Haines asserts. "The statesmen of 1787 to 1789 faced the issue and did not hesitate when necessary to resort to revolutionary methods to change the fundamental law to meet the conditions of the time," he remarks. Similarly, "the statesmen of 1861 to 1865 refused to permit the Constitution to stand as a barrier in the way of carrying out the well-matured sentiment and policies of the nation."

Dean Garrison and William Yandell Elliott.

In taking this stand for constitutional revision, Dr. Haines joins the list of specialists in political science who have become convinced that nothing short of reform of the fundamental law will enable government in this country to cope with present-day and future problems growing out of highly mechanized, industrialized society.

One of them is Dean Lloyd Garrison of the Law School of the University of Wisconsin, who, as Dr. Haines points out, has proposed an amendment which would give Congress "power to promote the economic welfare of the United States by such laws as in its judgment are appropriate, and to delegate such a power, in whole or in part to the States. Existing State powers are not affected by this article except as Congress may occupy a particular field."

Another is Dr. William Yandell Elliott, professor and chairman of the department of government in Harvard University, whose book, "The Need for Constitutional Reform," was the basis of an extensive news review in the Post-Dispatch just a year ago. The events of the last year have only served to strengthen Dr. Elliott's convictions. In a radio address broadcast from New York last week he said that if the "Founding Fathers" were alive today they would be the first to work for needed changes in the Constitution.

Declaring that the Bill of Rights required no change but that the parts of the Constitution covering the division of powers among the legislative, executive and judicial departments needed revision, Dr. Elliott proposed an amendment establishing specific Federal power for the regulation of commerce, industry, agriculture and the production or extraction of natural resources throughout the United States.

No National Planning Is Possible at Present.

The invalidation of the major enactments of the Roosevelt administration, to return to the discussion of Dr. Haines' article in the Yale Law Journal, means, he says, that "there can be no consistent national planning along either economic or political lines, that progress in the carrying out of national policies can only be by fits and starts, that periods of forward movement will be followed by periods of political paralysis when the wheels of government must stand still while new paths to meet the wishes of our legal conservators are being formulated."

This situation, he reasons, points to the conclusion "that either the present Constitution must be revised so that adequate powers may be granted to the Federal Government to deal with those conditions for which the states are separately incompetent and some of the shackles which now fetter state action must be removed, or steps must be taken to secure a form of national legislative supremacy."

There is no doubt in Dr. Haines' mind that the time has come to give serious consideration to the calling of a constitutional convention—"though it be a long deferred one, when viewed according to the Jeffersonian standard." (Jefferson held the view that periodic revision was desirable.) "All who desire to see a system of government adequately organized to cope with the complex problems of modern life must look forward to the early calling of a national constitutional convention."

Dr. Haines thinks that for the most part, excepting certain outmoded portions, the present provisions of the Constitution could be retained, with special efforts, however, to remove certain of the checks and balances which were in his opinion, "deliberately inserted in the Constitution to prevent free and effective action."

To quote him at this point:

Meantime, He Suggests, People and States Need Not Accept Status Quo but May Find Ways of Mitigating Hampering Court Decisions.

"More definite arrangements should be provided for the co-operation of the legislative and executive departments. Significant changes are necessary along the line of the increase of Federal powers. Authority should be given to the Federal Government to regulate commerce, industry and business, both state and interstate, so far as is necessary to carry out national policies. The Federal Government should be given authority to secure uniform control over crime and criminal procedure, as well as authority to develop standards and secure uniformity in the field of social and economic legislation.

Powers That the Federal Government Should Have.

"Ways should be devised also for the extension of regional planning, both in the organization and administration of government. It is significant to note that the proposal to increase the powers of the Federal Government accords with the constitutional provisions and the practice of other Federal systems of government."

Here he makes the observation that authority is granted to the national government of Argentina to enact civil, commercial, penal and mining codes and "to provide for all that conduces to the prosperity of the country, to the advancement and welfare of all the provinces and to the advancement and enlightenment of the people."

Primary consideration, he continues, "will need to be given to the removal of the checks and the paralysis of political activity resulting from the review of legislative acts. To readjust the arrangements now generally followed in the exercise of this authority, it will be necessary to distinguish three types of judicial review. First, there is a type which relates to the requirement that the proper procedure be followed in the enactment of laws, as for example, that a measure be approved by both houses and that no irregularity vitiate the process of its consideration and enactment. This type of judicial review is recognized in most countries having written constitutions. Even where legislative supremacy prevails, as in France and Belgium, the courts are conceded to have the authority to interfere to correct procedural irregularities."

Judicial Review Of Legislative Acts.

Pointing out that some of the most important and effective work of the United States Supreme Court has been done in a second field, Dr. Haines takes up next judicial review which is jurisdictional in its nature. "This type of review so far as legislative acts are concerned is an important phase for the government in all Federal systems," he says.

"Some umpire must be authorized to adjudicate the conflicts that may arise when the Federal or local agencies interfere with the rights and functions of each other. It has been customary to confer upon the courts this umpire function. Whenever the provisions of the constitutions are relatively clear and the powers have been expressly and definitely divided between national and local agencies, this jurisdictional type of review involves the courts in few controversies. The main purpose in constitutional division, so far as this type of review is concerned, should be to make the division of powers between Federal and local agencies as clear and exact as possible and to avoid such phrases as due process of law or equal protection of the laws which encourage the judges to engage in objectionable forms of legislation.

"This form of review of legislation operates to better advantage where, as in Switzerland, to the corrective of constitutional amendments there is added legislative authority to intervene when the public necessity or welfare requires, or where, as in Canada and Australia, vague and indefinite phrases are to a greater degree than in the United States omitted from the Constitution.

Third Type—Check On Substantive Laws.

"The third type of review is one in which the written fundamental law is interpreted or understood through vague, general terms such as due process of law and equal protection of the laws to give authority to the courts to check substantive acts of legislation and administration, thereby subjecting co-ordinate branches of the same government

Labor Says Industry Could Provide 'Happy Days' for All But Does Not Tell How

Declares Nation Must Shift From Federal Aid to Private Jobs or Keep 'Standing Workless Army Seething With Discontent.'

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—In its monthly survey of business, the American Federation of Labor today declares that if American industry could co-ordinate production, distribution and service and would try to meet the unfilled needs of the people, the national income for 1935 could be doubled, more than 12,500,500 unemployed persons could be put to work and the average family would have an annual income with a purchasing power of $3688.

There is a big "if" in the Federation's hypothesis and the April survey does not give its own solution, but states alternatives:

"Either we make the transition from Government support to private employment by increasing wages, shortening hours and putting the unemployed to work in industry, or we keep a standing workless army seething with discontent because of the injustice done them in denying jobs at decent pay."

The survey observes that "already the unemployed are organizing and recent demonstrations show that American workmen will not submit forever to forced idleness and public support."

Re-employment Lags.

The survey contrasts the promising expansion of industrial and financial operations with the lack of improvement of conditions among the unemployed, saying:

"With the growing conviction in the business world that we have at last turned the corner to recovery, the present becomes a time of great significance. As we stand at the threshold of the next industrial boom we see on the one hand a great army of unemployed which in spite of all the gains of the last three years still numbers more than 12,000,000; on the other hand we see a rising stock market and easy money rates tempting to speculation.

"We know that the buying power created by industry is not keeping pace with production; that reemployment has fallen far behind rising business. We have reached the moment when industrial income has recovered enough to make possible substantial wage increases in a large number of industries. If these wage increases are accomplished we may hope to create a market which will sustain production and eventually put a large number of the unemployed to work in industry where they will create wealth, thus establishing a sound basis for prosperity.

"If wages are not increased we may well fear a runaway stock market where fictitious values, without basis in production, will bring a boom and a crash worse than the last."

In April, the survey says, business looked to the future with more confidence than in any other period since the depression began.

Rising Tide of Business.

Commenting on a prediction that "the rising tide of business expansion is becoming irresistible," the survey continues:

"A number of important trade barometers show the increasing vigor of upward forces: (1) Industrial profits continue to increase; National City Bank records now available for 1490 industrial corporations show a 49.7 per cent increase in profits in 1935 over 1934. These corporations earned 6.7 per cent on their net worth in 1935, compared to 4.3 per cent in 1934. Standard Statistics states: 'The trend of earnings is still markedly upward' and forecasts further increases this year. Tax experts estimate that corporation profits this year will be 30 per cent above 1930 and only 29 per cent lower than the all-time peak of 1929. (2) Dividend payments have increased; the New York Times reports a gain over last year of 18 per cent of $105,000,000 in dividends paid during the first quarter. (3) Stock market prices, which are a sensitive indicator of business optimism, have risen almost steadily for more than a year; the uptrend was so vigorous that disturbing events did not check it. (4) Industrial production in April is estimated at 14 per cent above last year and production in the second quarter is expected to exceed 1935 by 12 per cent. (5) Gains are marked in the heavy industries: Steel is operating at 66 per cent of capacity, the highest level since 1930; General Motors' sales, for the first quarter this year set an all-time record, exceeding even the pre-depression peak; orders for machine tools exceed last year by more than 100 per cent; building contracts in March were 83 per cent above last year. The index of production in capital goods industries has been rising for 10 months with the exception of January. (6) Consumer buying, the foundation for all these gains, is considerably above last year as indicated by auto sales, a 9 per cent rise in department store sales (first quarter), the best Easter season in retail stores since 1930.

"Government relief payments to farmers (especially if shared with farm workers), to veterans and on the WPA program will raise buying power during summer months so that by fall we may expect further increases in consumer buying. But so far industry is depending largely on the Government to raise buying power."

Industrial Resources

In estimating the industrial resources of the country and a possible market for goods the survey quotes from a national survey of potential product capacity, a study similar to the Brookings Institution's two works, "America's Capacity to Produce" and "America's Capacity to Consume."

The "potential survey" called for production almost double the 1935 levels. It found that there was underconsumption—that is a market, if the people only had the money with which to buy—of automobiles, clothes, houses and health services. It said that a program for adequate living standards would increase production of food on farms by 44 per cent, make large increases in various goods for personal use, raise recreation services more than 100 per cent and double educational opportunities several times.

"American industry and American man-power are already equipped to make these increases," the Federation survey declares. "Today we are failing to accomplish them, while 12,500,000 men and billions of dollars worth of machinery and equipment stand idle, because we have no plan to co-ordinate our thousand industries and make them produce for the nation's needs. Once such a program for production, distribution and service were put into effect, the problem of unemployment would solve itself. Under a proper schedule of work hours, the man power needed by industry would increase. Instead of the 25,637,000 wage and salaried workers employed in February, 1936, 38,072,000 would be needed. There would be jobs for 12,435,000 more—putting all the unemployed to work.

$3688 for Each Family.

"To lift production according to the program would increase the national income to almost double its 1935 figure. The national income in 1935, when all goods and services are counted as well as money income, was probably about $66,000,000. Production as outlined above, at present prices, would lift it to nearly

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Reply to Mr. Beard.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE intention of the founders of the Constitution is expressed in the document itself. As Charles A. Beard says, the Constitution was adopted to meet an emergency, a grave emergency. For when the Constitutional Convention assembled, we are told, there was no market for products of farms or factories, no demand for labor, no sound of the hammer except that of the auctioneer, inability to pay taxes was general, debtors were unable to meet even interest payments, and stay laws (moritoriums) were adopted in many states to save the homes of the debtors.

Mason, Martin and Henry favored a grant of authority to the national Government to assist the distressed class and help the states carry the relief burden. This grant of power was opposed by Washington, Jefferson, Madison and Hamilton. They carried their point and limited the powers of Congress to the powers specifically granted, and granted powers should be exercised only for the "general welfare."

The states had emitted bills of credit, made property of little or no value legal tender for the payment of debts, and had impaired the obligation of contracts in numerous ways. These "relief powers" were taken from the states and denied to the national Congress. Mason saw nothing but intensified misery for the distressed people. The successful group rejected class legislation as incompatible with national security and general welfare, and for the same reason denied the power to the states. These issues were taken to the people with the Mason party opposing the adoption of the Constitution with these restrictions incorporated.

Mr. Beard would make the general welfare clause a political and legislative question, rather than judicial. This would be equivalent to abolishing the Constitution, for Congress would be the exclusive judge of what is or is not for the general welfare. The courts cannot invalidate a law involving a purely political or legislative question.

Waiting for the Student Strikes.

Slums and Human Nature.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN all the hurrah about low-cost housing, no one seems to mention one phase of the question: the people themselves create the slums.

Cleanliness is definitely an artificial state of being, and the tendencies of the average person are destructive. Anyone who has never been in a train, public wash room, courthouse, museum or similar place will realize the fact, although such places are religiously cleaned each day. Even in high-class shops and offices, only the most constant supervision keeps the public rooms approximately fresh and undefaced.

There are districts in St. Louis that began their careers as high-class residential sections. By the strange mutations that govern a city's life, they have become squalid and undesirable. This is not the fault of the buildings, for they are well built and often more attractive than the grimcrack bungalow neighborhoods. Most of their pristine charm could be retained by a little care and interest on the part of their inhabitants. "The right sort of people" can live in a house for centuries without defiling it, even though they be poor. Unfortunately, it is exceptional.

It would be wonderful if modern improvements and labor-saving devices could be shared by everyone, but I can't help feeling that even the most up-to-date effort in low-cost housing will present after the lapse of a very few years just about the same dreary aspect that slums do today. We can change a lot of things but not human nature. I wish I were wrong.

PERCY WOODS.

Sees Borah As the Logical Republican.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I BELIEVE William E. Borah is the logical man to lead the Republican party to victory next fall, for the following reasons: he is versed in international politics and is internationally known to be against war; he has liberal views, which are vital in this campaign; he is unscathed after 30-odd years before the public; he has always voted his convictions; he is poor prey for the lobbyists.

The Republicans will lose ground on the relief vote, perhaps justly, and only Borah can draw the cold and lukewarm votes from the remaining brackets of the opposite party. It would be only a step from the Democratic party to Borah, but a conservative Republican would be farther away than a Socialist. Borah would receive nearly 100 per cent support from the political organizations that are hostile to the present administration.

Borah would get more constructive legislation through Congress than any other man. He has conscientiously served the public, and the voters of his district have returned him term after term.

JEFFERSON COUNTY REPUBLICAN.

A MISLEADING RESOLUTION.

In a resolution introduced by Gus O. Nations, the Lawyers' Association of St. Louis places itself on record against the better juries campaign, now being conducted by the Chamber of Commerce and the Associated Industries, with the approval and cooperation of the St. Louis Bar Association. We trust that no one will be misled by this obvious attempt to confuse the issue.

In the first place, since one organization of lawyers has arrayed itself in opposition to another, it becomes important to distinguish between the two. The Lawyers' Association of St. Louis has been functioning for only one year. Its purposes and aims are not yet altogether clear in the public mind. The St. Louis Bar Association has been in existence for more than 60 years. In its membership are most of the outstanding lawyers of the city. Its efforts to improve the standards of the bench and bar are well known and have won the admiration and esteem of all classes of citizens. The comparison which the Lawyers' Association has invited by its opposition to a program approved by the Bar Association is inevitably favorable to the latter.

A study of Mr. Nations' resolution reveals it to be an appeal to class prejudice, as well as a misstatement of the issue involved. "A concerted effort is being made," says the resolution, "through public addresses to groups of potential jurors, to influence and prejudice such jurors in advance against one class of litigants and in favor of another class in certain types of action."

The resolution continues:

> Such practice tends to pervert and corrupt the processes of justice by tampering with and prejudicing prospective jurors, in contempt of the courts and in violation of the spirit and purpose of the law, and to undermine public confidence in the integrity of the courts and their officers.

Instead of being a movement to "pervert and corrupt" justice, the campaign for better juries is an effort to correct a condition in which justice is being perverted and corrupted. It is a notorious fact that St. Louis juries are not representative of the community. It is a notorious fact that the city is a happy hunting ground for unscrupulous damage suit lawyers. It is a notorious fact that awards in such damage suits are grotesquely high and, worse, that they are granted by juries in cases where no awards at all should be made.

For cold, statistical demonstration of these statements, we point to the insurance company rates on liability insurance. These rates are based on insurance company experience and they show that, in 11 classes of liability insurance, St. Louis rates are either highest or second highest among all the large cities of the country. As we said in an editorial in April, 1935: "Either St. Louis juries are awarding damages in many cases where none should be awarded, or jurors in all other large cities are discriminating unjustly and by wholesale against claimants. The latter is hardly credible."

This condition is not only a "perversion and corruption" of justice, but the high insurance rates come out of the pockets of all of us, in one way or another. The man who owns a car and who takes out insurance against accidents is heavily penalized because juries incapable of analyzing the facts in damage suit cases are rendering wrong verdicts. So is the man who owns a business. So, in the long run, are the employe and consumer, who get less pay and are charged higher prices because insurance costs figure in fixing payrolls and costs.

One of the reasons St. Louis juries are incompetent is that men of education, experience and good judgment have been shirking their jury duties. It has been an easy matter to obtain excuses from jury service. The politicians have been active in asking Judges to grant such excuses, and the Judges themselves have been very lenient. It is one of the objectives of the better juries campaign to impress upon citizens the dangers inherent in failure to perform one of the highest duties of citizenship.

Judges, lawyers and court attaches in recent years have seen hundreds of cases involving complicated issues tried before juries unfit by training or experience to understand the testimony, much less to pass upon it. They have seen lawyers "shopping" around the courthouse looking for jury panels which they can impress by appeals to passion and prejudice, without regard for the facts.

The thing has become scandalous and farcical and it ill behooves a professional organization, supposedly designed to advance the standards of the profession, to take its stand against improvement. St. Louis must have juries which are truly representative of the community, and it is going to get them.

GOOD-BY MARS.

An article in the April Scribner's takes for its text "The Impossible Next War," and the author, Roger Burlingame, seemingly wins his case. The substance of his argument is the cost. He pays Congress and the American Legion the ironic compliment of having immortalized the dove of peace by making war financially prohibitive. He talks not in metaphors but in mathematics.

The item of pensioners is illuminating. For the 10 years from 1919 to 1929, the number of pensioners in France decreased slightly more than 14 per cent. In England, the decrease was 17.4 per cent. So in other European countries. But here in the United States during the same period our pensioners, he exclaims in italics, increased 866 per cent. Where England's yearly cost per casualty had trickled down to $104.50 in 1931, the United States was paying $2688.61.

So we have deported Mars, Mr. Burlingame says; pelted him off the planet with dollars. At peace we shall be, and busted.

A FORCE FOR CULTURAL UNDERSTANDING.

Although consisting chiefly of German scholars who were unable to continue their research and teaching at home after the rise of Hitler, the Graduate Faculty of Political and Social Science (the "University in Exile") of the New School for Social Research in New York has in a relatively short time become a part of the educational system of this country. Those who have followed the development of the faculty on American soil know that this is true without being told so. Others will find proof in the fact that many American professors of the social sciences will attend its coming summer session in order to assist in bringing into relief the differences and similarities between the European and the American points of view. Under the plan, American scholars will be permitted to register at no tuition charge, with the understanding that they will take an active part in the seminar discussions.

Thus, this unique educational enterprise, for which the vision and industry of Dr. Alvin Johnson, director of the New School, must be thanked, is not only the means for keeping alive the free spirit and inquiring methods of the untrammeled university, so long one of the glories of German life and culture. It is to be the means whereby many American scholars will have intimate contact with European scholarship at its best—a cultural privilege which otherwise would be denied to many of them.

AS THE GOVERNOR STANDS PAT.

A vivid discussion of the relief problem in St. Louis was held the other night at Union Methodist Church under the auspices of the Christian Youth Conference. It brought home the desperate plight of the unemployed, whose relief payments have been curtailed by Gov. Park's failure to take action.

One of the speakers pointed out that such payments have been cut to $9 a month. Dean Sweet of Christ Church Cathedral said he had received within 24 hours three letters and one visit from persons so disheartened that they are contemplating suicide. One of his correspondents said her allowance has been cut to 18 cents a day. "Nothing for rent, nothing for clothing, only 18 cents a day for food, and not even an allowance for gas to cook the food with."

The Rev. George H. Tolley, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, told of a woman 71 years old who has recently been taken off relief. "With the notice," he said, "she got a letter cautioning her to pay no bills, to conserve what little money she had and use it only for food. I think that when government encourages that sort of dishonesty, it has sunk pretty low in the scale of things."

Of course, these details could be multiplied a thousandfold without scratching the surface. Next month, when even less money is available because of the exhaustion of the last appropriation from the State, things will be even worse.

Meanwhile, the Governor stands pat on his refusal to call the Legislature. Meanwhile, also, an expert on State finances, Carter Atkins, director of the Governmental Research Institute, contends that the Legislature, if it did meet, could appropriate several million dollars without an increase of taxes.

How bad must the situation get before Gov. Park acts?

COSTIGAN: PUBLIC SERVANT.

The announcement of United States Senator Edward P. Costigan (Dem.), of Colorado, that his health will not permit him to seek re-election this year will be received with much regret over the country. It means that Congress will lose one of its most conscientious public servants. He has deep convictions and has always stood by them.

The term in the Senate followed a career already notable. Organized labor will not soon forget the way he took up and successfully defended its cause after the shocking Ludlow massacre in 1914. Representing the striking miners at congressional hearings and in court when several of them were on trial, he later joined with Miss Josephine Roche in her experiment in coal mine management based on harmonious relations between employer and employes.

Indeed, it was as counsel for Miss Roche's Rocky Mountain Fuel Co. that Mr. Costigan performed one of his greatest social services. The purposes of the contract which workers and employer signed were declared by him to be as follows:

> To promote and establish industrial justice.
> To substitute reason for violence, confidence for misunderstanding, integrity and good faith for dishonest practices, and a union of effort for the present economic warfare.
> To avoid needless and wasteful strikes and lockouts through the investigation and correction of their underlying causes.
> To establish genuine collective bargaining between mine workers and operators through free and independent organization.
> To defend our joint undertaking against every conspiracy or vicious practice which seeks to destroy it, and in all other respects to enlist public confidence and support by safeguarding the public interest.

Mr. Costigan's resignation from the Federal Tariff Commission stirred official Washington as did few things during the complacent time of Coolidge. Convinced that the Tariff Commission was being manipulated for political purposes, he announced his voluntary retirement in these words:

> In the face of continuing offense, both of omission and commission, I have decided to end my official experience. . . . Public service still demands public fidelity. The ancient right of remonstrance remains. An official witness of law violations, I have successively appealed to the President and to Congress. One further dissent is in order—I am, therefore, returning my official commission to the Government.

Men of Costigan's independent way of thought are needed in public life, and never more so than today.

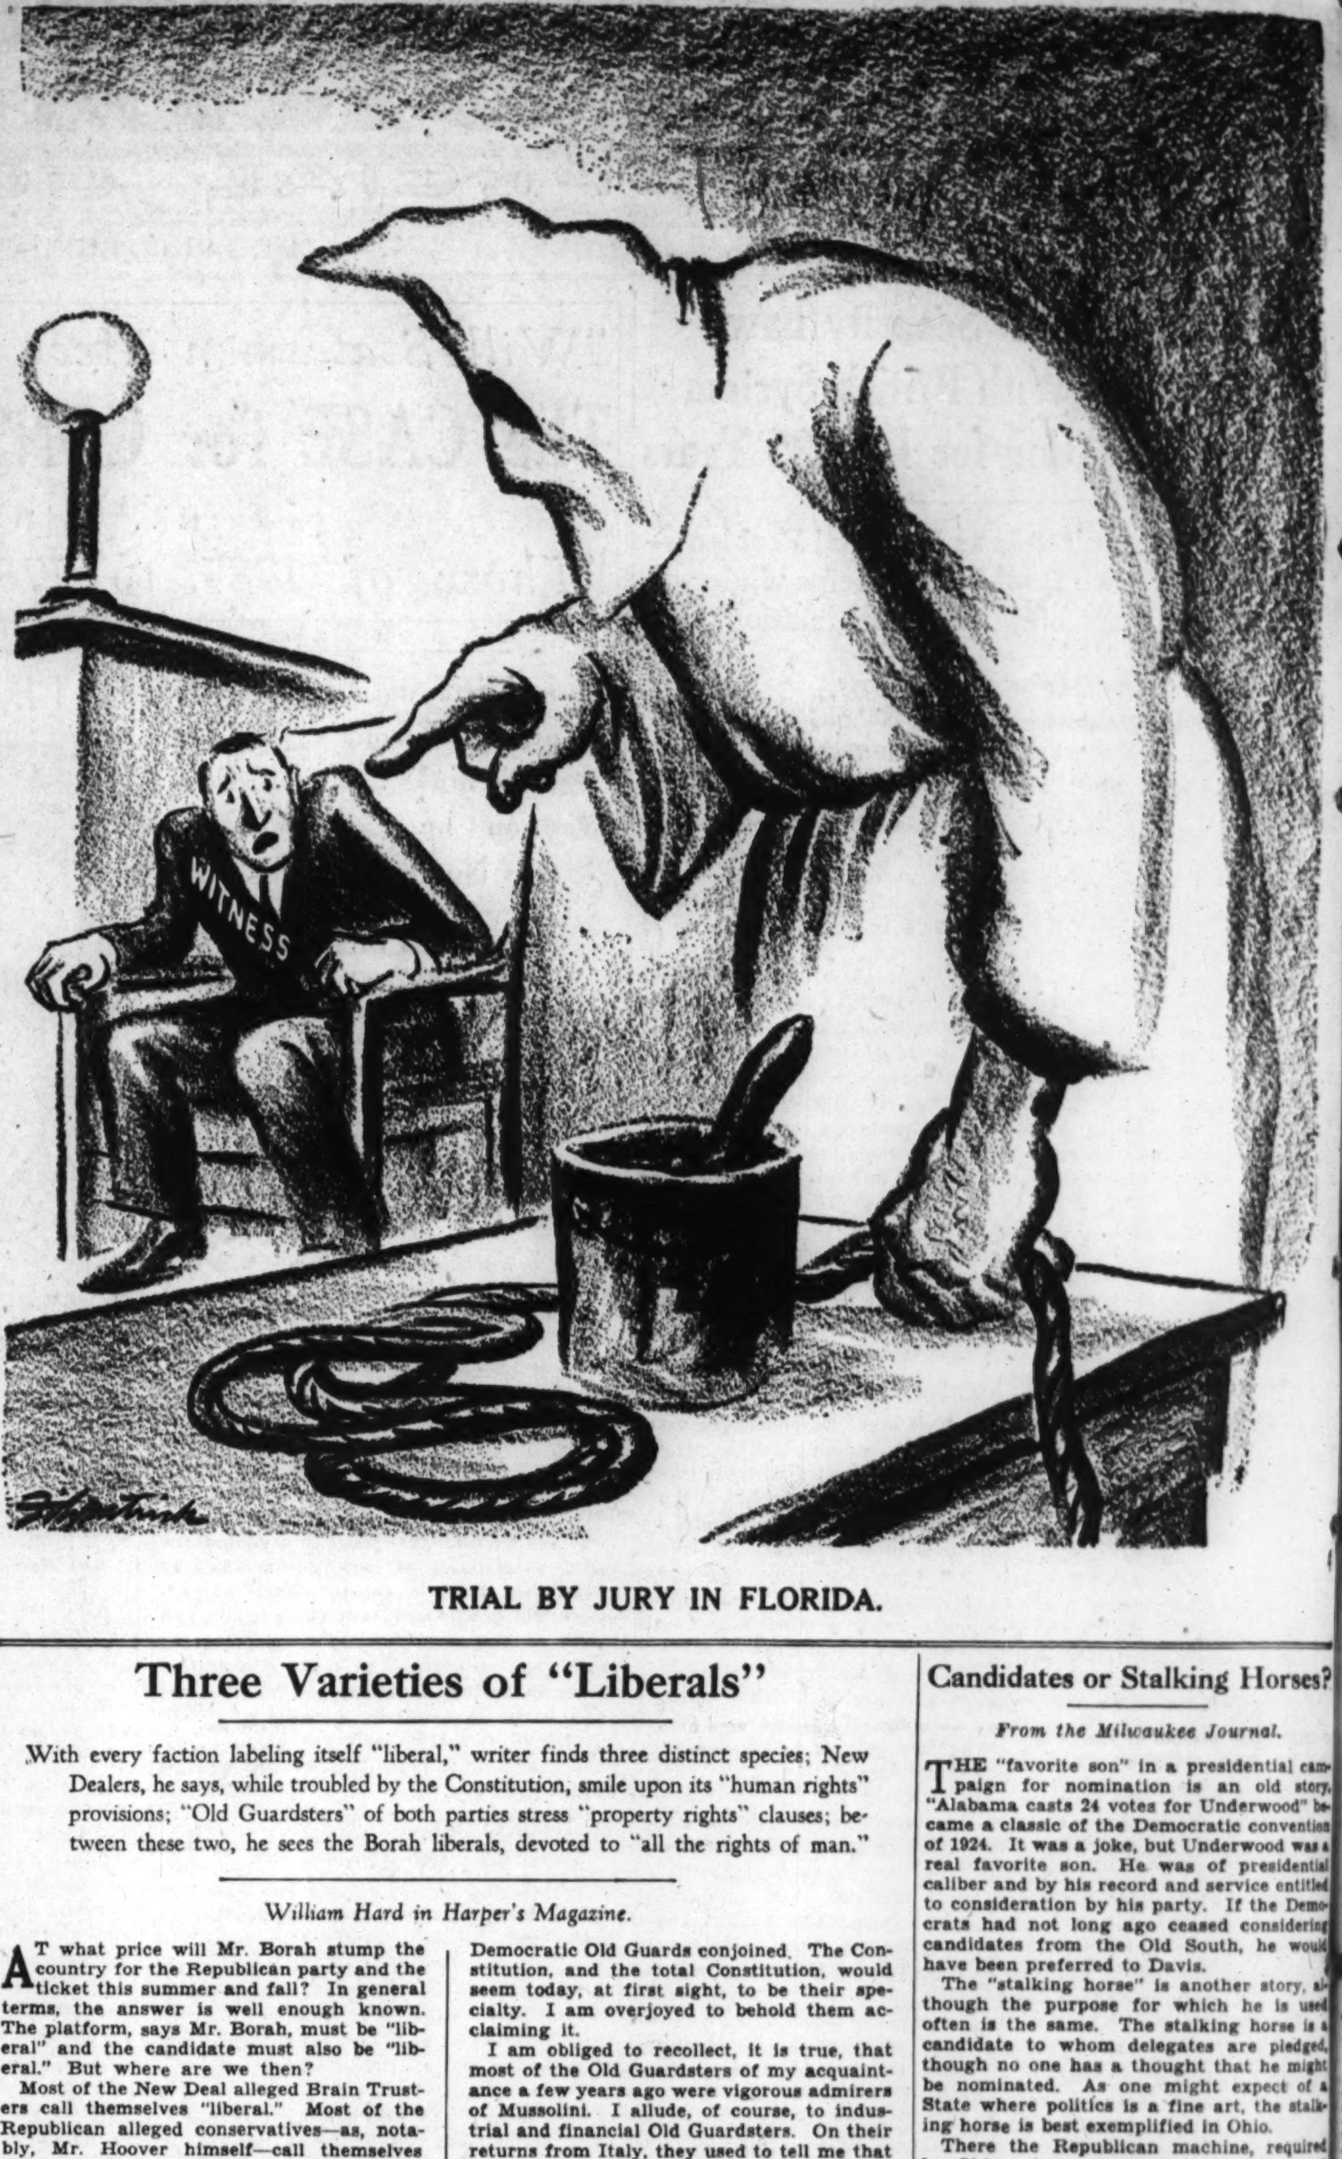
AT THE WALKING TRAIL DEDICATION.

It will be a distinguished company looking on, one fancies, when the Walk-Ways Association dedicates the first of its series of walking trails at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in Forest Park. Crowding about the start of the trail at Clayton and Skinker roads, it seems likely, will be the spirits of great walkers of the past. Saul of Tarsus, who sent his company by boat on his last trip from Jerusalem to Philippi, "minding himself to go afoot." Rousseau, who never "lived so much" as when he walked alone under the open sky. Oliver Goldsmith, whose flute earned him supper and bed and set the peasantry dancing from Flanders to Switzerland. Wordsworth, who, the solitary DeQuincey said, must have walked 175,000 miles of English highways and paths, and DeQuincey himself, who preferred London parks and lanes. The dreamer Coleridge, who tossed off "The Ancient Mariner" so he might have expense money for an autumn hike through the orchards of Devonshire. Keats and Leigh Hunt, who saw in the young singer the genius he was; long-legged Carlyle, who preferred the moors, and Hazlitt, who found solace among the hills when his unromantic home life became too oppressive. Ike Walton and Charles Lamb, Kingsley and Tennyson, Fitzgerald, Emily Bronte and Meredith, "the prince of country walkers."

And from the Americans: Walt Whitman, who sang of open road and its changing scene; Emerson, who knew the sides of old Monadnock as well as he knew Concord; Thoreau, who was afoot in the White Mountains when he first saw the pine grosbeaks; hearty tramps like O. Henry and Vachel Lindsay. But spiritual fellowship with literary personages and close communion with nature are not the only reasons for taking to walking trails these blossomtime Sundays. Hikers, a moment's reflection reminds us, are not killed in groups of five and six at railroad crossings.



TRIAL BY JURY IN FLORIDA.

Three Varieties of "Liberals"

With every faction labeling itself "liberal," writer finds three distinct species; New Dealers, he says, while troubled by the Constitution, smile upon its "human rights" provisions; "Old Guardsters" of both parties stress "property rights" clauses; between these two, he sees the Borah liberals, devoted to "all the rights of man."

William Hard in Harper's Magazine.

AT what price will Mr. Borah stump the country for the Republican party and the ticket this summer and fall? In general terms, the answer is well enough known. The platform, says Mr. Borah, must be "liberal" and the candidate must also be "liberal." But where are we then?

Most of the New Deal alleged Brain Trusters call themselves "liberal." Most of the Republican alleged conservatives—as, notably, Mr. Hoover himself—call themselves "liberal." Most of the alleged "Young Republicans" throughout the country demand that the older Republicans—like Mr. Hoover—get out of the way and leave the field to a Republican children's crusade that will be "liberal." Mr. Borah's followers then indignantly reiterate their claim to being, above all things, "liberal." One is driven to feeling confident that this year is going to witness a great triumph for "liberalism," no matter what happens.

I venture, therefore, to divide and distinguish among the various species of "liberals" that are now preparing to descend upon the electorate in search of votes. I feel at least psychologically competent for this task through having always been diligent in imagining myself to be a "liberal." I should be able by now, I think, to tell one kind of "liberal" from another, even if now there have grown to be as many kinds of them as there are of "big cats" in the jungle. The words that follow are then really a modest tentative treatise in the zoology of "liberalism."

I perceive at this moment three main groups of "liberals" among us. How do the three salute the Constitution?

First come the New Deal liberals. They are supposed to salute the Constitution pretty sourly. It has given them a lot of trouble. Yet they are really touchingly devoted to the Constitution—on certain points.

Let a Legislature pass a law infringing upon the freedom of speech. Let it pass a law imposing difficulties upon the right of teaching foreign languages or other dangerous subjects in schools. Let it pass a law restricting the right of self-expression through the display of flags of obnoxious colors. And then let the Supreme Court declare those laws void. It has, in fact, done so. And what happens?

Do liberals of the New Deal sort begin to talk about old men in silk robes? Do they begin to talk about horse-and-buggy days? Do they begin to talk about Tories? Do they begin to talk about restricting the judicial power? We all know that they do not. On the contrary, they look happy and they applaud. They assert with satisfaction and with triumph that "human rights" have been "saved."

But they thereupon draw a deep line between "human rights" and "property rights." They really want, I feel sure, to keep "human rights" constitutionally protected and enshrined. Their anti-constitutionalism is only, but yearningly, that they also want to do a little de-sanctifying of "property rights"—and of "reserved state rights"—by means of a thoughtful amendment, if they could only think of it. They thus pass by my constitutional reviewing stand in a half-hearted and pensive mood.

Right after them come the Republican and Democratic Old Guards conjoined. The Constitution, and the total Constitution, would seem today, at first sight, to be their specialty. I am overjoyed to behold them acclaiming it.

I am obliged to recollect, it is true, that most of the Old Guardsters of my acquaintance a few years ago were vigorous admirers of Mussolini. I allude, of course, to industrial and financial Old Guardsters. On their returns from Italy, they used to tell me that what we needed in the United States was "a strong man."

I overlook that point in their history. They have now seen "a strong man"—right at home. And if that shocking spectacle, actual or imaginary, has converted them to democracy, why should the New Deal sneer? The Bible says that angels do not sneer—in such circumstances; and the hymn says that "while the light holds out to burn, the vilest sinner may return."

All industrial and financial America is now in favor of democratic representative government and of the Constitution which consecrates it. This is a happy return from a temporary aberration toward a worship of biceps-brained European "strong men." Let us congratulate the country—and sincerely.

But these bi-partisan Old Guardsters, so-called, while they hail the total Constitution, seem in practice to turn their faces toward just one side of it. They thus supplement the New Dealers. The difference between the two groups need not be stressed. It is patent. The New Deal liberals salute toward the Constitution's left, where it is assumed that certain inalienable rights belong to man as man, in his skin; and the Old Guard liberals salute to the Constitution's right, where it is assumed that certain inalienable rights continue to belong to man after he has put on the integument of property.

I willingly concede the term "liberalism"—or 50 per cent "liberalism"—to each of these views. "Liberalism," as a political expression, was brought into the English-speaking world by the Liberal party of Great Britain, almost precisely 100 years ago. Historically, the British Liberals then and there acquired the prerogative of christening the child and defining the word. And what did they mean by it? They meant, admittedly, a defense of the rights of man against governmental and social discriminations and a defense of the rights of property against governmental and private monopolistic restrictions.

I am thereupon prepared to review the really antique liberals—the really reactionary liberals—the liberals of 1836 transmogrified into the liberal radicals of 1936—the liberals of the Borah persuasion and parade.

Their leader, Mr. Borah, extends his paternal benediction with equal benevolence to all the rights of man, and to all the rights of property, that the Constitution reveals to his gaze. He sees no chasm whatsoever between "human rights," accurately defined, and "property rights," accurately defined. On the contrary, he sees between them an indissoluble tie. He knows that in the modern world they enjoyed, as a historical fact, a joint birth. He thinks he knows that in the immediately coming future, as a political fact, they will either renew a joint life or suffer a joint death. Such to him is the simple formulation of the instant crisis.

Candidates or Stalking Horses?

From the Milwaukee Journal.

THE "favorite son" in a presidential campaign for nomination is an old story. "Alabama casts 24 votes for Underwood" became a classic of the Democratic convention of 1924. It was a joke, but Underwood was a real favorite son. He was of presidential caliber and by his record and service entitled to consideration by his party. If the Democrats had not long ago ceased considering candidates from the Old South, he would have been preferred to Davis.

The "stalking horse" is another story, although the purpose for which he is used often is the same. The stalking horse is a candidate to whom delegates are pledged, though no one has a thought that he might be nominated. As one might expect of a State where politics is a fine art, the stalking horse is best exemplified in Ohio.

There the Republican machine, required by Ohio primary laws to have a first and second choice, has put delegates in the field, first for Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati, second for Charles P. Frederickson of Coshocton.

Mr. Taft, it will be guessed by people who remember the late President and Chief Justice, is a relative of greatness. He is, in fact, a son. It may therefore be assumed that he is eminently respectable and probably a gentleman. No doubt he is other things. But, beyond the fact that he is making some fuss in the courts about extra interest on a $50 Government bond, no one outside of Ohio has heard of him.

As for Ohio's second choice for President, Charles P. Frederickson? He is not known. Neither is the interesting town of Coshocton, from which, it appears, he hails. If Taft is a nonentity in the Republican party in the nation, this "second choice" is a nonentity even in Ohio Republican circles. A Republican authority some months ago listed 40-odd names as presidential possibilities, but neither Taft nor Frederickson was among them.

The game is, of course, to get 52 delegates from Ohio pledged to men who have no ghost of a chance, and then vote them as the bosses may decide. The bosses in Ohio who put up the ticket are credited with favoring Gov. Landon of Kansas. But they think it is a better bet in the campaigning against Borah not to mention Landon.

Besides, this way Landon will have no claim on Ohio delegates. They can be voted for "another Harding," if that seems politically desirable to such real Republican leaders as Brown, Schorr, Hilles or Rorаback. For these bosses, no delegates are pledged, but into their clutches the "uninstructed delegates" and the "stalking horse" delegates are expected to fall.

A POPULAR TAX WITNESS.

From the New Orleans Item.

THE hard-boiled Ways and Means Committee of the House was "held spellbound" some days ago by the manner and counsel of a witness from the securities trade who was testifying in reference to the pending tax program. Chairman Doughton "clasped his hand warmly and thanked him for appearing." A Republican leader in the committee complimented him.

That is something new in tax hearings. But the witness, alack, was not a citizen of the Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave. He was a Dutchman and a member of the Amsterdam Stock Exchange. And he didn't tell the committee how not to raise money. On the contrary, he told them how to raise money—which is what the harassed committee is trying to do, without raising Hades at the same time. The Dutchman told them how to raise a bunch of this money from foreigners making large profits in the United States. Glory be!

GREAT U. S. FARM MARKET ABROAD GONE, SAYS DAVIS

AAA Administrator, Touring Europe, Finds No Evidence of Early Revival of Former Trade.

"EUROPE IS BAD NEWS FOR FARMER"

Nationalism and War Threats Causing Nations to Produce All Own Foodstuffs They Can.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 18.—"I am afraid that those who hope for a suddenly revived European market for our farm products as the immediate solution to our American agricultural problem are destined for disappointment," said Chester C. Davis, administrator for the U. S. AAA, in an authorized interview for the Associated Press.

Davis now touring Europe on a mission for President Roosevelt to determine how nationalistic tendencies and threat of war will affect present and future markets of the American farmer, has visited Great Britain, Holland, Luxemburg, and Germany, and later will see Sweden, Belgium, the Balkan countries, Italy and France.

"All over Europe there is bad news for the American farmer or exporter who hopes to regain the great market he enjoyed in this part of the world a decade ago," he said.

"Under the rising surge of nationalism and the continued threat of war, with possibility of food supplies choked off by blockade, the leading countries in Western Europe are striving to become self-sufficient and, as far as possible, to produce their own foodstuffs.

National Programs.

"Nearly every nation has been developing national programs involving trade regulations and other artificial means to check the inflow of foreign products and to stimulate greater production on its own acres—no matter how immediately unprofitable such production may be.

"Incidentally it is not for us to question the wisdom of such a policy; we must recognize the facts as they exist.

"The tendency is first apparent in the British Isles. While we in the United States are driving to shift plow land to grass, the British are encouraging, through national programs, a shift from grass to plowland.

"Agricultural self-sufficiency seems to be an even more dominant policy on the continent, where it entrenches behind import controls of a scope undreamed of a few years ago.

"Controls undertaken as an economic policy are strengthened by the current apprehension of war. No Englishman ever will forget those black World War days when Britain, under the menace of the U-boat, was within six weeks of exhausted food supplies and starvation.

"Germany likewise will not forget the fact that it was behind the lines it lost the war through crushing blockades that cut off its food supplies.

"Europe remembers that lesson better than she seems to remember some other lessons taught by the World War, and until peace finds a home in Europe again the outlook for increased takings of our cereal and meat staples appears none too bright.

What Changes Mean.

"I am concerned with what these changes mean to the American farmer. We plowed up fifty million acres to grow wheat and meat for Europe from 1914 to 1919. They will not be needed to the same extent for that purpose again.

"I see no sense wasting our soil resources and great national heritage of productive and fertile soil to produce for a market we cannot have because of circumstances far beyond our control.

"Nearly every country we have visited has supplemented its tariffs by import quotas on some commodities. Some nations have put in effect rigid exchange control systems which put the Government in charge of every item of foreign trade. Germany is a notable example. Some countries have invoked outright embargoes.

"These are stubborn facts that no amount of wishful thinking in the United States will change, and they affect American export trade in Western Europe and England in many lines, particularly food products and agricultural raw materials which nationalistic policies over here seek to develop.

"The more progressive European countries are sick of quotas and control arrangements, but under the circumstances they find them necessary.

Got Profits But Lost.

"We are just beginning to realize in the United States that staggering as our war profits on agricultural commodities appeared during the World War, we lost in the end and were worse off afterward. We have not yet reorganized from the effects it left.

"As far as staples are concerned, American subsidies looking toward dumping surpluses simply will not work because the nations over here are equipped with all sorts of devices to offset them.

"Subsidies will not enlarge quotas or break down embargoes.

"Even in England, which until 1931 was the world's great free market, I cannot see anything to indicate a change in the national policy of protection for the home farmer and preference for the dominion farmer at least as long as there is a possibility of European war.

"There is no question of whether England or any other country likes this departure from its former trade policies. The conditions simply compelled the action.

"If I appear at this stage to emphasize the negative side of farm trade prospects with Europe rather than the positive, it is because a constructive farm policy for our country must start, first, with a square look at the facts as they exist.

"What appears to be true of cereals and meat and fats certainly is not wholly true of tobacco, which has recently enjoyed an extraordinarily flourishing sale in England.

"Other factors than those mentioned influence the cotton trade, and with certain of our smaller specialty crops some interesting possibilities may be developed."

The Case for Revision Of the U. S. Constitution

to judicial surveillance. It is the latter form of judicial review of legislation which was developed in the United States largely since 1885, and which has rendered the authority wielded by the courts the potent weapon that it is to protect vested interests.

"In any effort to change the existing system of review of legislation it will be necessary to recognize and treat somewhat differently the three types of judicial review as above described. Judging by the standards of effective and useful performance in the public interest, it appears that type one may well remain unchanged, type two will need to be retained with considerably limited scope for its application and type three ought to be discontinued, or, if retained, should be made subject to reversal by subsequent legislative enactments, either by an ordinary majority vote or a two-thirds vote as in the case of the presidential veto. And a method of amendment of the Constitution should be adopted which would come nearer to rendering effective the prevailing sentiment of the nation."

It would not be necessary to present an entirely new document to the voters for consideration if a convention were called and a new Constitution prepared, Dr. Haines believes. His plan would be for amendments to be presented and voted on separately so that in case of the disapproval of certain amendments the electors would not thereby register disapproval of the entire document.

As he urges this course, Dr. Haines is not unmindful of the failure of the proposed Child Labor Amendment to win approval—submitted to the States by Congress in 1924, this change has been approved by only half the states in the union in the intervening 12 years—and he is willing to concede that the effort to enlarge Federal authority through constitutional amendments will meet with strong opposition. Notwithstanding this, he says that "sentiment is being crystallized in the direction of a few major amendments to remedy some serious defects in the distribution of powers between the Federal and State governments as now interpreted by the courts."

What to Do Meantime About Court Decisions.

Dr. Haines has an answer for those who ask what can be done while public sentiment is in preparation for the adoption of amendments or the calling of a constitutional convention. The status quo does not need to remain without substantial change during this period, in his opinion.

To quote him: "There are ways by which the power of the people acting through their authorized representatives may be rendered effective. In the first place, the deference to the decisions of courts involving the general attitude of acceptance of decisions invalidating acts and the refusal to move in contrary directions is an attitude which has been slowly developed and which is not expressly sanctioned by the fundamental law.

"When the Justices choose the wrong road, as they did according to the best informed judgment in the minimum wage case and in the application of the rule of Smyth v. Ames in rate regulation cases, it is possible, as the states have discovered, to continue to enforce more rational doctrines with relatively little interference by the Federal courts.

"Neither Congress nor the executive are obliged to accept the decisions of the courts as final and conclusive and beyond change so far as the political and economic effects of the decisions are concerned. The Judges themselves insist that they do not declare acts of Congress invalid; they merely refuse to apply an act to the case in controversy. If the language is taken literally that the law remains as a law, its application merely being denied as between the parties before the court, the final declaration of invalidity may be a long deferred process. And why not Congress, argued Madison, place an interpretation upon the Constitution which the courts and other departments should respect?

"In fact, Congress has placed such interpretations upon the Constitution, some of which have been the law of the land for many years. Conflicting interpretations persisted in by co-ordinate departments would necessitate more frequent reference of crucial constitutional questions of political or economic significance to the ultimate source of power—the people."

Frenchman's View of Question Quoted.

One of the interesting points of view which the author presents in his articles is that of Roger Pinto of the University of Paris, who has recently written in French a monograph on the dissenting opinions of the United States Supreme Court, covering the third of a century from 1900 to 1935. It is M. Pinto's view, Dr. Haines reports, that judicial review of legislation of the peculiar American type may have been useful and appropriate for a young and immature nation when the people were unwilling to trust themselves or their elected representatives.

The Frenchman then raises the question, says Dr. Haines, whether the American people have not grown up and whether they are not at the present time able to stand upon their own feet instead of continuing to depend in their economic and political conduct so largely upon the judgments of a few legal conservators.

In the same spirit, the California political scientist puts these questions: "Cannot the spirit of uncertainty and distrust that surrounds our processes of legislation and execution be replaced by one of frank confidence and support even though we may realize that elected or appointed agents may make mistakes and that not all of their experiments may prove successful?

"May not the trial and error method which has been so characteristic of the growth of the common law, as well as of the doctrine of judicial review of legislation itself, now be applied in the grant to the primary political agencies—the legislative and executive departments—of a greater degree of freedom to enact and carry out policies deemed in the public interest?"

FIGHTS RIVER FRONT BOND SALE TO RFC

P. O. Peters Declares Corporation Cannot Legally Buy St. Louis Issue.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, April 18. — Advised that the city of St. Louis may ask the RFC to buy the river front memorial bonds, which private bidders failed to take, Paul O. Peters today asked Jesse Jones, RFC chairman, for an opportunity to present certain facts and evidence.

In a statement issued at the same time he made public his letter Peters cited several reasons why the RFC could not buy the bonds, on which 2½ per cent interest was to be paid, from the city. For many weeks Peters, who has proved himself a resourceful lobbyist, has done everything in his power to block the memorial.

"Last fall," Peters said in his letter to Jones, "this committee brought to Washington for presentation to the Public Works Administration evidence of fraud in the election of Sept. 10, where the bonds now offered for sale were authorized. At that time PWA announced it had no intention of either accepting the bonds as collateral for a loan or purchasing them outright, and on that ground refused to examine into the question of fraud in the election.

"By reason of the situation that has now arisen, it is significant to remark that PWA engineers said of the project, 'the proposed project has social desirability but cannot be classed as a public necessity.'"

Although Russell Murphy, executive secretary of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial Association, sponsoring the river front memorial, and Edgar H. Wayman, city counsellor, were reported to be in Washington, they could not be found here. U. Bon Geaslin, Washington attorney for the association, said he had been informed they had changed their plans and would not come here at present.

Peters said he would present evidence to support his charges of fraud in the bond-issue election to Jones should the association attempt to sell the bonds to the Government corporation.

As part of his campaign against the memorial, Peters has obtained photographs of the "Hooverville" section of the St. Louis river front, showing the makeshift dwellings occupied by the unemployed, which he has had enlarged and is circulating among members of Congress. "Hooverville," Peters says in displaying the photographs, would be only a short distance from the new memorial, which, according to the original plan of its sponsors, would cost $30,000,000.

"Efforts of the St. Louis memorial promoters to get financed in Washington, after failing to sell the memorial bonds at either a public or private offering in St. Louis, is a last desperate attempt to save the project from the fate suffered by Passamaquoddy and the Florida ship canal," Peters said.

"Even were the RFC willing to purchase the bonds, it would be unable to do so, because the bonds bear an interest rate of only 2½ per cent. The money lent by the RFC costs 2¾ per cent, so it is evident they could not lawfully handle the bonds at the present interest rate."

Although he expressed confidence the memorial project had been effectively stopped, Peters said he would remain here for some time. He has also taken an active part in lobbying against Passamaquoddy and the Florida ship canal.

GEORGE LANSBURY TO SPEAK IN CITY

Former Leader of British Labor Party on Peace Convention Program May 3.

George Lansbury, member of Parliament and lately leader of the British Labor party in the House of Commons, will speak at the mass meeting in Soldan High School Sunday afternoon, May 3, to be held as part of the national convention program of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. The convention, with headquarters at Hotel Chase, will be in session May 1 to 4.

Lansbury resigned the leadership of the Labor party last October, after the party had committed itself to a policy of standing behind the Government for sanctions against Italy, in relation to Ethiopia. Lansbury, an American sympathizer has said, "refused to go along" with the party, feeling that "the risk was too great for him to run, for he will under no circumstances ever approve of or take part in any war."

Lansbury is 76 years old. He describes himself in "Who's Who" as "member of the Church of England; teetotaler; non-smoker; twice in prison." The imprisonments were results of Lansbury's activities in support of woman suffrage, and for refusal to pay a tax which he considered unjust. He has been called, in magazine articles, "the saint in politics," "Lansbury the incorruptible" and "the truest Christian in England."

Edited Labor Paper.

Active in politics since boyhood, Lansbury was editor from 1913 to 1922 of the Daily Herald, organ of the National Labor party. His active opposition to war, in wartime, dates back to the Boer War, when he denounced the British Government. He was elected leader of the Labor party after the 1931 general election. He was considered in line for the prime ministership, if and when the Labor party should win a general election. His resignation came at the height of his political power.

Lansbury believes in collective allocation of the world's markets and raw materials. He advocates the forgetting of boundaries and custom houses. In a recent interview published in the Christian Century, he said:

"If there is to be world organization for peace, we must create a new League of Nations within which all nations shall find a place, especially those nations like India, Egypt and certain parts of Africa, which aren't allowed to be directly represented. In fact, the whole conception of the League and its functions must be changed. It must not be a league merely to keep the status quo as between the conquerors and the conquered of the great war, but a league that will set up an impartial tribunal before which all nations with grievances or with desire for expansion and markets may put their cases.

"I have no faith whatsoever in limitation of armaments. Nations with grievances which become too hard to bear will fight with their hands or with clubs, if they conclude there is no hope for a satisfactory agreement otherwise."

Convention Plans.

About 200 women from other places, chiefly in the East, are expected to attend the convention. The national president, Mrs. Hannah Clothier Hull of Swarthmore, Pa., will make her report at the afternoon session of Friday, May 1, at the Chase. A reception for the delegates and national board will be held at 4:30 p. m. on that day at the home of Mrs. Fred Taussig, 50 Westmoreland place.

Following day sessions Saturday, May 2, a dinner will be held at the Chase at 7:30 p. m., for which Senator Bennett Champ Clark and Henry F. Grady, chief of the Trade Agreements Section, State Department, are scheduled as speakers. A meeting will be held Sunday night, May 3, at the Chase, for reports on international work of the organization.

AUTOMATIC DEVICE RADIOS WEATHER DATA FROM AIR

Weighing Less Than Pound, It Can Be Sent Up in Balloon in Weather Unsafe for Planes.

By the Associated Press.

PASADENA, Cal., April 18.—An instrument weighing less than a pound, which automatically radioes the temperature, humidity and barometric pressure at altitudes up to 90,000 feet, was shown at the California Institute of Technology yesterday.

Prof. Irving P. Krick said it represented a great step in weather forecasting.

"The radiometrograph can be sent up with small free balloons in stormy weather when airplane flights are impossible," he explained. "It also can be sent up from ships at sea. Its cost is less than that of an airplane flight, so if one is not recovered, its loss will not be great. Recording devices small enough to be sent up with free balloons are now in use, but they must be recovered for a reading"

Breaks in the radio signals are noted on a recording receiving set on the ground and can be measured to determine the changes in temperature, humidity and barometric pressure. The instrument was designed by Capt. O. C. Maier of the Army Signal Corps, and L. E. Wood of the Institute.

Closing Time for Foreign Mail.

Parcel post for Great Britain and Germany, and full European mails will close tomorrow at 9 p. m. at the Main post office, Eighteenth and Walnut streets.

New Social Security Law Contrasted With Britain's

kind of pension is to needy old persons. The Federal Government under the law does not provide this type of pension. But it offers grants out of the Federal Treasury to states which have enacted state pension laws. The Federal Government will match the state's money dollar for dollar up to $15 a month to an individual. If the state law is drawn up to take advantage of the maximum Federal grant, a dependent old person can receive a maximum pension of $30 a month, $15 from the Federal Treasury and $15 from the state treasury. Twenty-seven states, according to the latest report of the Social Security Board, now have enacted some form of state pension law.

As in the case of unemployment insurance, the Federal law sets up certain minimum standards which the state must follow in drafting its pension law. But the Federal law does not say how large or how small the pension shall be. It may be $2 or $30 or $60, the only barrier being the fact that the state must put up the entire amount above $30. Douglas points out how in certain states which have already established pensions, the Federal law may work to subsidize the state itself rather than the aged. For example, a state which was paying pensions of $10 a month without Federal assistance could advance the pension to $14 and yet save 30 per cent of the amount formerly spent because the state would be putting up only $7, thanks to the $7 contribution from the Federal Government.

Scale "Shockingly Low."

"The granting of adequate pensions will not, however," Douglas adds, "be insured merely by fixing an adequate maximum limit. For it will still be possible for the local administrative authorities to dole out very small pensions and to use Federal grants to help their own treasuries rather than the old people themselves.

"Thus the present scale of pensions in most states is still shockingly low...In no less than 15 of these 23 states (at the time he wrote), the average pension was under $15 a month, while in six the average was less than $10. There were indeed only five states where the average pension was over $20 a month. Such low averages cannot be fully accounted for by the presence of private resources on the part of the pensioners.

"The primary reason for their lowness is the desire of the administrative authorities to economize because of the scantiness of state and local funds. Many applicants who need the full pension are therefore only given a fraction of this amount and all too frequently the pensions are administered on bare relief standards or worse.

"The desire to economize also leads in many places to a distinct limitation upon the total number of persons who are to be granted pensions. The coming of the Federal grants, by bringing additional funds, will make possible more adequate pensions. But, in nearly half the states which now have pension laws, more money will be needed from the states and localities themselves if decent pensions are to be paid."

The Federal law, in Douglas' opinion, should demand higher standards from the states as a condition to making grants. These standards cover not only the amount of the pensions, but the terms on which they are given and the way in which the law is administered.

Compulsory Insurance.

The second type of pension under the law provides for benefits under a system of compulsory old-age insurance. Title 7 of the act levies taxes upon employers and employes to go into a fund to be administered by the Secretary of the Treasury from which pensions are eventually to be paid. Title 2 prescribes the scale of these benefits to be paid to those over 65 or to their heirs if they have died. This, according to Douglas, is the weakest section of the act from the standpoint of constitutionality.

". . . The individual benefits to be paid are computed upon the basis of the contributions or taxes levied and upon nothing else. It will undoubtedly be charged that these titles of the act in effect, therefore prescribe the specific purpose for which the tax is levied and that they are consequently unconstitutional since they launch the Federal Government into the performance of functions not specifically delegated to it by the Constitution. There is certainly very real danger that such may indeed be the fate of this feature of the act."

So much for the American beginning. This is an attempt to summarize a compact and closely written volume that is not only a guidebook but a critical analysis of the start that has been made.

Britain's Experience.

In reporting the experience of the British during the last 25 years Bakke shows above all, the way in which their unemployment insurance system has been adjusted to meet changing conditions. With the onset of mass unemployment, the system was expanded far beyond its actuarial limits so that many charged it was no longer insurance but merely a method of relieving the distress of the unemployed. This was particularly true in 1931, '32 and '33.

In 1934 Parliament passed the unemployment assistance act designed to aid those who had been out of work so long they were no longer entitled to unemployment insurance benefits and those who do not come within the scope of the insurance system. Thus it served to take the strain off the insurance system which had been stretched again and again to cover workers who had lost their rights under it.

"It is a permanent national service," Bakke writes, "set up with its own staff, with its own responsibility to Parliament. It covers not only those workers normally covered by unemployment insurance and who have exhausted their rights to that insurance but also agricultural laborers, domestic servants and practically every other able-bodied person between 16 and 65 who normally gains his living by working for wages and who is in need primarily because he is out of a job."

Obligation to the Jobless.

This, incidentally, is a point that Douglas makes in discussing "next steps" in American social security. All classes of workers, including even the "self-employed," must be given social security, he says, pointing to the fact that Germany very early had an extensive system of old-age and health insurance, which was supplemented in 1927 by unemployment insurance, yet nevertheless Hitler triumphed and a dictatorship was established. Hitler drew his greatest strength in the beginning, Douglas says, from those who did not come under social security provisions.

Britain's new unemployment assistance board is charged, Bakke points out, with the "welfare" of the unemployed. In this respect the act creating the board "recognizes that there is a further obligation to the unemployed than that involved in paying them a weekly allowance to meet their minimum economic needs." In England, according to Bakke, they have already gone far toward establishing centers to re-train and re-establish the unemployed, particularly in the effort to remove them from "blighted" areas where industry has almost wholly declined to employment in a prosperous area. The British have been more cautious in their approach to public works as a method of relieving unemployment although from 1920 to 1932 nearly a billion dollars was spent in this way.

A National Problem.

Bakke confirms Douglas' statement that benefits lasting only 12 or 13 weeks, under unemployment insurance, are of little avail. No period less than six months should be considered, he says. He confirms Douglas, too in showing how the British have of necessity come to recognize unemployment as a national problem. Of the unemployment assistance board and other methods for caring for the unemployed outside of the insurance system Bakke writes:

"These methods of providing for men whose problem extends beyond the borders of the territory occupied by unemployment insurance are in many ways the outgrowth of and a significant commentary upon the experience of the past 23 years. Unquestioned support is given to the position that unemployment is a national problem and must be cared for by a national plan. The suicidal theory of local responsibility has gone the way of the equally suicidal theory of individual responsibility for unemployment.

"Prevented Revolution."

"Local communities face a very difficult dilemma in that their very attempt to alleviate unemployment causes the tax burden in the community to be so heavy that the problem is actually increased. No one locality is responsible for economic weather which stimulates or depresses industry. A discontinuation of certain industrial activities may even be necessary in view of the interests of the total national economy. For this the local community is not responsible. The fallacy of placing the burden even if it were possible for it to be borne entirely upon the local government has become obvious and is recognized in this new act."

Even extreme conservatives who are opposed to unemployment insurance in principle concede "grudgingy," Bakke says, "There's no doubt that unemployment insurance has saved this country from a revolution." The system, he concludes, has conserved for years "the industrial and social fiber" of a large proportion of the unemployed who without it would have been subjected to the insecurity and fear that haunt the jobless.

MARCH TOLL $918,143 ON MUNICIPAL BRIDGE

Total of $3,340,425 Collected Since Charge Was Started in July, 1932.

Toll collections on the Municipal Bridge during the fiscal year which ended last Monday totaled $918,143, Comptroller Nolte reported yesterday.

Since July, 1932, when toll charges of 10 cents for private and 15 cents for commercial vehicles were imposed as an unemployment relief measure, revenue from tolls has totaled $3,340,425.

These funds are being used to pay interest and principal on the two relief bond issues, the first of $4,600,000, the second of $3,600,000. Enough of the bond issue money remains to enable the city to continue its monthly appropriation of $147,000 for relief until next February.

During the last fiscal year 8,109,369 vehicles used the bridge. The cost of collecting the tolls was $31,313.

Since the toll charges were first imposed, 29,665,593 vehicles, an average of 7264 a day, have used the bridge. The cost of collecting tolls for the period has been $111,700.

Says Industry Could Provide "Happy Days"

$115,000,000,000. This would give an average family income of $3688. A national income of $115,000,000,000 properly distributed would furnish buying power adequate to create a market for the additional production by the program.

"Because of the increase production per worker in recent years, the economies resulting from capacity production and the use of up-to-date machinery, and because workers are more efficient when they are properly clothed, housed and fed and have adequate leisure, total production and total national income as provided in the program, increase more than employment. That is, the average employed worker creates and receives a larger income, and thus can buy a larger portion of goods produced."

Farm Workers Not Included.

The Federation says that it did not include agricultural workers in its predictions because little change in farm employment would be needed in the expansion program.

In conclusion, the Federation asserts that the expansion program was worked out by competent engineers and could be adopted to present needs.

"It is unthinkable," the survey says, "that the American people have not among them the intelligence, experience and technical training to use their industrial equipment to put the unemployed to work and to create the goods and services they need.

"Given the will to do it, representatives of American business, American engineering genius, American labor, under Government guidance, could put such a plan into effect.

"Pending this time, however, wage increases throughout industry are essential. In raising wages and shortening hours lives our only present hope of laying a solid foundation for business expansion and preventing an early collapse."

The Federation says that the following industries, because of increased income or good prospects, are in a favorable position to grant wage increases: Agricultural implements, amusements, automobiles, auto parts and tires, building materials, chemicals, clothing, containers, dairy products, drugs and medicines, electric equipment, fertilizers, foods, hardware and tools, household products, insurance companies, investment trusts, liquor, machinery, metals, office equipment, paint and varnish, paper and printing, petroleum, restaurant chains, retail chain stores, department stores, mail order houses, sugar producing, tobacco and utilities.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY JOHN G. NEIHARDT

An Eye on the Box Office

WOMAN ALIVE. By Susan Ertz. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York.)

SEVERAL years ago there appeared a novel entitled "Red Snow," the plot of which was concerned with a mysterious endemic disease that rendered sterile the entire human race. It was the author's intention to show that even the most selfish individual's striving is motivated by a profound, unconscious interest in the future of his kind; that the contradictory attempt to live only for self, in and for that tick of time we call the present, is a form of suicide, every man's real identity being that of the continuing human race.

Those who read that very remarkable novel, with any appreciation of its many implications, must have been deeply impressed, for surely it offered prime material for the making of a practical social and even cosmic philosophy.

So far as the reading public was concerned, it got exactly nowhere, for reasons not too obscure. Its anti-individualistic theme precluded box-office appeal. With the whole race dying out to the last doddering centenarian, appalled by the loneliness of a universe that didn't care, there could be no consummation of "love" as the term is commonly interpreted—a fancied state of affairs designed to suggest the larger social, and only vital, meaning of the word.

In "Woman Alive" Susan Ertz elaborates essentially the same plot—but with what a difference! And does she watch her box-office! "Writers require readers," she remarks, sagely enough, in the course of her fantastic tale, adding shrewdly "especially women readers."

Here again a mysterious disease sweeps across the planet, but this time it is traceable to a certain poison gas utilized by the naughty men in those devastating wars now presumably about to begin in Europe. If only the chuckle-headed masculine contingent had deigned to listen to the ladies and quit their foolish fighting this would never have happened. But no! And it wouldn't have been so bad—indeed there would have been a triumph of poetic justice in it—if only the males were the sufferers. Unfortunately, the disease was of such a nature that only the ladies caught it.

To be sure, the men were very sorry, but of what avail was that, with women dying by the millions and medical science helpless to do anything about it?

If only the doughheads had listened before it was too late!

Finally, according to wireless reports from all parts of the world, the last woman was dead. But what of the paying customers if that were the end of the sorry tale?

And so they were not all dead. Just one remained very much alive thanks to her timely treatment by an obscure medical genius, and her name, appropriately enough, was Stella Morrow—presumably signifying the star of the future, the hope of the race.

The only woman left in all the world among teeming millions of potential lovers, it mattered not at all that Stella was homely and utterly lacking in the quality known as "it." A woman, at last, without troublesome rivals, and therefore in a position of absolute power over a vast collectivity of males!

And did Stella give the men a piece of her mind! For awhile, there, it looked as though she might refuse to mate with any of the poor dumb-bells, considering what a mess they'd made of things.

Then came Alan—than whom no moving picture lover ever could be half so whomish. And so the race would continue after all—on a strictly matriarchal basis!

It all ends with a triumphant wedding witnessed by the whole worshiping world—a veritable sublimation of all the weddings that all the brides have ever dreamed of having!

Perhaps now some enterprising novelist will see the possibilities in a reversal of the proposition here considered. Something like a billon ladies—and just one man! Fancy the tremendous climactic scene! But who would buy the book?

It must be admitted that "Woman Alive" is cleverly conceived to flatter a considerable portion of the reading public in this day of preposterous confusions. But it may well be, nevertheless, that Susan Ertz has overworked the box-office appeal, in view of the deep and unobtrusive wisdom that so many patient women, who know what's what, are still revealing in their lives.

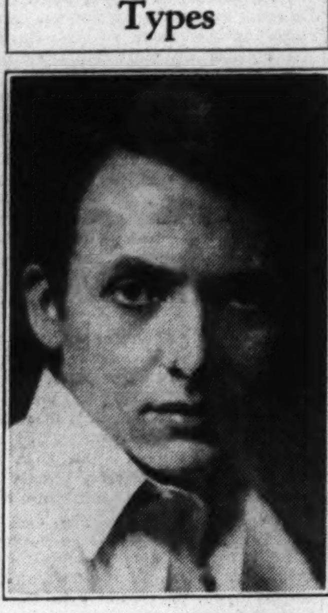
SINBAD'S BOOK OF PIRATES. By Sinbad (Capt. A. E. Dingle). (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

TALES for boys of the buccaneers and freebooters who preyed on the coasts of the two Americas during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Capt. Dingle, well known as a writer of sea stories, includes all the old standbys, such as Mary Read and Ann Bonney, the woman pirate captains, Blackbeard, Lolonois, the torturer, and Benito de Soto, who obligingly stood on his own coffin when the hangman became embarrassed by a rope that was too short. The Chinese pirates of Bias Bay, who furnish front page stories even in these times, and Dingle's conception of the pirates of the future, equipped with deadly rays and seaplanes, complete the book.

Depicts Rural Types



Charles Morrow Wilson

"Creek Prong Votes"

RABBLE ROUSER. By Charles Morrow Wilson. (Longmans, Green & Co., New York).

POSSIBLY to avoid any suspicion of caricature, Charles Morrow Wilson has dated this novel of Arkansas politics in the years immediately preceding the World War. Yet Cabe Hargis, the farmhand with the gift of gab who campaigned the hillsides and crossroads, eventually reaching the governorship, is a phenomenon that arises through successive periods of history, and not in one state alone.

Here is his appeal for votes:

"When a big dawg pounces on a little dawg, then I fight for the little dawg. Nowadays that notion is liable to be bad politics. Maybe I ain't really a politician, nohow. Folks say that the only votes I get in this campaign will come from the far prongs of the creek beds. I don't know about that, but I do know that since the time of Jesus Christ betterment of mankind has risen mainly from the poor and lowly.

"Therefore, my friends, I'm mighty proud to get the creek prong votes. They's a mighty lot of creek prongs in the State of Arkansas. They's a mighty lot of creek prongs in every other state. And when the creek prong votes gets added fair and honest—that's, if they ever do, in this here country we're going to see better days and cleaner government."

Honesty of purpose, Cabe was to learn, does not suffice in the business of protecting the people's rights—the true object of government as he sincerely believed. The issue that had set him on his career brought him disillusionment, as the waters impounded by the power dam inundated the farms of his neighbors in Hemmed-in Holler. To the outside view such projects, which Cabe fought against, spell progress, though, as in this instance, the production of electrical energy may be merely incidental to stock selling.

Out of an intimate knowledge of rural conditions gained through living in the region of which he writes, Mr. Wilson has produced a story noteworthy for its absence of superficialty and significant to those who hope for the development of a real provincial literature.

The Growing Up of "Dizzy"

YOUNG MR. DISRAELI. By Elswyth Thane. (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.)

TO moviegoers who associate Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, with memories of George Arliss, Miss Thane's best-seller will introduce a stranger.

Instead of a wizened old Prime Minister, full of sly remarks about the Suez Canal and dramatic proclamations about the Empress of India, the author gives us a foppishly-dressed law clerk of 20 years, with ambition and an intellectual family background.

In furtherance of this ambition he tries speculating in mining stocks, and his bad guesses bring him debts that haunt him to the end of the period covered in the book.

A venture in founding a daily newspaper to compete with the Times fails, and he writes his first successful novel to lighten the burden of his debts. Miss Thane, incidentally, disagrees with most commentators as to the intent of this first novel, which was published anonymously. She tells us that Disraeli meant to satirize no specific person in "Vivian Grey" and that he was greatly hurt by the attacks on him that followed when its authorship became known.

He travels in Europe and the Levant, hungrily picking up bits of legend about Byron; and his letters to his father and his sister Sarah fill many pages of the biography.

Then follows his life as a novelist and London social lion, with four defeats at the hands of the electorate when he tries to enter the House of Commons. On his fifth attempt, at the age of 32, he is elected, and puts all of his eloquence, for which he is noted thus early in his career, into his first speech. He is greeted by a record-breaking demonstration consisting of jeers, boos and catcalls. His later speeches are cast more in the orthodox mold, and soon the galleries are filling up when word gets around that he is to take the floor.

The book ends just before his marriage to a wealthy widow, 12 years his senior, whom he has previously informed that he will never marry for love.

Miss Thane has chosen the period of her book well. She gives us a brilliant youngster who starts his manhood weighed down with unusual responsibilities and shows how he made his way to the threshold of a great career.

On the last page is a hint of what the author would have gotten into had she prolonged, by a few years, the time covered. "Perhaps he would be in Peel's cabinet; if not at once, before very long." Disraeli later asked Peel for a place in his government, and was curtly refused. He subsequently denied having made the request, causing biographers to wonder whether he was guilty of a deliberate falsehood or only a lapse of memory.

JEWS IN AMERICA. By the Editor of Fortune. (Random House, Inc., New York.)

THIS is a republication in book form of the much-discussed article on the position of the Jew in America which appeared in the February issue of Fortune. In their usual thorough fashion the editors of the magazine have studied and surveyed the subject. Their conclusions are that "current American anti-Semitism is feeble," and that "there is no basis whatever for the suggestion that Jews monopolize U. S. business and industry." The latter conclusion is developed over the greater space of the book by taking up the major fields one by one.

Inevitable Conflict?

JAPAN MUST FIGHT BRITAIN. By Lt. Commander Tota Ishimaru, I. J. N. (The Telegraph Press, Harrisburg, Pa.)

BECAUSE the Japanese military party has been conspicuous in the news of recent months, it might be inferred from the title of the present work that its author, a Lt.-Commander in the Imperial Japanese Navy, is himself a saber-rattler.

But to foresee is not necessarily to advocate; and one does not proceed far with Ishimaru's discussion of the world-muddle without realizing that the title was intended to mean only what it says. Often throughout the volume, the author finds occasion to deplore the temper and tactics of the militarists and the trend of Japanese diplomacy; even going so far as to assert that a nation controlled by its soldiers and sailors makes war under a great handicap, even though it be not doomed thereby to suffer defeat.

In supporting his belief as expressed in his title, Ishimaru reviews Japan's relations with England from the beginning of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance to the present day. He argues that England's apparent friendliness to Japan was merely the expression of her fear of Russia. "Russia," we read, " was encroaching on British preserves in North China and threatened to come into the important Yangtze Valley. India too was in danger. . . . Instead of fighting Russia herself, she got Japan to do so," hoping that "the Liaotung Peninsula would become a second Alsace-Lorraine—a bone of contention between the two nations to the exhaustion of both." Thus, according to Ishimaru, the "Yellow Peril" and the "Russian Menace" were expected to take care of each other.

But after the Russo-Japanese war, Japan's increasing power and prestige resulted in a sudden change in the British attitude. The alliance, twice revised, was finally "strangled" at the Washington Conference. Today, Ishimaru points out, Britain and Japan are "already fighting a war in disguise." Japanese goods have penetrated not only into India, but have captured the markets in the British African colonies and in Egypt. "Either Japan must stop her expansion," according to Ishimaru, "or England must willingly give up some of what she has or hopes to have." Impressive reasons are given for the belief that neither is possible under the circumstances.

Ishimaru sees no good reason why Japan and America should clash. He insists that in the present situation Russia is Japan's natural ally, and that talk of war with Russia is "silly and dangerous." War between Japan and England would offer an unique opportunity for Russia to obtain the warm water port so long desired; and the author ventures to prophesy that in the coming Anglo-Japanese war, "directly there is the least indication Japan might win, Russia will move southward toward the Persian Gulf."

A final chapter discusses the strategy and tactics of the war that is regarded as inevitable, and Ishimaru undertakes to show how Britain might be defeated. There is a stirring description, in considerable detail, of a great naval battle off the Straits of Sunda.

Ishimaru's strategic scheme involves the taking of Hongkong and the capture or investment of Singapore, to be followed by a descent upon Australia. Obviously an ideal condition would be furnished by any situation demanding a powerful British naval concentration in the Occident. Is it conceivable that the present Italian-French-British situation might manage to oblige?

Whether or not Ishimaru's prophecy may prove true, his book is far from negligible, giving, as it does, a finely reasoned view of political and economic relations throughout the Eastern Hemisphere.

Canadian Poem

THE TITANIC. By E. J. Pratt. (The Macmillan Co. of Toronto, Canada.)

THE story of the Titanic's sinking, often attempted lyrically, has been done in a 40-page rhymed recital by Edwin John Pratt, lecturer in the University of Toronto, and author of "Newfoundland Verse" and other poems of the sea.

The mechanical detail and historic incidents which form the greater part of the work are handled with dignity and even with artistry. Graphic art has found a worthy field in portrayal of great masses of machinery; a like task is not impossible, though it may be difficult, for the poet. Some of the lines are of poetic quality, as the last two, telling how, after the ship's thousand-fathom descent,

The gray shape with the palaeolithic face
Was still the master of the longitudes.

Prof. Pratt's vivid account begins with the building of the world's then largest ship at Belfast in 1911-12. No less detail is given to the fashioning of the other element in the disaster—the iceberg. "Calved from a glacier near Godhaven coast," its slow movement southward is related, until it lay across the North Atlantic shipping lane, "its rude corundum form stripped to its Greenland core."

The disaster itself is framed in a border of luxurious dining appointments, deck and cardroom chatter, with incidents of drama and heroism, or its opposite, duly set apart.

A Savage Attack

IMPERIAL HEARST. By Ferdinand Lundberg. (The Equinox Co-operative Press, New York.)

THIS savage and forceful attack on William Randolph Hearst by a former Chicago and New York newspaper man (non-Hearst) is of special interest now that Hearst's approved candidate for President stands a good chance for the Republican nomination.

Called a "social biography," it is chiefly a recital of the serious charges made against Hearst since he began his tempestuous publishing career in 1887 in San Francisco; such accusations, for instance, as that he deliberately fomented the Spanish-American War, that attacks by his newspapers instigated the assassination of McKinley, and that he is the leader of the vanguard of Fascism in this country.

The author attempts to show that back of the journalistic campaigns and the political ambitions of Hearst has been the profit motive; that protection of his huge gold, copper and land holdings have guided his foreign and national policies, and advertising and political favors his local attitudes. The work has the fascination of any behind-the-scenes expose. Most of the author's case is carefully prepared and documented, and only rarely does he permit his prejudice to carry him into sensational insinuations that have no further apparent basis than his obvious willingness to believe only the worst of the powerful publisher.

Several liberal educators, whom Hearst has baited in recent years, have helped Lundberg with his work. Dr. Charles A. Beard has written an introduction as bitter as the text. The work is dedicated to another Hearst enemy, the American Newspaper Guild.

HONOR THEM, THEN. By Eve Walters. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, New York.)

THE masked passion of a jealous wife, who poisons her daughter's mind against the child's father, brings to a tense climax Eve Walters' story of a family of cranberry pickers among the mosquitoed cranberry bogs of Cape Cod.

Fearing that her husband is growing indifferent to her, the mother fosters the adoration of her daughter by picturing herself as a saintly martyr who is suffering from the humiliating cruelties of her lustful and slave-driving husband.

Although "Honor Them, Then" is an analysis of powerful emotions, dramatic action abounds in the story. The girl's fear and hatred of her father and her love for her mother result in tragedy when she discovers that she has been the victim of hypocrisy.

By subtle suggestion, Eva Walters increases the suspense of her tale, giving at the same time a picture of the crude, hard-working life of the cranberry pickers.

Garden Facts and Philosophy

ENCHANTED ACRE. By Gove Hambidge. (Whittlesey House, McGraw-Hill Book Co., New York.).

THE GARDEN DICTIONARY. Edited by Norman Taylor. (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston.)

THE GARDEN ENCYCLOPEDIA. Edited by E. L. D. Seymour. (William H. Wise & Co., New York.)

GOVE HAMBIDGE, living with his wife, Dorothy, and two children on their "enchanted acre" in Westchester County, New York, knows and loves the soil and the things of beauty and gastronomic goodness which it yields in varying abundance. Fellow gardeners would find his "adventures in backyard gardening" reward enough if he did no more than recount his experiences with golden bantam corn and raspberries, asparagus and grapes, pruning and fertilizing, so delightfully does he combine poetry and humor and good hard sense (the last developed along with callouses) in the telling.

But Mr. Hambidge does more than report on trial and error—and success—at Sunstead, as they call their place after the old Anglo-Saxon word meaning "solstice." He opens his heart and talks honestly to those pallid folk in cramped cities who look longingly at the country and wonder whether salvation, after all, does lie in its green expanse. For as he has found, sooner or later, if he be at all above the level of the peasant, your gardener, leaning on his hoe at the end of a row, relates weed and bug with bird and man and so begins to comprehend the universe.

"Enchanted Acre" is a book that many readers will go back to again and again. Mr. Hambidge advises against using it as a practical guide; "it will let you down," he says. But gardening facts are not the whole of gardening.

For the facts, we turn to the second and third books. "The Garden Dictionary," edited by Norman Taylor, with the help of many experts, among them Dr. George T. Moore and George H. Pring, director and superintendent, respectively, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, is a truly magnificent book. Beautifully illustrated and elaborately cross-indexed, it lives up fully to the promise of its subtitle, "an encyclopedia of practical horticulture, garden management and landscape design." Articles on each state, giving the essential facts about growing conditions and suitable flowers, crops and trees, give the book value in every section of the country. Map addicts will be entranced by the maps of the zones of hardiness and the onset of spring over the United States, which occupy the front and back end pages.

"The Garden Encyclopedia" covers the same field and with similar authority. It is, however, not so handsomely printed and illustrated, and does not contain so many entries. But its 1300 pages comprise a whole shelf of garden books.

The addition of "Enchanted Acre" and either "the dictionary" or "the encyclopedia" to his store of tools should make this a memorable year for the gardener, even though it rains too much to keep the weeds down or late summer drouth burns everything out.

Egyptian Romance

THE PYRAMID. By Robert Hichens. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, New York.)

ROBERT HICHENS' latest romantic novel, set in Egypt, begins with the failure of a young American opera singer in a Cairo performance and progresses with her climb to final success. There are counterplots involving a death in the desert, a murder, and a ruined diplomatic career. For those who like adventure and action there is plenty of both here, and over it all is the spell cast by the great pyramid upon the characters who are brought together, for a season, in a fashionable hotel on the Nile.

The book teems with varied and vivid characters, from an American girl to a Greek woman, a Rumanian writer to an Austrian baron. There is, in fact, so much diversification of character that the story, as it nears the end, loses unity. The reader's interest is forced to shift from one field of action to another, and one cannot help feeling that the author has made his characters create unnecessary situations for the sake of adventure. Even the atmosphere of glamour sometimes seems false, as though romance were being striven for at any cost.

Books in Greatest Favor

ACCORDING to reports from the leading booksellers throughout the country, the books most in demand during the past week stand as follows in the order of their popularity:

FICTION

The Last Puritan, by George Santayana; The Hurricane, by Nordhoff and Hall; The Thinking Reed, by Rebecca West; It Can't Happen Here, by Sinclair Lewis; The Rolling Years, by Agnes Sligh Turnbull; If I Have Four Apples, by Josephine Lawrence.

NON-FICTION

The Way of a Transgressor, by Negley Farson; Man the Unknown, by Alexis Carrel; North to the Orient, by Anne Morrow Lindbergh; Life With Father, by Clarence Day; Inside Europe, by John Gunther; The Exile, by Pearl S. Buck.

Among works of fiction, it is to be noted that the Santayana novel is still far in the lead, and that "If I Have Four Apples" has displaced "Gaudy Night" since last week, appearing for the first time among the six best-sellers. In non-fiction, since the previous report, Carrel's book has passed Anne Morrow Lindbergh's, and Pearl Buck's story of her mother's life has displaced "Hell Bent for Election."

Galsworthy Self-Revealed

THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF JOHN GALSWORTHY. By H. V. Marrot. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

WHEN H. V. Marrot, an intimate friend and fervent admirer of John Galsworthy, set out to write a biography of this towering figure in modern English literature, he adopted a plan for which other admirers of Galsworthy should be grateful. It was: "So far as possible, to let—even, if you will, to make—Galsworthy speak for himself."

The result is that the biographer wrote only a small part of the more than 800 pages of his book, and that most of the remainder is Galsworthy self-revealed, through his letters and notes, through extracts from his diary, plays, novels and lectures. In addition, there are illuminating letters to Galsworthy from friends, and critical appraisals of his work from the days of his discouraging beginning as a writer up to the time that the award of the Nobel Prize confirmed the world's estimate of his rank.

If it may be said of any man that he was a "self-made" writer, it is true of John Galsworthy. A son of wealthy parents, he had been formally educated, with a career as barrister in the offing. He was the average young English gentleman, interested in hunting and racing, apparently with no intellectual stirrings or ambitions.

Then came the turning point in Galsworthy's life, when he fell in love with Ada, wife of his cousin. Her marriage had been "a tragic mistake," Marrot says; "she was living in extreme unhappiness." She reciprocated Galsworthy's feeling, but marriage, by their code, was impossible. It was her casual words at one of their meetings: "Why don't you write? You're just the person," that gave Galsworthy his first thought of his career.

They were married at last, after 10 years of waiting, and the union seems to have been one of perfect happiness. But it was not until after 11 years of efforts as a writer that Galsworthy won recognition with "A Man of Property." In that time, he had literally forced himself to become an accomplished writer. His first stories were mediocre, as he himself recognized. He published four books at his own expense, with no success whatever.

Not until 1906 did he begin to receive critical recognition, a reading public and financial reward. After that, he created the unforgettable Forsyte dynasty (whose characters are drawn largely from his own family circle, this record shows), a host of other novels and plays, and took rank among the handful of the foremost.

From his personal history came the theme of unhappy marriage and frustrated love so frequent in his writings. From his awakening experience, too, in the long years of waiting and soul-searching, came his espousal of social causes, his broad economic views, his liberal political opinions.

Not only as the formal biography of a great writer is the book important. It is as fascinating as a novel by Galsworthy himself when read as the record of the development of a human being who passed through the fiery furnace and emerged as a fine and unusual character.

THE GREEN LION. By Francis Hackett. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, New York.)

THE author of two famous biographies, "Francis the First" and "Henry the Eighth," traces in this quiet, unhurried novel the life of an Irish boy, Jerry Coyne, during the trying years from 7 to 18. The title is presumably intended to symbolize a wild, undisciplined spirit with native qualities of nobility and courage. Jerry is tormented by each new reality, tortured by the sense of church-forbidden sin that he cannot overcome, frustrated by the barrier that separates one human being from another.

The novel is all of one mood of benign detachment and cool analysis. The Irish scene is deftly done with the reverent care of an Irishman who loves his native land.

Frontier Farming

CLEARING IN THE WEST: My Own Story. By Nellie L. McClung. (Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.)

IN the last few years the market has been flooded with novels and other books dealing with the frontier in the United States. It is, therefore, interesting to find in Nellie L. McClung's autobiographical narrative, "Clearing in the West," a parallel account of such development in Canada. After sketching the life of her family in Grey County, Ontario, (to which her father had emigrated from Ireland in 1830), the author takes the reader west with their wagons in 1880 to the prairies of the Red River country. The greater part of the book is given over to homely details of life on a frontier farm and to the first experiences of the author as teacher. Mrs. McClung does not make the reader feel that her book is one of real significance in the history of the frontier, but she does succeed in creating quietly a living family group. The book is never exciting, but it is never dull.

As Children See the World

AROUND THE WORLD IN ELEVEN YEARS. By Patience, Richard and John Abbe. (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York.)

MOST of us are suspicious of books written by children and look unconsciously for the touch of an adult hand in them. This chronicle of life, living and people in Europe and America by the children of James Abbe, well-known photographer, and Polly Platt, dancer, is delightfully unsophisticated and disconcertingly truthful.

Patience, the eldest, with a little collaboration from Richard, and Johnnie, the youngest, is responsible for the account which takes the Abbes through their fat and lean years abroad and ends with a winter spent on a ranch in the West. Her approach is unbiased and unsentimental. She views the occasional heated argument between Mamma and Papa with indifference, because she knows instinctively that they are a family which mere trifles, like quarrels and going hungry, cannot separate. She applauds, as a spectator, Papa's ingenious method for getting out of traffic jams in Paris by playing upon the Frenchman's reverence for the function of birth.

Russia, where people were taken to prison to be shot, where children were starving bums and slept with newspapers wrapped about them for warmth, appalled them. They don't like wars because "all children suffer then. And while children are ornery . . . they don't mean harm to people, so people ought not to be going around killing in the wars so that children will suffer."

France, the country of their birth, they like, but find that Frenchmen argue all the time. At St. Cloud they met Pavlova, and here Patience confesses with modest charm that she is going to be a dancer because "Pavlova was like a flower and her legs danced so beautiful and so like music and she was a great lady, so I am going to be the second Pavlova."

Germany was a clean place when they went to school and learned to march in line, to write German beautifully and to say "Heil Hitler." Here a diverting situation arises. When Hitler came to Berlin, "Mamma went out and marched in the parade. We mean, she didn't mean to march, but the crowd pushed her so she marched to get out of the crowd . . . and she saw Papa sitting in the Presse box while she was marching and she was mad."

Coming over to America on the boat was great sport because their Mamma did not come down for meals, so they had pickles and wurst for breakfast. The lack of politeness and friendliness in America astonishes them. They admire the hundred-etage buildings and are frightened by gang pictures at the cinema where robbers shoot "schupos" and the "schupos" curse and shoot back. The depression is "something that depresses you, then you have no job and then you must take money from the President and that makes you bashful."

The children present a remarkably clear picture of their experiences and the countries in which they have lived. They are unspoiled and their sense of values is surprising. They have great admiration for anyone who is "valiant" and "able to take it," because they have already learned that these two matters are important.

What an Average!

THE STORY OF CONGRESS, 1789-1935. By Ernest Sutherland Bates. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

OPEN the book at random; the odds are that one page or the other will show some gaudy item of congressional nonsense, from John Adams' pompous notions of title, style and procedure, at the first session, to Alben Barkley's careful explanation, last year, of the necessity of a situation that did not exist.

Here is the story of perhaps the greatest of the people's forums, the American Congress, from the outset a setting of that strange mixture of ulterior motive in good-doing, and ill-doing masquerading with high principle, passionate brawling, and words, words, words, that make the phenomenon known as politics. People have a way of believing that Congressmen in the mass are different from, or more deserving of reverence and respect than, the individuals. Of course, occasionally an individual may appear better or worse than the average—but what an average!

From all this it is not to be inferred that the author, Ernest Sutherland Bates, is a thesis-writer, debunker or muckraker. The facts make the indictment, not the reporter. Bates states his purpose succinctly—to present for the first time a complete and popular account of the National Assembly. Out of the bales and bales of the Congressional Record he has compiled his material. He moves at racehorse speed to stretch from 1789 to 1935 in 400-odd pages. He interpolates only such background as is necessary, he summarizes where he can; occasionally his language is unprecise, or his generalization may not be the one accepted by the reader, but in its broad line and substance the story is all here. The book should be required reading. H. T. M.

TUDOR GREEN. By W. B. Maxwell. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York.)

THE lives of most persons pass unnoticed between the time their births are listed in the paper and their death notices are run. Few leave enough behind to fill a two-paragraph obituary. Their lives are without importance except to a very few individuals. The world knows not what they did in life and doesn't care.

W. B. Maxwell has looked around and selected a place which he chooses to call Tudor Green, somewhere in the vicinity of London, and written a novel about such persons. He has found justification for introducing them into a novel "because they are men and women."

"The lives of men and women pass swiftly. Moreover they are rarely visible throughout. One sees beginnings and conclusions, but not generally the middle parts. Only now and then a single life seems to emerge and become traceable, like a thread with a distinctive color in the complex pattern of a woven fabric, for all its length." The above is a quotation from the end of the first chapter and summarizes the plot.

"Tudor Green" is the first of three novels, Mr. Maxwell says in his preface, in which he is going to prove that men and women are interesting because they existed. C. E. A.

ROOTS OF AMERICA. By Charles Morrow Wilson. (Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York.)

THIS is not a story, but a series of interviews with a score of rural types in all sections of the country from New England to the Southwest. The author chats with a New England stock raiser, a Vermont auctioneer, a country storekeeper, a hotel proprietor in a Missouri crossroads town, the editor of an Arkansas weekly newspaper, and various others, finding that all of them, in keeping close to the soil, have managed to earn a respectable livelihood and to live with a serenity and satisfaction they probably would have been unable to find if they had "moved up" to the city.

Charles Morrow Wilson, a native of Arkansas, is favorably known as a writer of fiction, his latest novel, "Rabble Rouser," being reviewed on this page. In "Roots of America" he has presented a notable group of unspoiled Americans whose homespun philosophy is refreshingly wholesome. W. F. G.

Brushy Ridge Lingo

RAIN ON THE JUST. By Kathleen Morehouse. (Lee Furman, Inc., New York.)

THERE is a saying among the Brushy Ridge folk of the North Carolina mountains that "life don't run ordinary but you get one nice thing in a bunch of uglies." The Allens of Hanging Dog Creek and their neighbors, as Kathleen Morehouse tells about them, are uglies, and she does not make any pretense of prettying them. Life for them is a brabble of sorry doings, from birthings to buryings, with a drizzle-drazzle of rain on the just and on the unjust, as it has been from time unbeknownst. Ready, though, these Allens and their neighbors, to drop whatever to help in a time of need. So they did when Old Man Reason Allen was killed by two of his boys, Young Rease and Joe, going forth to seek the fleeing sons and returning to night-stop at the Allen cabin and mourn with the mourners.

The killing of Old Rease proved the saying that among a bunch of uglies may be found one thing that is nice. The something nice that emerges from the Allen ugliness and all the other ugliness of the Brushy folk is Least Dolly Allen, called Least Dolly to distinguish her from Big Dolly, her mother. Least Dolly was uncommon tinsy, but a smart young un, for all her pindling size and puny ways, but the death of her father and the carryings-on of her mammy, widowed Big Dolly, threw upon her care the big twins, Hector and Lector, and the small twins, Mathew Mark and Luke John. Her devotion to these is the nice thing among the uglies, as the Brushy folk are presented in all their ugliness by Mrs. Morehouse.

Least Dolly, doing her endeavorest for the two sets of twins, comes to be a middling-old girl before she finds her fulfillment in the only way that she cares for it, with Bilow Baumgarner, who might have come sooner if it hadn't been for Least Dolly's throwing-off ways and her little-meant flout that she would gee-haw with whomso she wanted. With their bickers over and Bilow taking his rightful place to help Least Dolly with the twins, she speaks low to Bilow: "You be keeping me, and know for ever more, no matter how my tongue tells, once in a way, all my druthers and my have-tos are bedded well together. And no more a woman needs."

In such manner is the story told, giving more of the garnered glossary of the mountain people than a well-knit tale, but for that good gift we are beholden. F. A. B.

TO THE MOUNTAIN. By Bradford Smith. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

BRADFORD SMITH here presents the tragedy of two Japanese lovers in their attempt to express new ideas in an environment dominated by ancient tradition. The die for their tragedy is cast almost at the outset of the book in the pitiful relation of the heroine, Kimi-san, an exquisite child of the poor, to Yamano, a rich oil merchant. When she meets the latter's son, Shigeo, in the home of a Christian benefactor, the reader knows the inevitable conclusion.

Kimi-san, living above the world in spirit, yet finds joy in the work of her hands. She shares with her countrymen a filial piety and submissiveness, further strengthened by the Christian religion. In spite of the obedience that is in her very blood, she loves Shigeo so much that she would defy tradition were it not for her tragic situation.

Shigeo, less able to cope with the world, has a questing spirit that halts between impulse and reflection. The fatalism of the Japanese urges him to death as an escape from, or answer to, his problems. The scene in which Shigeo lifts Kimi-san over the balcony, while the black-robed lantern-bearer passes below, has rare beauty, as has also the description of the ascent of the mountain to a new day in death over the brink of the crater.

In the passages supplying the social and philosophical background the author writes less convincingly. He presents suicide as a characteristic Japanese escape, and yet he also wishes us to accept it as a strong protest against ways of tradition. Again he presents suicide as exalted, leading the couple to a larger way of life. His attitude toward the relation of Communism and Christianity is left obscure.

But he does step out of the frame of his story to tell us that there is a philosopher who can answer Shigeo's questions. Is it Kagawa? Certainly something of his spirit is embodied in this tale of the New Japan. V. D. G.

APACHE AGENT. By Woodworth Clum. (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston.)

"APACHE AGENT" is a history of the Apache nation, written from the red man's point of view, giving details of the white man's atrocities and justifying the Indians. The book was written from the notes which John P. Clum, the Apache agent, had prepared for writing his autobiography.

The story, from the murder of the first Apache Indian by an American in 1835 until Geronimo became a world's fair curiosity in 1904, is one of broken faith, misunderstanding and tragedy. The Apaches were cheated, deceived and murdered by the white soldiers and settlers. The white men drove the game from the hunting grounds. Finally in 1874 the Apache nation went on the war path with the intention of exterminating the white race.

At this time John Clum, a farmer boy from the upper part of New York State, who had been acting as weather man and teaching school in Santa Fe, N. M., was appointed agent at the San Carlos Apache Reservation.

He completely won the confidence of the Apaches, "known as the most dangerous of all the nations of red men, the most resourceful fighters and the most difficult to subdue." With their aid he captured Geronimo.

Politics got the better of Clum, and he resigned as Apache agent. Going to Tombstone, he became editor of the Epitaph and Mayor of the town, when it was the residence of the Earps and the capital of El Dorado. The book adds nothing to the story of Tombstone. C. E. A.

CARROLL'S ALICE. By Harry Morgan Ayres. (Columbia University Press, New York.)

KEEN appreciation but not hero-worship or far-fetched analysis is the keynote of this little book about Lewis Carroll and his immortal Alice. Most of it is the address delivered by Prof. Harry Morgan Ayres of Columbia University as a part of the 1932 Carroll centennial celebration. There are in addition several appendices giving little-known facts about the origins of Alice and the odd creatures she encountered, and reproducing pages of Carroll's neat manuscript. The volume is a worth-while addition to the literature that has grown up around Lewis Carroll and his creations. F. G.

"Kid Boots" to Be Municipal Opera Opener

Georgie Price Probable Choice for Cantor Role in Ziegfeld Show.

"KID BOOTS," which Florenz Ziegfeld staged originally with Eddie Cantor as the star, has been chosen by Municipal Opera to open its eighteenth annual season in Forest Park, on Friday night, June 5. The show will run for 10 consecutive nights, to be followed on June 15 by "The Three Musketeers."

The opening show has never been done at Municipal Theater before, although St. Louis saw Cantor and Ethelind Terry in it at the American Theater in 1926. Authors of the book are William Anthony McGuire, who wrote the screen play for the current film, "The Great Ziegfeld," and Otto Harbach. Harry Tierney composed the music and Joseph McCarthy wrote the lyrics.

Georgie Price, who handled a Cantor role in last season's production of "Whoopee," probably will be Municipal Opera's first cast selection for "Kid Boots." Producing Director Laurence Schwab is now in New York rounding up sets of principals for each of the season's shows.

With one operetta waiting to be selected, the schedule for the weeks after the opening is:

June 15 to June 21.—"The Three Musketeers." Music by Rudolf Friml, lyrics by P. G. Wodehouse and Clifford Gray, and book by William Anthony McGuire.

June 22 to June 28.—"No, No, Nanette." Music by Vincent Youmans, lyrics by Otto Harbach and Irving Caesar, and book by Otto Harbach and Frank Mandel.

June 29 to July 5—"Sons o' Guns." Music and lyrics by Arthur Swanstrom, Benny Davis and J. Fred Coots, and book by Fred Thompson and Jack Donahue. (New to Municipal Opera).

July 6 to July 12—"The Bohemian Girl." Music by Michael William Balfe and libretto by Alfred Bunn.

July 13 to July 19—"Oh, Boy." Music by Jerome Kern. Book and lyrics by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse. (New to Municipal Opera).

July 20 to July 26—"The Merry Widow." Music by Franz Lehar; lyrics by Adrian Ross, libretto by Victor Leon and Leo Stein.

July 27 to Aug. 2—"The New Moon." Music by Sigmund Romberg; book and lyrics by Laurence Schwab, Frank Mandel and Oscar Hammerstein III.

Aug. 3 to Aug. 9—"A Connecticut Yankee." Music by Richard Rodgers; lyrics by Lorenz Hart and book by Herbert Fields. (New to Municipal Opera).

Aug. 10 to Aug. 16—To be announced.

Aug. 17 to Aug. 23—"The Red Mill." Music by Victor Herbert and book and lyrics by Henry Blossom.

Aug. 24 to Aug. 30—"Glamourous Night." Music and book by Ivor Novello and lyrics by Christopher Hassall. (American premiere).

"Cherry Orchard" at Little Theater Tomorrow Night

ANTON CHEKHOV'S "The Cherry Orchard," never before presented in St. Louis, so far as can be discovered, will be played by the Little Theater for two weeks beginning tomorrow night, at the playhouse, 812 Union boulevard.

Director F. Cowles Strickland, faced with two cast substitutions during the last week, when Gordon Sommers and Bernard Ofner left to join the Globe Theater Co. at the San Diego Fair, has assigned himself to Sommers' part and put George Wendling in Ofner's place. Kathryn Cravens, news commentator with a local radio station, has the leading role, that of Madame Ranevsky. Others in the cast are Elmira Roessler, Margaret Hart, Dolores Harnett, David Orthwein, Bruce MacFarlane, Charity Grace, Fred Hirsch, Paul Pohl and Wieder Sievers.

"The Cherry Orchard," first produced by the Moscow Art Theater in 1904, has been a popular repertory work throughout the world since then. Mme. Alla Nazimova has been associated with the role of Madame Ranevsky most notably in this country. Chekhov's wife, known professionally as Olga Knipper, had the part originally.

The play, relating only the natural incidents that occur as Madame Ranevsky, a member of the landed gentry of Russia, sees her estate, with its cherry trees, sold under foreclosure, has little plot but is probably the best example of the playwright's brilliant work in characterization.

George Washington Screen Play.

The home life of George Washington will form the basis of a new screen play, tentatively titled "Mr. and Mrs. Washington." Rupert Hughes, noted authority on Washington, and Carey Wilson will collaborate on the script.

Pons, Bentonelli in "Lucia"

Donizetti Opera to Be Staged at Auditorium Tomorrow Night on Schedule.

DONIZETTI'S "Lucia di Lammermoor," with Lily Pons in the title role, will be presented at 8:15 o'clock tomorrow night in the Convention Hall of the Municipal Auditorium, by the St. Louis Opera Company.

The performance is the only one of four, including an opera concert and ball, to be kept on the schedule originally worked out for the company. "La Traviata" has been postponed to May 25, "La Gioconda" to May 27, and the concert and ball to May 23. All three will be held in the Auditorium Opera House. Tickets bought for any of the three originally may be exchanged for reservations for "Lucia" or for the later dates.

In the cast of "Lucia" with Pons are Hazel Sanborn as Alisa, Joseph Bentonelli as Edgardo, Norman Cordon as Raimondo, Wilifred Engleman as Lord Henry Ashton, Joseph Cavadore as Arturo and Lodovico Oliviero as Normanno. The grand opera chorus of 125 voices, the orchestra of 60 under the direction of Gennaro Papi and the ballet of 30 trained by Rita de Leporte are other integral parts of the production. Scenery and costumes of the Chicago Opera Company will be used.

Taken from Scott's novel, "The Bride of Lammermoor," the plot, as will be recalled, has to do with Lucia's love for Edgardo, their estrangement through the nefarious work of her brother, Lord Henry; Lucia's marriage to Arturo and her tragic madness. The opera was first performed in Naples on Sept. 26, 1835, and came to the United States, at New Orleans in 1841.

It was in "Lucia" that Pons made her debut at the Metropolitan in 1931, winning 30 curtain calls. The role is also the first she ever studied, although she made her first professional appearance in "Lakme." The soprano, known throughout the operatic world, completed her fifth season with the Metropolitan early this spring and recently made a trip to Monte Carlo to sing for three weeks there, near her birthplace at Cannes, France.

Her appearance here in "Lucia" is her only American engagement this season away from the Metropolitan. She is due in Hollywood, Aug. 1, to begin work on her second motion picture. The vehicle selected is "Street Girl," story of a girl who manages a small orchestra and brings it to success. The story was filmed once before in 1927.

Only 12 Real "Stars," Darryl Zanuck Says

Only about a dozen people in motion pictures deserve the title of "stars," according to Darryl Zanuck, who last week defined a star as "someone who can draw 2,000,000 patrons to the box office, and do it on his or her own personal magnetism, without a necessarily great story or an army of popular supporting players."

The producer did not name the dozen stars he thought might merit classification, but only the basis of his definition, Hollywood figures they might be Shirley Temple, Clark Gable, Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Claudette Colbert, the Astaire-Rogers team, Mae West, Bing Crosby, W. C. Fields, Joe E. Brown, James Cagney and Dick Powell. Their studios say they have the 2,000,000 drawing power.

Shirley Temple in "Captain January," at the Fox Theater.

Ross Alexander and Anita Louise in "Brides Are Like That," Orpheum.

Mummers Name Cast For Final Production

The original stage version of 'Petticoat Fever," current picture at Loew's, will be played by the Mummers in two performances at the Wednesday Club on Friday and Saturday, May 1 and 2. The cast is made up of Wesley Gore, Marie Stonecipher, Dorothy Engler, Robert Bennett, Willard Holland, Hugh Sanders, Al Hohengarten, Jeanne Favre, Lucille Williamson and Charles Krause. "Petticoat Fever" is the ninth and last production of the Mummers' current indoor season. Lynn Riggs' folk drama, "Green Grow the Lilacs," is set for outdoor presentation in mid-summer.

Corinne Frederick Recital.

Corinne Frederick will complete her cycle of Beethoven piano sonatas Wednesday evening, in the Crystal Room of the Coronado Hotel. She will play Opus 27, Opus 28 and Opus 31, No. 1.

Odd Table Manners Of "Romeo and Juliet"

Research for "Romeo and Juliet" has revealed a unique table etiquette for the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. Some of the maxims are: "Don't pick your teeth with a knife. Hold your food in three clean fingers. Don't spread butter or cheese on your bread with the thumb; use a knife or crust of bread. When dining out, don't put your knife back in its sheath too early—there may be more to come. Don't dip your bread in the wine if you are sharing the bowl with another."

Director George Cukor will be judge of what is socially proper in the screen production of the Shakespearean masterpiece. With Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard as the stars, "Romeo and Juliet" will have John Barrymore, Edna May Oliver, Basil Rathbone, Reginald Denny, Conway Tearle, C. Aubrey Smith, Violet Kemble-Cooper and others in the cast.

Robert Montgomery in New Comedy

By COLVIN McPHERSON.

WITH continued runs for "The Great Ziegfeld" and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," St. Louis this week is not lacking in first-rate film entertainment, at either road show or popular prices. Opening of the recently-arrived canisters from the West, however, reveals nothing more than the ordinary output of the production center.

Robert Montgomery, away from the screen for most of a year while touring Europe and tinkering with an imported automobile, is to be seen at Loew's, thoroughly refreshed, in a light comedy called "Petticoat Fever." Purporting to be wireless operator at a lonely station in Labrador, he is curling up for the long winter's nap when an airplane's forced landing brings him guests—Reginald Owen, a somebody of importance in Canada, and Myrna Loy, Reggie's fiancee. The sight of Myrna causes Bob to break out in the rash for which the film is named, and he flounces about, placing pillows for her to sit on, and devouring her with his eyes. Reginald, always a hard-working villain in Northern climes, excites himself to the point where he can draw an automatic on Robert and demand to be taken to civilization. Then the icy winds blow in Robert's own fiancee, so it is proved that there's no privacy, even in Labrador. The whole set of circumstances seems a trifle obvious but for those who like Robert's devil-may-care performances—and there are many of us—"Petticoat Fever" is sufficient. Worthwhile assistance in putting the show over is offered by Otto Yamaoka, as Montgomery's Eskimo servant.

Till We Meet Again.

IT IS August, 1914, at the Orpheum this week. Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael, actor and actress on the London stage, are madly, madly in love, or at least Mr. Marshall's lowered voice, purpling face and romantic exaggerations make us believe that they are. Then the fellows in Parliament spoil everything by declaring war. Gertrude, being Viennese, is called into spying service from which there is no escape save death and leaves Herbert only to wonder. Herbert, an Englishman, is valuable to his country in the same service, so is smuggled into Germany. It is inevitable that Gertrude and Herbert should meet, and although both have done rather well at the new career, they give it up for love and flee to Holland. Lionel Atwill uses his Teutonic visage to advantage again as Gertrude's superior officer and the obstacle in their path. "Till We Meet Again" has its tense moments, the main one having to do with the sabotage of a "Big Bertha" gun by Q-22 or somebody.

"Brides Are Like That," the second film at the Orpheum, comes from a play called "Applesauce," and is about a loud-mouthed lad, Ross Alexander, who won't buckle down to business, even after marrying Anita Louise. The Orpheum presents also that "documentary" film, "The March of Time." Its subjects are the Florida ship canal, the national field trials for championship bird dogs, arson investigation and the Veterans of Future Wars.

The Farmer in the Dell.

HOLLYWOOD usually does rather badly when describing itself, and "The Farmer in the Dell," at the Shubert, is a thing to rob its worshipers of their illusions, without giving them much in exchange. From the Phil Stong novel, "The Farmer in the Dell" sends Fred Stone, an Iowa farmer, to Hollywood, waves a wand over him and makes him a homespun favorite of the screen. His family runs riot with the money and he lays down the law. Thus ends the film, with the embrace of Jean Parker and Frank Albertson, but I doubt if the picture business has been helped any. Satire on Hollywood, expertly done, has often proved hilarious, but the manner of "The Farmer in the Dell" is more that of the "quickies" which, from time to time, use Hollywood as background. Stone's performance, too, is overdone. Moroni Olsen, as his director, alone is convincing.

In "Road Gang," the second feature, attempt is made to show that in a Southern state an honest young newspaper man can be railroaded to prison by a wicked politician, but that he can be saved by a prison riot, a writ of habeas corpus and a lovely young woman. A Hollywood touch is given, if I saw aright, by the name of a supply company printed plainly on the burlap covering a basket of sandwiches for the prisoners.

Captain January.

LIGHTHOUSE steps make a nice place for Shirley Temple to dance, but "Captain January" will not be set down as one of her major successes. Its weaknesses are spread over story, supporting cast, direction and setting, so no one individually can be blamed. Shirley herself appears carefully primed for each speech. Guy Kibbee, Slim Summerville and the quips are atrociously bearded. All in all, "Captain January" is more of a home talent play than a Hollywood feature. It divides the bill with "Roaming Lady," in which Fay Wray follows Ralph Bellamy to China.

Slighter first-run offerings of the week are "Comin' Round the Mountain," a pony express Western, with vaudeville and some shabby short subjects, at the Grand Opera House, and "Doughnuts and Society," a comedy on the order of the Marie Dressler-Polly Moran opus, "Caught Short," at the Missouri. Neither holds out hope to the picture patron in search of delight.

In such circumstances, I cannot resist recalling the breath-taking beauty of the "Pretty Girl" number in "The Great Ziegfeld," or the starry bits of acting by Luise Rainer. Much recollection of pleasure is being shared, too, I am sure, by those who have seen "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." Although certainly excelled by other pictures in plot and cast, it has no apologies to offer in the matter of comedy or human appeal.

Left Wing Playwright Finds Good in Hollywood

Clifford Odets Says Screen Can Give Public "Sense of Problems" and "Heightened Perception of Life," Even as Stage.

BY H. H. NIEMEYER.

HOLLYWOOD, April 18.

IT DIDN'T take Clifford Odets, famous Left Wing playwright, lon to discover that standing up for the downtrodden by way of th stage was one thing, but the Hollywood gold was quite another, an not altogether undesired matter. Odets, you know, boomed up fro poverty on the lower East Side of New York last year by writing "Waiting for Lefty," "Awake and Sing" and other dramas about t proletariat and was hailed as a boy genius who would lead theat audiences in the proper direction.

Young Mr. Odets is somber-looking and inclined to be a dream er who frowns upon wealth as the root of all evil. Or at least h looked upon it that way when he was back home and broke. Then h came to Hollywood just for a vacation, he says, and the world began to appear a bit brighter right away. The silver and gold lining started to come through the clouds at a regulation Hollywoo party which Odets attended as the guest of Director Lewis Milestone, Mr. Milestone owned the rights to a story, "The General Died at Dawn," and suggested that Odets make it into a screen play.

The party was a good one. The money mentioned for the drama tization was large and before the evening was over Mr. Odets, if h had not forgotten his position as stander-upper for the downtrodden, had, at least, pushed the matter aside. He signed on the dotted line.

"Truth can be gotten across on the screen and made box-office just as it can on the stage," says Clifford. "One doesn't have to b gloomy about it, either. People can be given a sense of problems, heightened perception of life a at the same time, be entertaine and even gripped. All that's needed is plenty of action—plenty o jumping around."

However, in "The General Died at Dawn" Odets will forget th "sense of problems" things an confine himself to entertainment and action. After that he hopes t get around to a little uplifting with an original play.

He talks, too, about his futu plans on the New York stage. M authors do, when they first com to Hollywood, but they generally wind up with a ranch in the Sa Fernando Valley.

THE announcement that Merle Oberon had allowed Dave Selz nick to talk her out of starring in "The Garden of Allah" and had stepped aside to let Marlene Die trich have the role, was a bit pre mature. Work has started with Marlene in the part but Merle has started work, too, in the courts. She has filed suit against Selznick for $125,333.33, charging that her reputation was damaged to that amount when she was shoved aside to make room for the glamorous Dietrich.

Reciting her side of the affair Miss Oberon says she was sign to a contract to play the lead i "The Garden of Allah" last January at a salary of $6000 a week and an additional sum of $1000 day for every day the picture was in the making after 10 weeks. The production was postponed once o twice with the date of starting fi ally set for April 1. During the month of March, Miss Oberon wa paid a waiting salary of $2000 week. She got $10,666.67 befo Dietrich hove into sight. Th amount she has deducted from he claim for damages which accounts for the odd cents on the end of th sum she wants.

She makes no charges against L Dietrich, being content to just tak that part of the damages out i scorn. And Merle is some scorner.

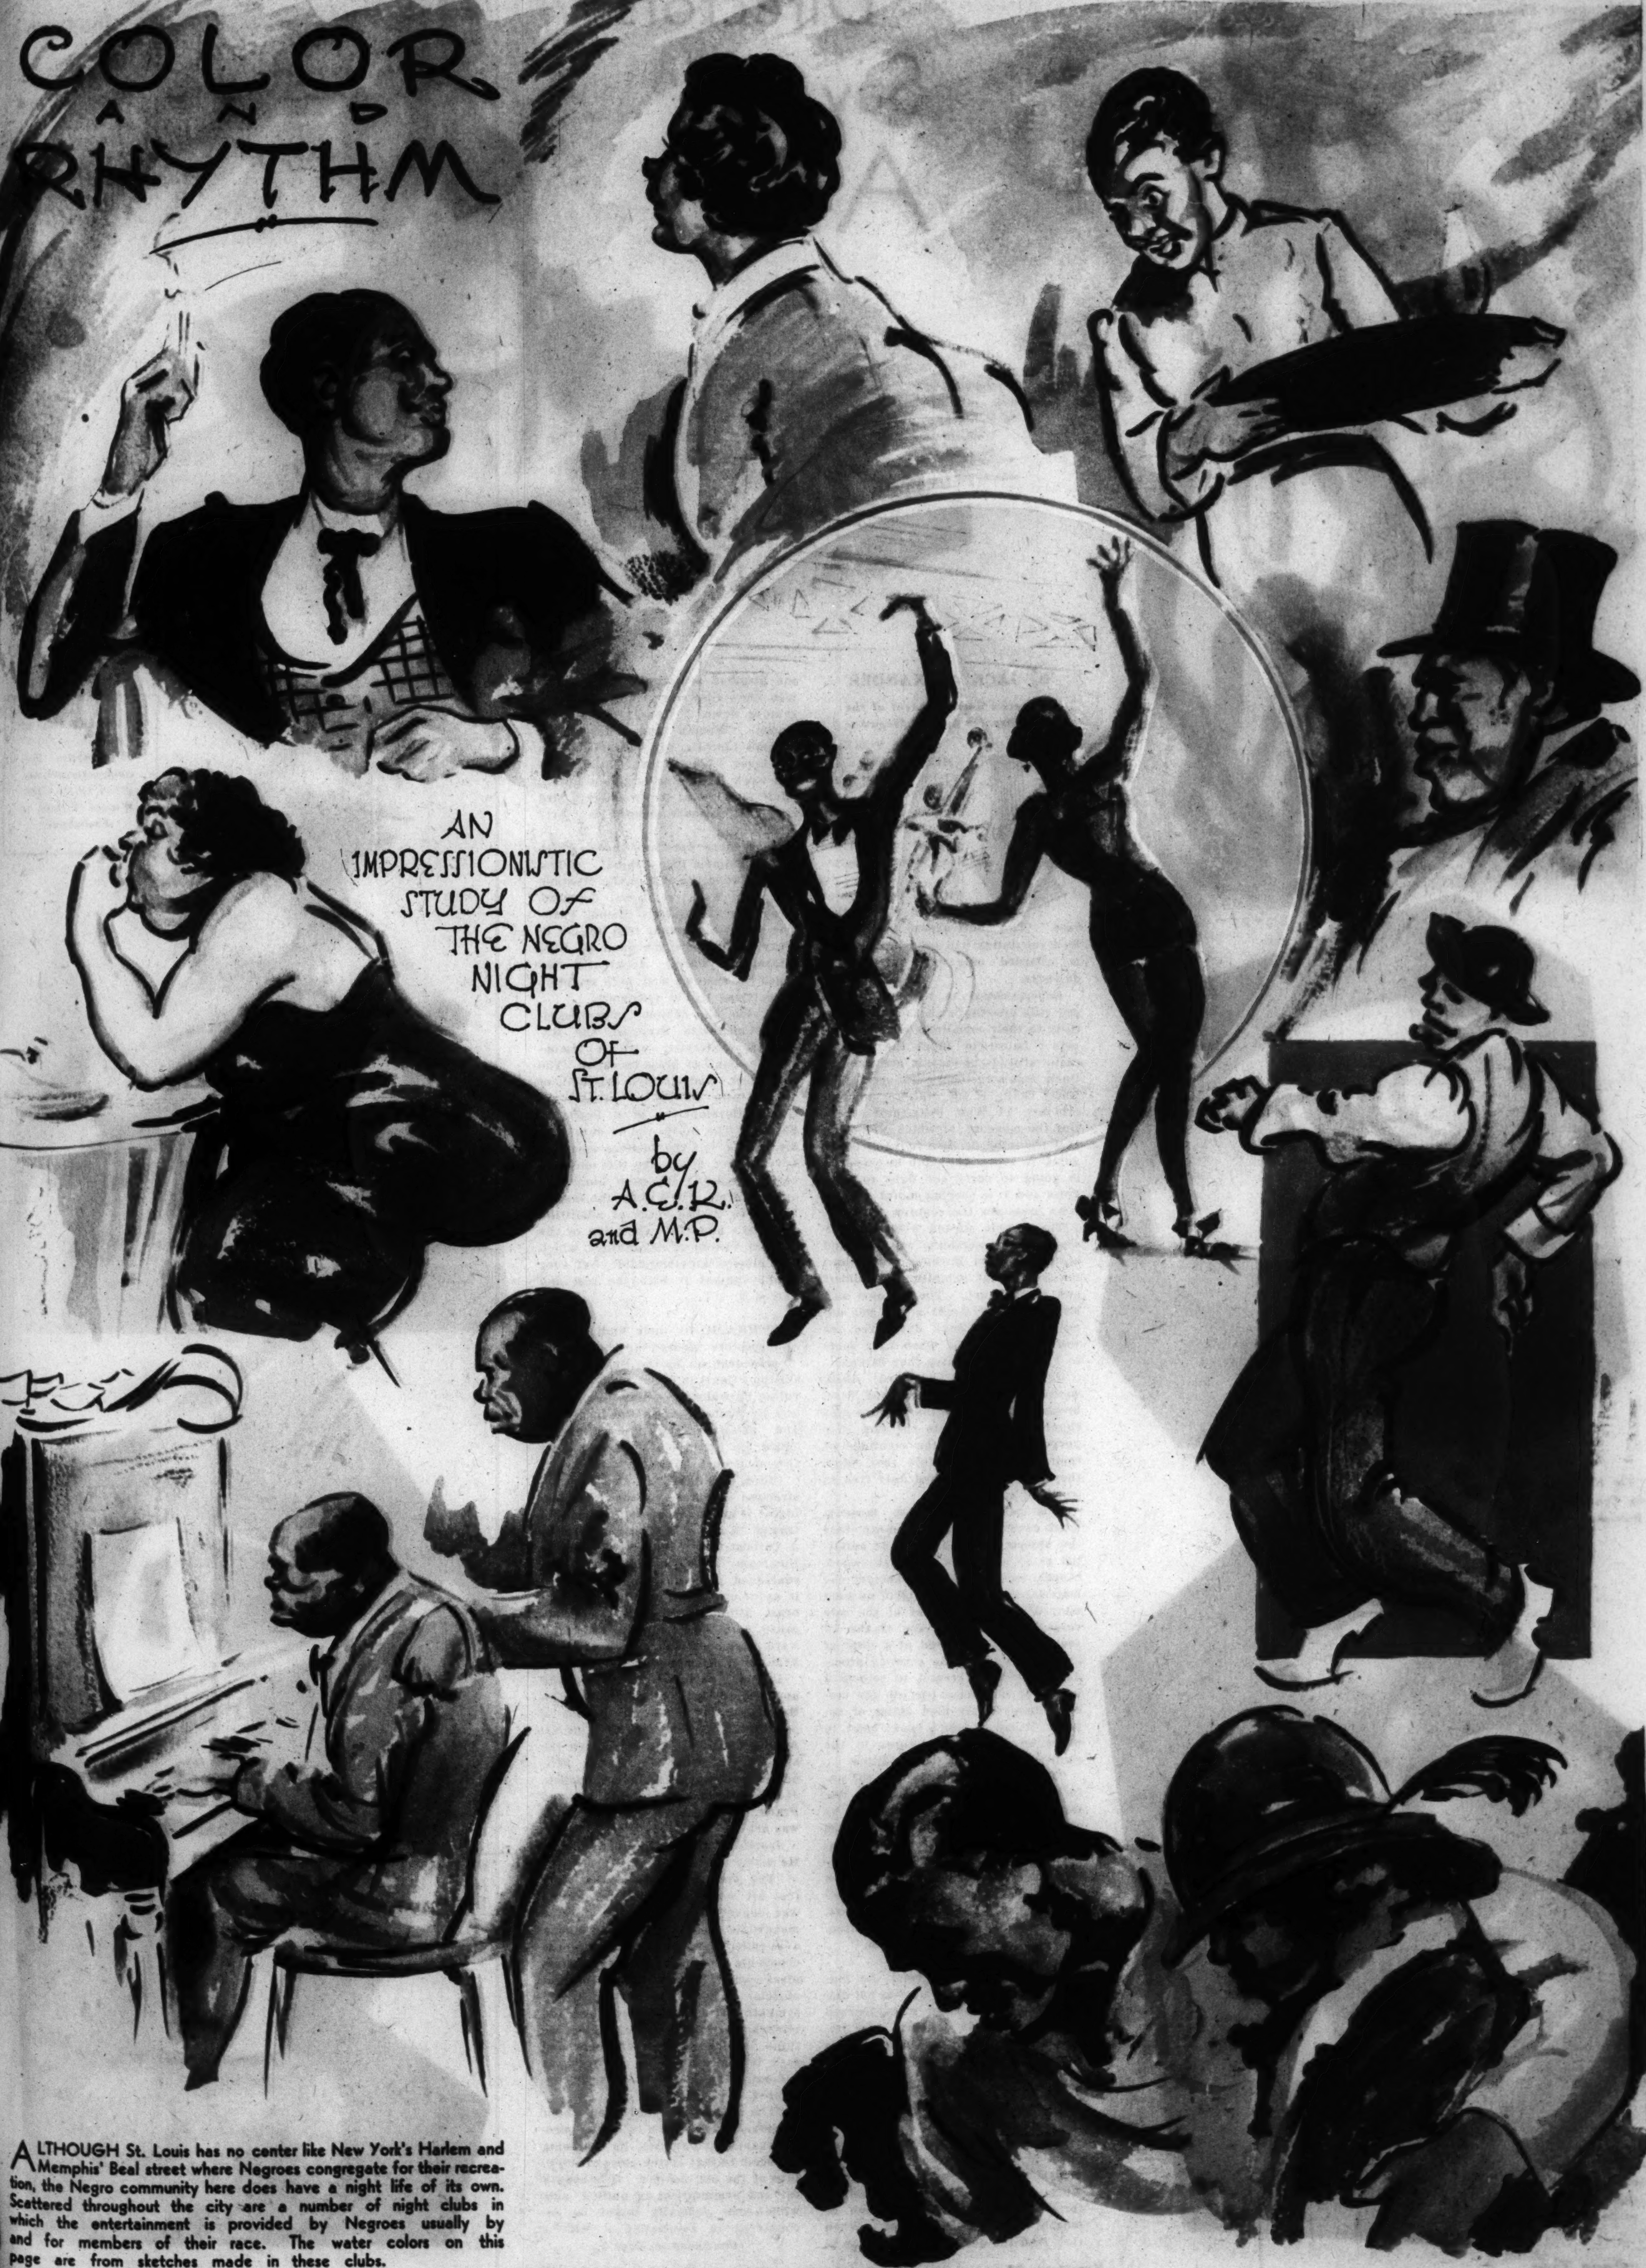
COLOR AND RHYTHM

AN IMPRESSIONISTIC STUDY OF THE NEGRO NIGHT CLUBS OF ST. LOUIS

by A.E.R. and M.P.



ALTHOUGH St. Louis has no center like New York's Harlem and Memphis' Beal street where Negroes congregate for their recreation, the Negro community here does have a night life of its own. Scattered throughout the city are a number of night clubs in which the entertainment is provided by Negroes usually by and for members of their race. The water colors on this page are from sketches made in these clubs.

NEW YORK.

JAMES A. McNEILL WHISTLER once sued John Ruskin because the essayist, in a published criticism of an unorthodox Whistler painting, compared it with "a pot of paint flung in the public's face." The Court agreed that Whistler's reputation had been injured, but it awarded only one farthing in damages.

Experimenters in the field of art are still meeting with the same hostility to their sometimes bizarre products. Latest to adopt the Ruskinesque attitude of disdain are some of Uncle Sam's customs examiners. The latest victim is the Museum of Modern Art, 11 West Fifty-third street. But the museum, of which Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr., is a founder, is not going to accept the snub meekly. It is going to carry the fight to Congress and it is seeking moral support from museums the country over.

The trouble started when the museum began assembling paintings and sculptures from European collections for its current exhibition of cubism and abstract art. The customs men scratched their heads a bit, but admitted 59 paintings duty free, as work of art. But when they came to 19 exotic sculptures they balked.

Certainly, they reasoned, these weird creations of plaster, wood, wire, bronze, iron and lengths of stove pipe cannot be art, despite the fact they purport to portray the emotions of their creators. Therefore, they ruled, they cannot be admitted duty free as works of art.

This ruling caused the museum much consternation, for it meant that the objects would have to be admitted as so much raw material—wood, bronze, iron, plaster or whatever the material might be. The tariff on such materials is 40 per cent of the sale value which, in the case of the 19 sculptures, is estimated at a total of about $100,000. The customs procedure didn't get around to setting a value for the pieces because the museum immediately filed notice of appeal. It had to post a heavy bond, in order to get the sculptures in the country in time for its exhibition.

"The museum finds itself in the unfortunate position of having the material of its exhibitions regulated by the esthetic dicta of the United States Customs Court," complained A. Conger Goodyear, president. "The customs examiners find themselves in the equally embarrassing position of deciding what is, and what is not art, under an inadequate legal definition. The result is general confusion."

THE cost of the bond the museum had to put up was not disclosed. However, it was learned that in a similar difficulty over imported Negro art, the museum was forced to put up a bond which cost it $700 in premium. There was no estimated value for the African pieces.

The customs men, in arriving at their decision, hewed closely to a Treasury Department decision handed down in 1916, in which the Government held that a work of sculpture must represent human or animal forms "in their true proportion of length, breadth and thickness." When they read the decision, then looked at the disputed sculptures, the customs men knew they were right in turning thumbs down. There was, for instance, "Woman and Guitar," by Jacques Lipchitz, of Paris. That was the label, "Woman and Guitar," but the work itself was a gilden bronze affair that looked to them like a bird cage that someone stepped on. Art? Huh!

Then there were two pieces which bore the simple title, "Head." One, a painted wood, jig saw puzzle creation, was the work of Henri Laurens, owned by the Galerie Simon, Paris. The other, a wrought iron mix-up of crazy angles, bore the name of Julio Gonzales, of Paris. Apparently, reasoned the customs men, both sculptors were trying to kid somebody.

So, too, the customs men figured, were Constantin Brancusi, the Rumanian modernist, with a lemon-shaped chunk of brass he called "The New-Born," and Umberto Boccioni, of Milan, who offered a bronze entitled "Development of a Bottle in Space." The bottle, to be sure, was discernible, but the customs men had never seen a bottle like this one, and besides it didn't represent human or animal form. For a time, the inspectors were on the verge of admitting Boccioni's powerful conception of the Winged Victory of Samothrace, which was almost understandable, but they finally lumped it with the rest and barred it.

IN REACHING their findings, the inspectors ignored a more recent precedent set by the United States Customs Court in 1928. This was the ruling by which Presiding Justice Byron C. Waite reversed the inspectors and admitted the much-discussed "Bird in Flight" of Brancusi duty free as a work of art.

"Bird in Flight," is an ovoid abstraction in brass, about four feet high. It might just as aptly have been tagged "X-ray of a Fibula," "Keel of a Catboat," or "Pickerel Swimming Upstream," so far as the customs was concerned. The customs men viewed it as an attempt to smuggle in raw brass without paying duty and, because its prospective purchaser, Edward Steichen, was willing to pay $600 for it, fixed the tariff at $240.

Brancusi protested the ruling and appealed to the Customs Court, with the moral and financial backing of powerful Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. A Government art expert testified the bird was not art, but nonsense. Witnesses for Brancusi included Steichen, Jacob Epstein, Forbes Watson and Frank Crowninshield. They said it was art.

Justice Waite was broad-minded. He wrote:

"The Treasury decision (that duty free art works must imitate nature) was handed down in 1916. In the meanwhile there has been developing a so-called new school of art, whose exponents attempt to portray abstract ideas rather than to imitate natural objects. Whether or not we are in sympathy with these newer ideas and the schools which represent them, we think the fact of their existence and their influence upon the art world, as recognized by the courts, must be considered.

"The object (the Bird) now under consideration is shown to be for purely ornamental purposes, its use being the same as that of any piece of sculpture of the old masters. It is beautiful and symmetrical in outline, and, while some difficulty might be encountered in associating it with a

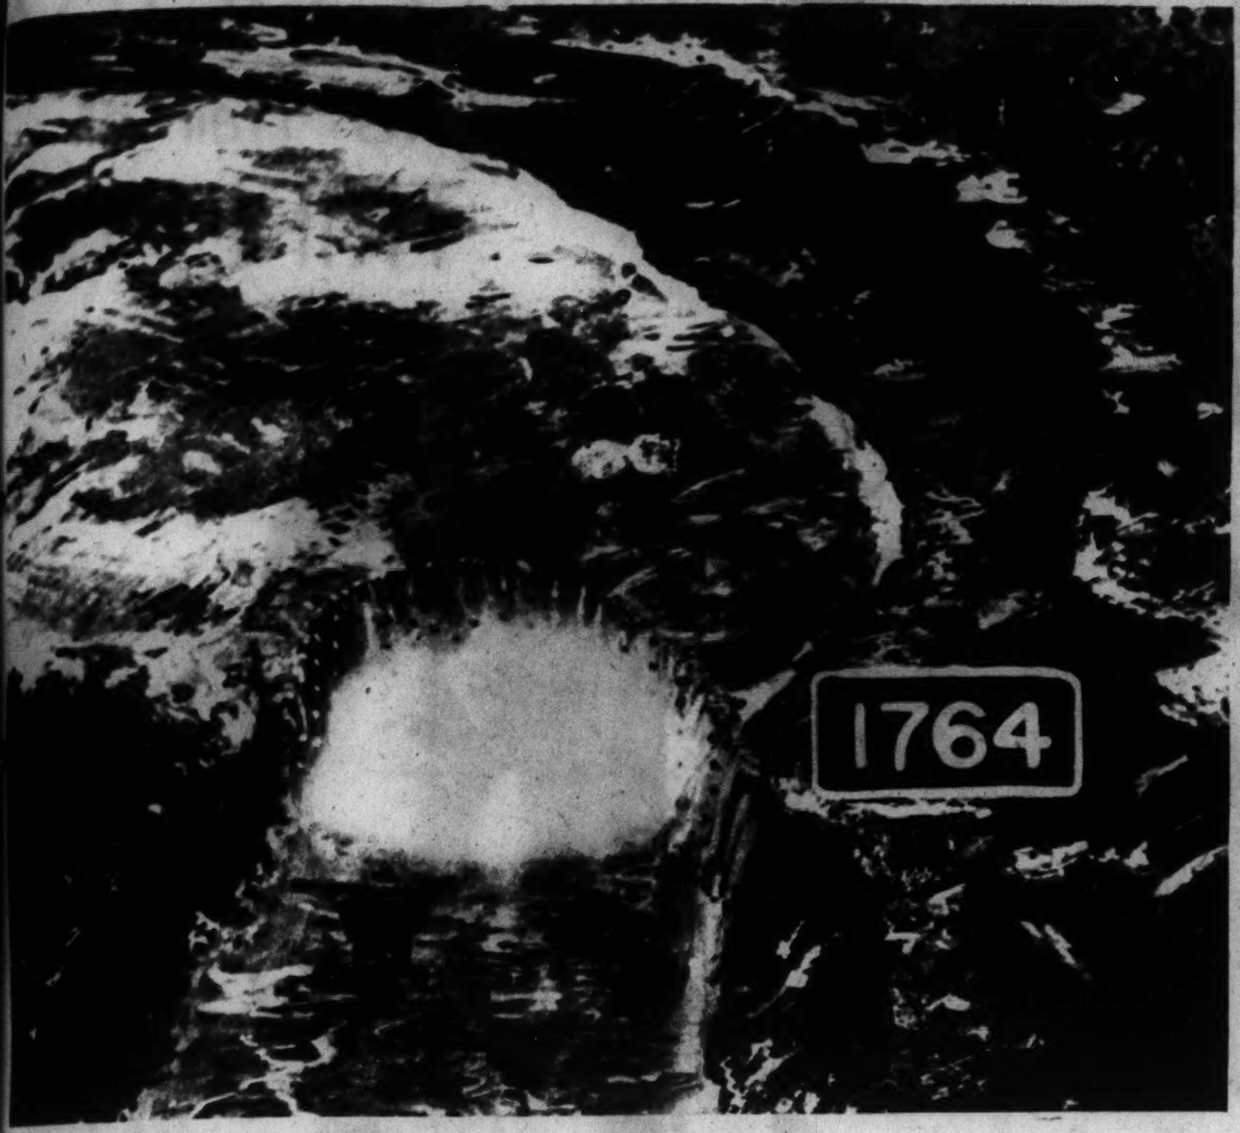
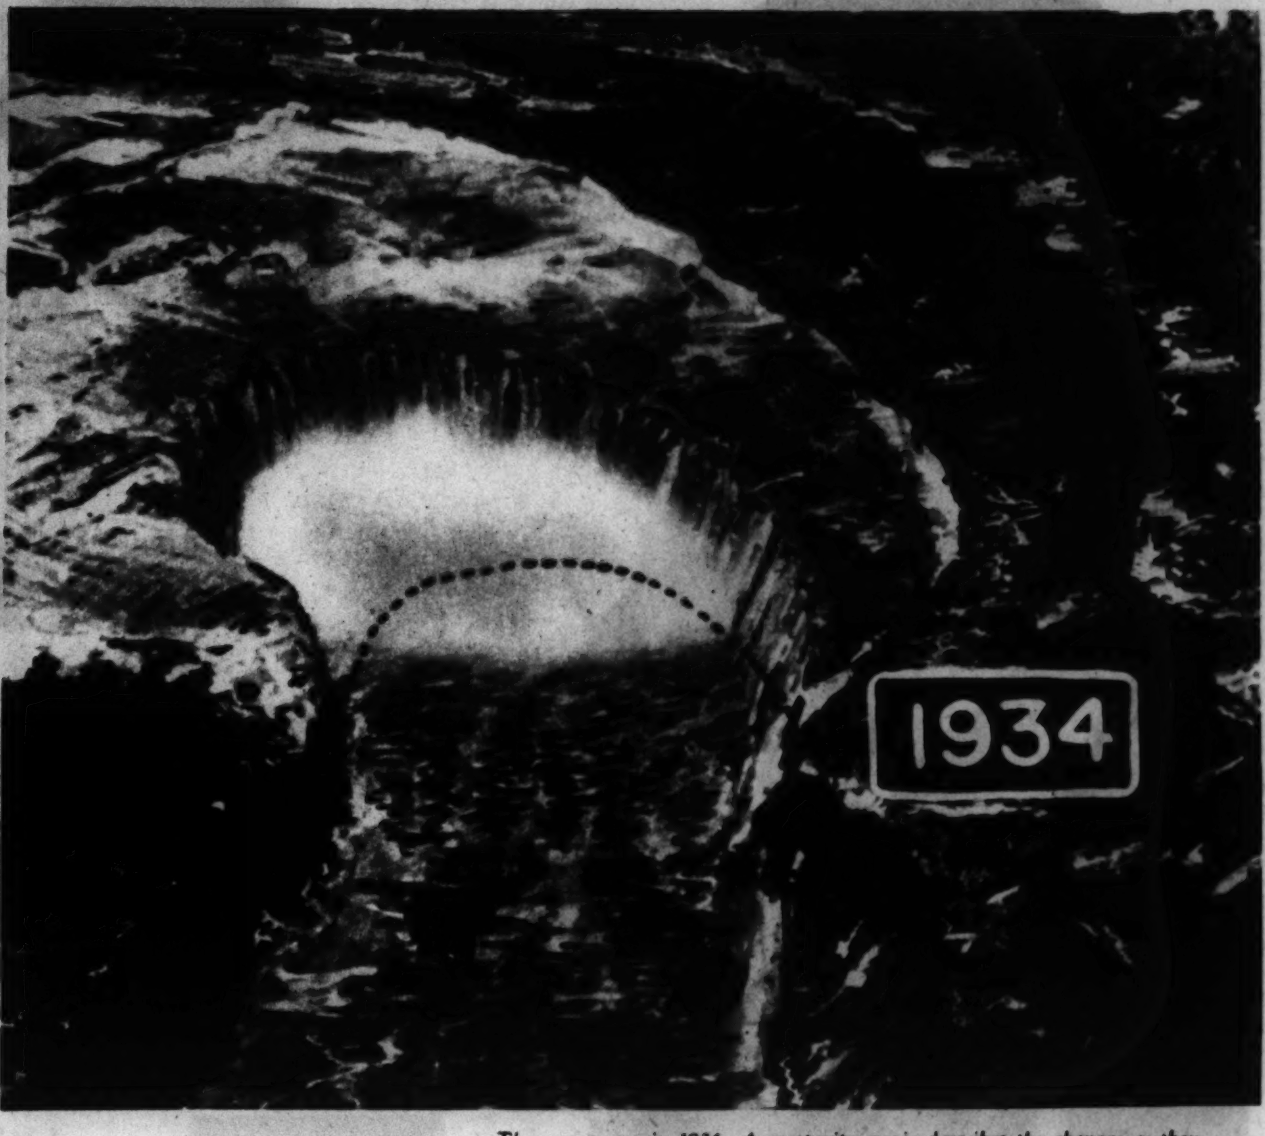
The EARTH'S GROWTH in MOVING PICTURES



Niagara Falls as it appeared in 1764.



The same scene in 1934. A composite movie describes the changes as they occurred in the interim.

A Billion Years of Change Shown in One Hour of Running Time in the Film Recently Produced by the University of Chicago and Associates.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

AS A preface to his "Story of Mankind" Hendrik Willem Van Loon tells a story about a little bird that used to fly every century (possibly it was every thousand years) to an enormous rock where it sharpened its beak, until it had worn the rock to the size of a pebble. Instead of being enlightened by the parable many of the children who read it and looked at the accompanying picture of a very large cliff and a very small bird were doubtless baffled. For even imaginative children (to say nothing of matter-of-fact business-like adults) find it impossible to conceive of the slow vast forces which for several million years have been molding the earth into its still changing present shape. There are a great many intelligent people who can realize that the world is round, but cannot imagine pictorially little grains of sand filling up an ocean, little drops of water erasing a mountain, a whole continent being swallowed up by the sea and an entire ocean nullified by an arising continent. For city-bound moderns only a catastrophic natural force has any reality and nature's slow passages are as inaudible as the music of the spheres.

Realizing this, and forgetting the experience astronomers have had with their planetariums (which are universally popular), some geologists decided to make a movie of earth forces at work, speeding up the processes just the way "slow motion" slows them down. And when the movies were finished they were amazed to find that doctors of philosophy and "even Washington newspaper correspondents," as one said, were entranced by a film intended for CCC boys.

THE process of making movies show geological action was inevitably complicated and tedious. It resembled the making of animated cartoons, except that it had to be far more realistic and therefore had to make use of photographs wherever possible instead of drawings. Thousands of composite photographs, drawings, cut-outs and transparent negatives had to be made in order to get a strip of film containing episodes that would run for an hour. It took collaboration by the geology department of the University of Chicago, the National Park Service, the CCC and the Erpi Picture Consultants of New York to make the film. Dr. Harold Bryant of the National Park Service and Dr. Carey Croneis of the University of Chicago contributed the scientific facts on which the picture is based. The Park service contributed the topography which is the framework of the movie. The CCC contributed much of the essential drudgery, with enthusiasm.

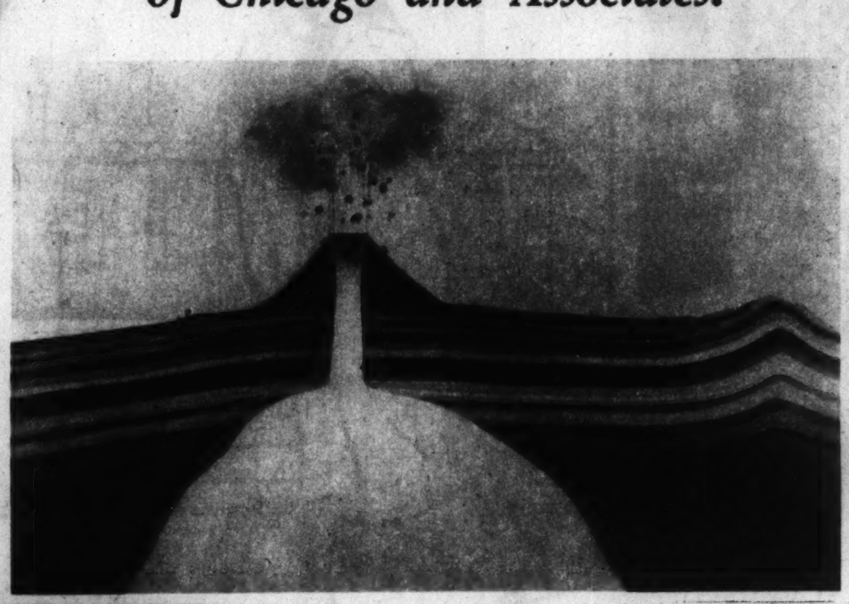
The film is a series of sections each of which begins with a pictorial view of the natural phenomenon whose formation is described in the action—rivers, glaciers, the towering mountain cliffs that wall in Yosemite Valley and the imposing gulf of the Grand Canyon. . . . Most of these are in National Parks—these, from the geologist's point of view, being America's most significant historical document. The CCC men had to be everywhere and they were. Besides making the innumerable drawings and cut-outs they lugged heavy cameras into places that mountain goats usually avoid, did all the hauling and moving and clambering necessary to make all the shots effectively.

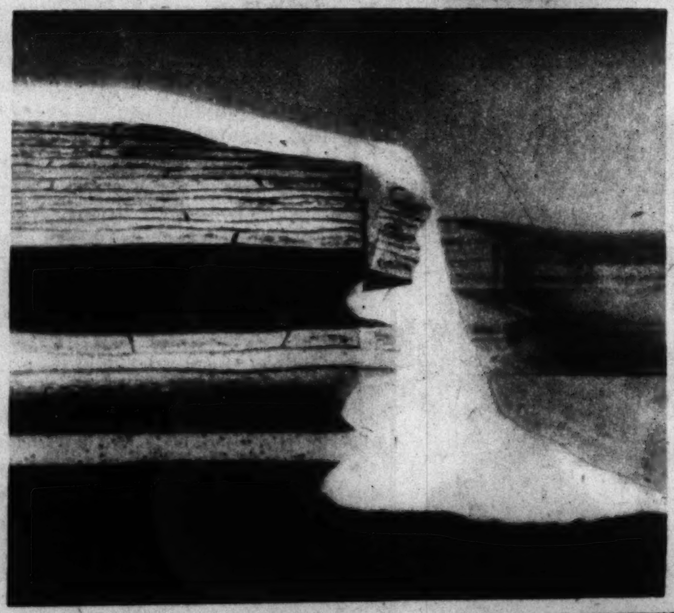
The film opens with a section devoted to water. Its influence on the shaping of the earth is of first importance and its part is that of the antagonist in the history of the land. Dr. Croneis' running account that goes with the film shows how water, seeming to be the softest, weakest and most yielding of the visible elements, is in reality a titan which molds and shapes, breaks down and carries away, never building the soft beauties of earth, always destroying. One sees the water breaking off the earthen banks of its streams, wearing away the solid granite face of a mountain, trickling slyly between limestone strata to gorge out gigantic caverns. One sees rocks split by wedges of ice, boulders piled up on lake shores and giant glaciers scooping out valleys and piling up hills. Of course anyone who has ever left the city and gone for a walk is aware of these effects, but to see the cause in action as a protagonist in an immense play is more impressive than text-book facts, whether in print or in granite. Water's career in the drama is appropriately sensational. One sees it locked secretly into dry and changeless stone crystals or leaping with a bellow into the sky as volcanic steam. Although the earth is the hero in this story, water is in truth the sculptor and the earth only its work.

And yet even this demon power, as the film shows, is no free agent. It needs solid matter to work on, but it also needs solid matter to attain its own shape. A speck of dust is the beginning of a raindrop. That fact makes the first scene of the picture.

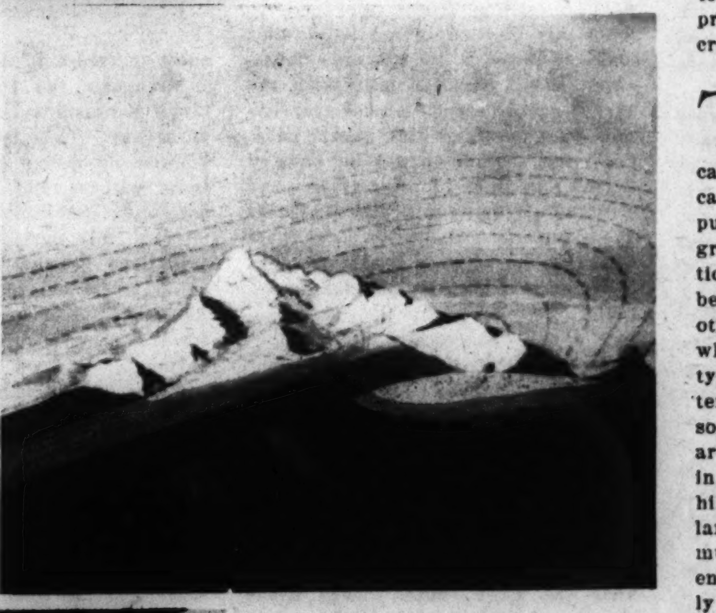
Infinitesimal motes of earth are shown floating in the upper air, picking up molecules of water vapor by the attraction of their electrical charges. The droplets grow larger, become clouds, coalesce until they are too heavy to resist the gravity pull of earth. Then they drift downward and finally fall as rain. Thus a microscopic event becomes magnified into a storm and storms by the millions become a natural force of geological magnitude. One sees the rain wash a mountain range into the sea, but first one is shown puddles overflowing into trickles, which become rills, then rivulets, then streamlets, brooks, creeks and finally rivers that pour into the sea. In the course of this action one sees erosion—water courses that wear into fields, cut pastures into chains of gullies and finally make the land barren and unarable.

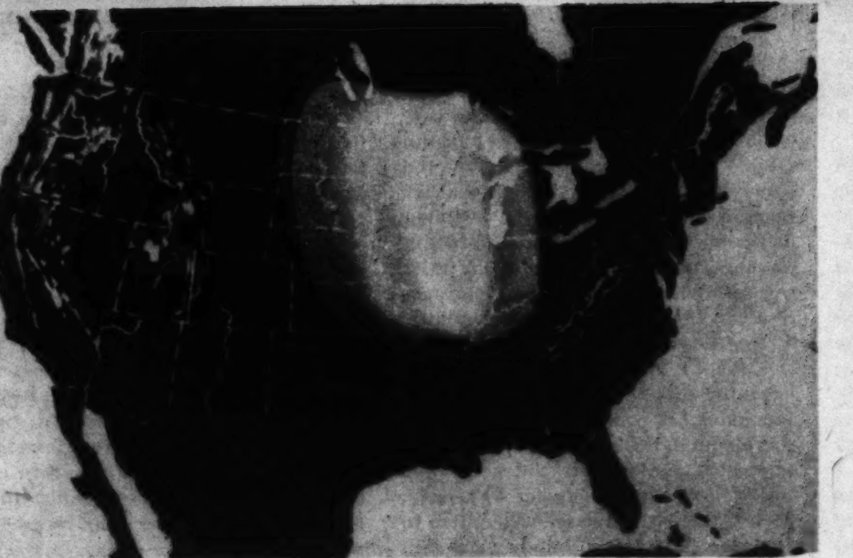
The action is animated by frequent dramatic shots of the weather and the landscape.





Four diagrams from the animated cartoon showing changes in the earth's topography. Above is a cross section of a volcano, showing the "bubble of hot gummy magma" below, its vent and the cone of hardened rock which grew up around it. The other diagrams illustrate the process by which Niagara attained its horseshoe curve, the process by which an "over-thrust" creates a mountain range (with dotted lines indicating the original shape) and an imaginary super-stratospheric view of the progress of a dust storm across America.





Especially dramatic is the episode of Niagara Falls. First one is given a cross-cut of the peculiar rock formation which makes possible the existence of such a thing as a water fall of this size. The wall over which the water pours is made of strata of shale and limestone interspersed. The water attacks both, but the shale, being weaker, is worn away first, leaving out-jutting shelves which protect the shale and slow down the action until the shale finally leaves them unsupported. Then blocks of limestone unable to bear the weight of the water come crashing down into the seething and foamy pile of jumbled boulders below. By reconstruction Niagara is shown as it was in 1764, before the formation of the United States. In those days the falls were not a horseshoe in shape. They were more nearly a straight line. The action shows how this line was gradually eaten away and how its edges broke and great chunks fell at the foot of the wall and were washed away slowly down the river bed by the the force of the water and ice.

Another remarkable section of the movie is that devoted to the building of the mountains. It is shown that the stratum of surface rock that became mountains was once in part very much like the skin of an apple when it shrinks and dries, wrinkling the earth's surface as it cooled and hardened. Surface rock in this case is a slightly misleading term, for the skin referred to is of considerable thickness and most of it has become subterranean. Mountains were formed when this layer of wrinkled stone split, leaving sections of the huge folds jutting up from the surface. Even the hardened rock layer did considerable moving about during the formation of the earth's crust, though what forces caused it to do so are not known. At any rate it is clear that when a solid section pushed against another part that was not moving it caused a great ridge-like fold to crop up—the beginning of a mountain range. Sometimes these folds were pushed upwards and to one side to such an extent that the fold toppled over, usually becoming shattered in the process. In certain parts of the world such "over-thrusting" developed magnificent mountain systems. The Canadian and Northern Rocky Mountains were parts of one of these—the great Lewis Overthrust, a case where one section of the rock layer overlapped the other, creating great elevation. Vast attacks by glacier and erosion changed the folds, of course, but the stratification indicated to geologists how the surface had been wrinkled and thrust upward in the process that occurred earlier.

Another type of mountain, the volcano, is given considerable space in the film. It is shown that these are not, as was once thought, the chimneys of a great subterranean furnace of molten rock, but the surface outlet for great bubbles of gummy hot "magma," oozing upward. The movie reconstruction shows that these formations have been common in sections not generally considered volcanic. Mostly they solidified in the shape of caverns of igneous rock. In certain cases, however, they were so close to the surface that vents were suddenly formed, owing perhaps to shifting of the surface rock and the high pressure of hot gases below, which were augmented by water seeping in underground. This created an immense spout. The released gases carried upward molten rock that afterwards solidified into granite and other igneous rock. Chunks of it would harden around the vent until hurled upward again and fragments of ash-like pumice thrown into the air would fall back to create a volcanic cone. And this process on a large enough scale would create a mountain.

THIS may seem an over simplified explanation to those who are intimately familiar with volcanic phenomena, but in this, as in the case of other natural curiosities, the purpose of the movie is to make graphic rather than to give a dissertation of underlying theories. It might be added incidentally that there are other forms of volcanic activity than what has been described above. The typical cone consists largely of material cast up from the magma, but in some cases solid blocks of stone which are not of volcanic origin are caught in the upward rush and make up the hill around the vent. A hill formed largely of solid matter is obviously much steeper and of an entirely different character than one formed entirely of liquid lava, flowing off down a slope of 10 degrees. The volcano of Mauna Loa which caused such apprehension in Hawaii last December is of the latter type.

Also, there are frequent changes in the shape of any active volcanic cone. Vesuvius, for instance, is not the cone the Romans knew; that one was destroyed by subsequent eruptions—possibly by the one that buried Pompeii, and new cones have arisen within the old crater. . . . The movie gives a much clearer idea of how such changes occur, although it does not go into detail on the variations which are possible.

Thus, one after another, the phenomena which have made the earth look as it does are recreated by the magic of movie photography and the animated cartoon. That the final result is as convincing and realistic as the spectacle of a planetarium demonstration may be open to doubt, but the attraction is of the same sort and the show is already considered a boon to educators. It is intended that the film be made available to teachers in schools all over the country.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

DORCHESTER, N. B. CHIEF JUSTICE J. H. BARRY gazed down at the doll which had been placed before him. It was a big doll, as big as a baby, with plump cheeks and flaxen curls. As the Judge bent over it, its long-lashed, blue eyes stared amiably at the ceiling of the courtroom.

"It isn't alive, is it?" asked the Chief Justice.

"That," answered P. J. Hughes, Crown Prosecutor, "seems to have been one of its defects, My Lord."

It was a fairly fatal defect. Because of it, according to a theory already supported by one jury verdict, three persons had been slain, a fourth was facing a sentence of death, a fifth was charged with murder, and a sixth was now on trial on kidnaping charges. Mrs. May Bannister, fat, gross and 43, was before the court here, accused of having inspired the theft of a six-month-old child to replace the life-size doll in a fantastic imposture. Mrs. Bannister, the Crown contended, had used first the doll, then the child, in an effort to make two men believe she had recently had a baby and thus place them under "moral obligation" to give her money.

Mrs. Bannister's 19-year-old son, Arthur, had been condemned to death for the murder of the kidnaped infant's father, Philip Lake, whose common-law wife and baby son also lost their lives the night the child was stolen. Her older son, Daniel, was awaiting trial, charged with the same murder.

The crime in connection with which Mrs. Bannister was now in the prisoner's box, facing Judge and jury, took place one cold night last January at Pacific Junction, 11 miles from Moncton, principal railway center of New Brunswick. In a cabin there, a half mile from the nearest neighbor, lived Philip Lake, a backwoods trapper; Bertha Lake, and their two children, 21-month-old Jackie and six-month-old Betty Anne.

On the morning of January 6, Otto Blakney, a bachelor homesteader, set out for the Lake cabin to get some provisions. Emerging from the woods into the clearing of the Lake home, he was shocked to find the cabin reduced to smoking ruins. Worse shocks followed. Lying in the ashes of his home was the charred body of Lake. Search failed to disclose any others of the family, so Blakney hurried down a road towards a neighbor's house. About a quarter of a mile from the burned cabin he came on the scantily-clad, frozen body of little Jackie Lake. Forty feet farther on was the body of Bertha Lake. It, too, was frozen, and was nude except for a torn fragment of nightdress. But on the head there was the mark of a crushing blow. There was no sign of the other child, Betty.

THE horrified homesteader went on to the home of the neighbor, Omar Lutes, station agent for the Canadian National Railways, who lost no time in notifying Royal Canadian Mounted Police in Moncton. A detail of Mounties was soon at work on the case. The officers followed a trail of footsteps in the snow in woods near the Lake cabin. They asked questions of everybody in the neighborhood. They found a leather mitten in the snow. And presently they arrested Arthur Bannister, who had been seen near the Lake home the night it was burned.

Lake was buried with Bertha and Jackie. It was thought at that time that he had been burned to death. But in a day or so his body was exhumed and examined carefully. It was discovered then that a .22-caliber bullet was in his brain. There followed a three-day search through the deep snow of the countryside by fur-clad constables of the R. C. M. P. The search resulted in the finding, separately, of the barrel of a .22-caliber rifle and its battered stock.

So the police figured that this was about what had happened the night of January 5 at Pacific Junction: Someone had shot Lake, then set fire to his cabin to conceal the crime. Bertha Lake had snatched up her little son and run toward the station agent's house for help. Half-way there, she had been overtaken and slain, and her baby son had been left alone in the snow to freeze to death.

Meantime, the police arrested another Bannister—Daniel, 20, brother of Arthur. They locked up the boys' 15-year-old sister, Frances, as a material witness, and closely questioned a younger sister, Marie, and the mother, Mrs. May Bannister. The Bannisters lived on the Berry Mills road, about six miles from Moncton. Mrs. Bannister was separated from her husband, and her reputation was not very savory.

When Arthur realized the police had strong evidence against him, he admitted he had been at the Lake cabin the night of January 5, and that there had been trouble. He said Lake had become offensive toward his sister, Frances, after some drinking, and that he had struck the older man with a piece of stove wood. He said the oil lamp had been upset in the struggle.

Another element of mystery soon entered the case: What had become of the younger Lake baby, Betty? At first it had been supposed she had perished with her father in the burning cabin. Painstaking search of the ruins, however, failed to disclose her remains, nor could her body be found in the snow of the surrounding countryside. The disappearance of the child was as difficult to explain as the motive for the extinction of her family.

The Moncton city police found the solution to this part of the mystery. Learning that there was a baby in the Bannister home, they investigated and there found little Betty Lake. Mrs. Bannister denied that the child was Betty. She said it was her own baby, born two months before. She failed to convince the officers. They took both her and the baby to Moncton, and when the child had been identified to their satisfaction as the missing daughter of Philip Lake, charged the woman with kidnaping.

That still left the question: Why was Betty Lake in the Bannister home? Further investigation yielded an answer which also furnished a motive for the killings. It involved Mrs. Bannister's associations with men. One of these men, Milton Trites, a neighbor of the Bannisters, told police Mrs. Bannister had worked for him as a domestic, and had left his employ about November 1, saying she was going away to bear a child of which he was the father. The day after the Lake killings he said he had seen a baby at the Bannister home. Before that, according to information given the police, Mrs. Bannister had appeared on the streets of Moncton carrying a blanket-wrapped bundle which she pretended was her baby, but which was actually a large doll.

At preliminary hearings in which Mrs. Bannister and her two sons were committed for trial, the Crown unfolded its theory of the whole tragic business. It was that Mrs. Bannister, in order to keep Trites believing that she had borne him a child and thus obtain money from him, required a living baby, as the doll would not serve indefinitely for the deception; that the woman's two sons and daughter, Frances, kidnaped the Lake baby and that the two youths killed Lake and his wife in carrying out the abduction.

Arthur Bannister was the first one tried. Early last month his case was heard by a jury here, Chief Justice Barry presiding. His sister, Frances, was one of the chief witnesses against him. She testified that she, Arthur and Daniel went to the Lake cabin the evening of January 5, that Arthur brought the Lake baby outside and handed it to her, and that she ran away with it. She said Arthur went back in the cabin and soon she heard a noise that sounded like a shot.

Arthur was found guilty, but Justice Barry deferred pronouncement of the mandatory death sentence. The youth grinned when he heard the jury's verdict, and he jested as he was led back to his cell.

The next day Mrs. Bannister faced the court. She had lost the defiance which distinguished her attitude at the preliminary hearing, and hid her face in her handkerchief and wept when she was led to the prisoner's box. Even after her attorney, Murray Lambert, asked her to be quiet, she moaned and rocked on the bench. She interrupted her manifestations of distress long enough to murmur, "Not guilty," when the time came to plead. So began the first kidnaping trial in the history of New Brunswick.

EARLY in the proceedings the Crown produced a large doll which it contended the woman carried about in public before she acquired the Lake infant, and showed it to the Judge and jury. It was not, however, admitted in evidence. An officer had found it, according to testimony, in the Bannister home. Prosecutor Hughes also showed in court one of those contrivances which produce a "mama" cry in a doll, and said it had been removed by Mrs. Bannister from her doll.

Francis Bannister testified against her mother as she had against her brother, Arthur. She said she and her two brothers went to the Lake cabin to get the Lake baby. But she would not testify that her mother had directed the kidnaping.

When the prosecutor asked, "Did your mother ask where you were going? Did she ask you anything?" the girl answered, "No."

Another witness against Mrs. Ba nister was her former employer, Mil ton Trites, a secondhand deale Trites said she had told him she h borne a child of which he was th father. "But I did not believe," h said, "that I was wholly responsibl However, he admitted he had wante to call the baby Thyra Milton Trite He said Mrs. Bannister had made n "open attempt" to ask him fo money, but he had given her mone and provided food "for the whole Ba nister family." Under questioning b Prosecutor Hughes, he said $10 h had sent to her home was five week back pay. Trites failed to confirm th story about the doll. He denied Mr Bannister had tried to make him thi the doll was a baby—his baby.

IT WAS the Crown's contention th Mrs. Bannister had tried to hood wink into aiding her financially n only Trites, but also Albert Powell, freight clerk who did social servic work on the side. Powell, also, ga no support to the theory about th doll, saying he had never seen Mr Bannister with it. But he testifi that the woman had once threaten to shoot him on account of her youn er daughter, Marie, a girl of 13. H said Mrs. Bannister told him Mar was going to have a baby and she w going to hold him responsible for i support.

"But I stood my ground," he tes fied, "because I was an innocent ma Then she was sorry and said she h spoken too severely." Powell said h had gone to the Bannister home fr quently to hold "prayer meeting and "Sunday school service."

From another witness the Crow managed to elicit testimony tending give substance to the bizarre theo which caused the tragedy at Paci Junction, with the resulting prosec tions, to be called "the baby-doll m der-kidnap case." Leonard Hach testified that he saw Mrs. Bannister Christmas Eve carrying a large bl bundle and he asked her what was i it. "She told me," the witness co tinued, "that she had a baby. I thi I said I was surprised at her." Chris mas Eve was almost two weeks befo Betty Lake was kidnaped and her pa ents killed.

Hachey testified that on another o casion when he met Mrs. Bannister the street she asked him, "What

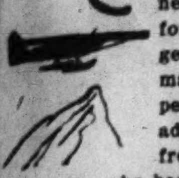
SKETCHES FROM LIFE

High Lights on Unusual Personalities

GEORGE DALZIEL
VLADIMIR GOLSCHMANN

The FIRST FLYING TRAPPER of the ARCTIC



EDMONTON, Alberta.

THERE are many men who have combated the northern wilderness with courage, fortitude and ingenuity. There are many who have experienced thrilling adventures in those frozen wastes, more than a few who have wrested tidy livings from the formidable region. In these particulars George C. F. Dalziel is not unique. But he does have a distinction all his own: He is the first flying trapper of the Arctic.

Piloting his own airplane, he flies far north to rich trapping territory along the Arctic Circle, and establishes headquarters. By plane he takes his traps out and sets them, by plane he visits his trap lines, and when the season is over he flies his accumulation of furs back to civilization.

Dalziel is only 27 years old, but he has spent more than 10 years in the wilds of the Yukon and Northwest Territories. Born in Winnipeg, he was living in Vancouver with his parents when the wanderlust seized him and carried him north into the Cassiar gold area near the British Columbia-Yukon border. There and in the Yukon the youth learned how to take care of himself in the wilderness. Once, equipped with a rifle, an ax and a blanket and supplied with a little flour and tea, he made a solitary march from the Yukon, across high mountain ranges, to Fort Simpson in the lower MacKenzie basin. Because of his ability to live off the land and his endurance, natives called him a "spirit man," and some thought he possessed supernatural powers and feared him.

On another lonely trip, through the wild Liard River country in the extreme northeastern part of British Columbia, Dalziel came to grips with nature in a struggle that came near being his last. He was traveling down the swift waters of the Liard, in country new to him, when his boat was carried over falls in Devil's Canyon and he was pitched into the swirling water. Half-drowned, he managed to struggle to the rocky bank. He had clung to his rifle, but the rest of his outfit was swept away. Almost immediately there came a spell of severe cold to pile up the odds against a man alone in the wilderness without food supplies or blankets.

Dalziel met the challenge by killing two bears. He skinned them and ate some of the meat. Then he wrapped himself in the skins and went to sleep under a fall of dead spruce. The next day he proceeded on his way. Through the rest of the winter he struggled on, through Arctic storms and temperatures as low as 70 below zero, living on bear meat and whatever other game he could kill, sleeping under the bear skins in all sorts of natural shelters. Early in the spring he trudged into the isolated outpost of Fort Liard, winner in an epic fight with the North.

A year ago Dalziel began flying for furs. But he was only a passenger then. Captain W. R. May of the Canadian Airways piloted the plane that took Dalziel and his trapping equipment into the Nahanni Mountain country west of Fort Norman early last spring. In July Captain May flew back into the wilds and brought the trapper and his bales of furs to Edmonton. On those trips in and out Dalziel became deeply impressed with the time-saving possibilities of the airplane for a trapper. In the plane he covered distances in a few hours that would have taken weeks of canoe travel. When he sold his furs at the Edmonton market, he took the money and headed for the airport here. Before long he had learned to fly and obtained his pilot's license. Then he bought a small cabin plane.

IN HIS new machine the new pilot set out to fly to Vancouver, on the other side of the Canadian Rockies, to visit his parents. Adventure, as usual, accompanied him. Thousands of feet in the air, he was stricken with acute appendicitis. Gritting his teeth against the pain, he kept control of the ship until he could make a landing at the Calgary airport. From the airport office he was rushed to a hospital, an emergency operation was performed, and a few weeks later he was in the air again.

Last fall Dalziel went trapping in his own plane. At Edmonton he picked up George Taylor, a young airplane mechanic, flew to Fort Simpson, nearly 1000 miles away, and there collected trapping equipment, food and a supply of gasoline. The plane was fitted with pontoons, and they took off from the river in front of the little town for the wilds to the north. It was late in September.

Some 200 miles north of Fort Simpson the plane soared above an unmapped wilderness, dotted with hundreds of small lakes. The young trappers selected one of the lakes, landed and established headquarters there. They named it Flat Lake. There followed busy days in which they flew out from the base camp to set their traps, placing some as much as 100 miles away. They laid out 500 miles of trap lines. Before the winter freeze-up, they carried a canoe on the pontoons to help in making the round of the traps. They would land on a lake, then paddle in the canoe to the various traps on that lake.

After winter set in, with sweeping blizzards, skis were substituted for the pontoons, and when Dalziel and Taylor made their rounds they hopped from place to place in the plane, and on snowshoes visited the traps in the vicinity of each landing place.

In October another trapper brought word that a band of Indians was starving some distance to the west. Game was plentiful in the Flat Lake territory, so Dalziel killed several moose, loaded the fresh meat in his plane and flew it to the Indian encampment.

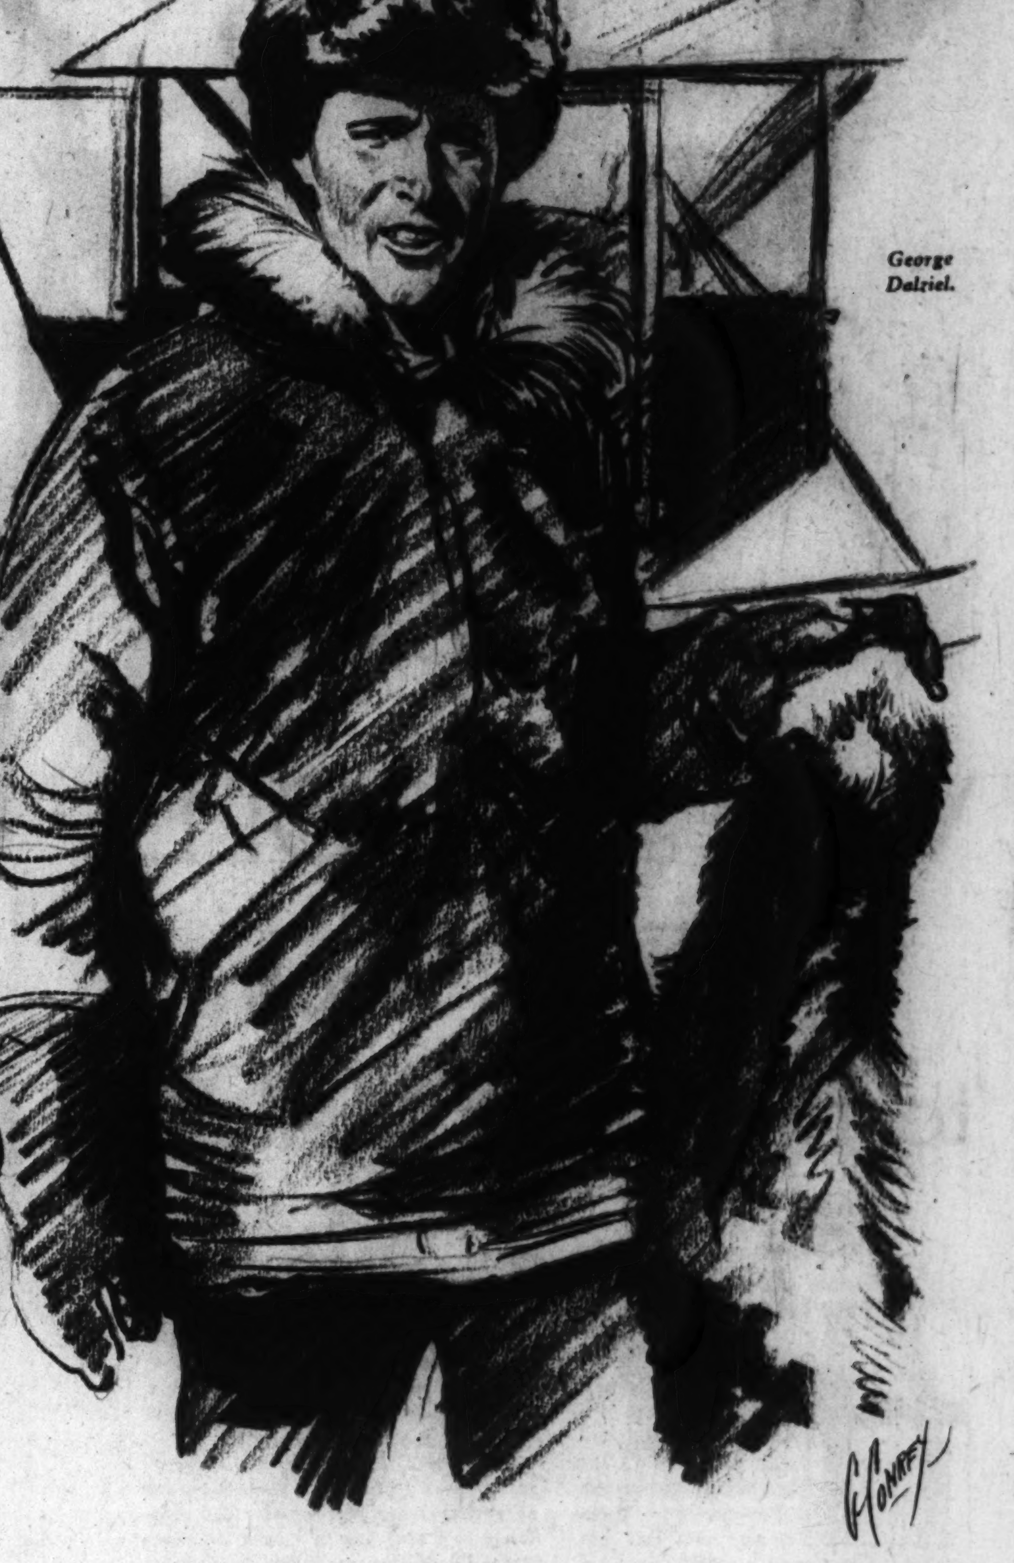
The virgin trapping region yielded rich returns. When the trappers were ready to return to civilization they had a valuable load of marten, mink, otter, silver fox and wolverine pelts to take back. The weather was bitterly cold when they started for Edmonton. There was a hazardous landing on thin ice at Fort Simpson and the next day a forced landing, due to engine trouble, in a small clearing near Fort Smith; a wing was damaged on that occasion when the plane ran among trees. But after Dalziel had set the ship's skis down on the snow-blanketed field at Edmonton and taxied up to a hangar, and someone asked, "Any trouble, Dal?" the flying trapper answered, "No, not much. Had to tinker with the engine a couple of times." The load of furs brought $4000.

Ten days later Dalzel was flying north again, this time as a trader, carrying supplies of various kinds to isolated outposts. Through the winter, with the temperature sometimes 50 or 60 degrees below zero, he carried on commercial air freighting to northern posts. This spring he is back on the edge of the Arctic Circle, flying his trap lines.

Before leaving, he expressed himself enthusiastically on the advantages of air travel in his business. "With my plane," he said, "I can fly anywhere in the north country where furs are plentiful. I can fly into places where it would be impossible to go by water routes or dog team. The whole north country is my trapping area from now on."

His daring has caused people to call Dalziel the new "Mad Trapper of the Arctic." The original "Mad Trapper" had to be hunted down and killed by police. Dalziel resembles him only in liking to travel the wilderness alone. He is not mad—merely adventurous. Liked by other pilots and trappers, he is a rather reserved young man, who seems to find his principal pleasure in pitting himself against the power of nature.

BEN STOLL.



George Dalziel.

The GENTLEMAN with the BATON

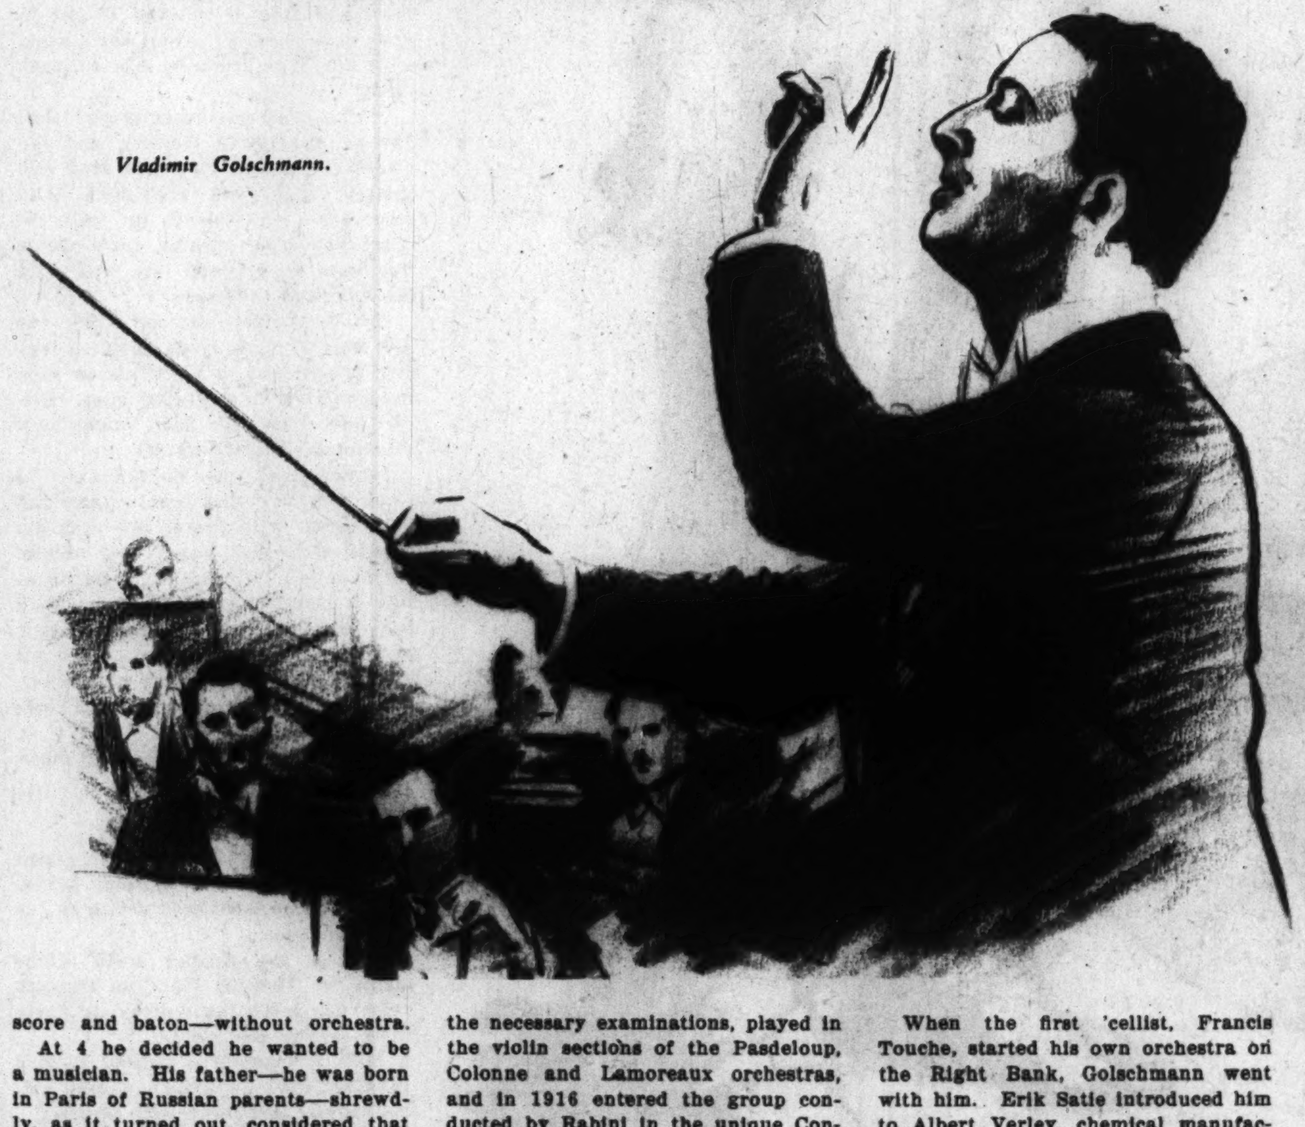
SO FAR as known, Vladimir Golschmann has not yet written a concerto for straight-eight and string orchestra. Give him time; he's only 42. Music and machines are his passion: music preferably urbane and picturesque and evocative; machines preferably sleek and swift and without a rear seat, which he considers most ungraceful surplusage.

Of the two interests, the machine is probably the most curious and individual; music certainly the most important to the hundreds of St. Louisans who have followed their Symphony Orchestra since Piedmont was a kitten. Piedmont, the Odeon cat of years ago, a bit of a critic, too, made the rounds of the building every morning the moment the doors were open and frequently honored the box (left center) of a patron at a concert.

Piedmont is gone now, like the Odeon itself. Today's mascot, to keep pace with the enlarged quarters of the orchestra, its multiplied audience and its own advancing excellence, would have to take the proportions of a tiger, or at least a full-grown leopard. And there is a tendency in St. Louis to attribute all this—in years when great orchestras the world over have suffered keenly—not only to a Women's Committee extraordinary, a young and earnest Symphony Society president and the lively support of young people generally, but also to an eager, growing and acutely perceptive conductor.

Golschmann came to St. Louis as guest conductor for four concerts. That was four years ago. And when he brought the fifty-sixth season to a gala conclusion a week ago, he had a contract to maintain his place on the podium in St. Louis through the season of 1936-37.

It's a long way back to the jittery moment when Golschmann, a youngster in a Paris orchestra of 17 musicians, got his first chance. It occurred when the regular conductor, Rabini, failed to show up. After the initial chill, the young violinist found he could handle the emergency function with surprising ease. Before he was 12 he had begun practicing with score and baton—without orchestra.



Vladimir Golschmann.

At 4 he decided he wanted to be a musician. His father—he was born in Paris of Russian parents—shrewdly, as it turned out, considered that possible. In six months Vladimir was studying piano; in three years, the violin. At 11 he played in concerts at L'Eglise de Sorbonne, and, without ever expecting his imaginary orchestra to become reality, began private experiments with baton.

In four years, after groundwork in solfege, a vocal method that induces a near-instinctive sense of pitch and harmony, piano study at the Schola Cantorum and specialized private instruction, he decided he was going to become a conductor. Somehow, one may add. And the best way, he was advised, was through actual playing as a member of an orchestra. So he took the necessary examinations, played in the violin sections of the Pasdeloup, Colonne and Lamoreaux orchestras, and in 1916 entered the group conducted by Rabini in the unique Concerts Rouges.

The hall, in the Rue de Tournon, was limited; the audience informal, given to cigarettes and strolling. Vocal numbers with piano were especially welcome to the orchestra, for they allowed a hurried but satisfying turn at poker in the dressing rooms. Jacques Thibaud was concertmaster, and then Capet of the Capet Quartette; Jose Iturbi was pianist. The little orchestra undertook a complete symphonic repertory; free and easy though it was about non-essentials, music was essential, and Golschmann was responsible for half its violin section, two violins.

When the first 'cellist, Francis Touche, started his own orchestra on the Right Bank, Golschmann went with him. Erik Satie introduced him to Albert Verley, chemical manufacturer and musical amateur, one of whose compositions was presented by Conductor Golschmann and the St. Louis orchestra this past season. Even then Golschmann had developed a faculty for sight reduction of orchestral scores, and Verley was looking for a pianist with just that faculty. He thought Golschmann ought to be a conductor.

"Well," said Golschmann, "I have a baton—"

"And I have 25,000 francs," said Verley. "You can have an orchestra."

But, in the midst of the war, it was difficult to assemble an organization of competent musicians, even with 25,000 francs. Golschmann made his first trip to the United States in 1918 as a member of the Conservatoire orchestra. When he returned to France in 1919, Verley still had the idea and the francs. Hence the first series of Concerts Golschmann, 10 performances in the Salle des Agricultures, each a success beyond expectations.

The Groupe des Six—Honegger, Milhaud, Duroy, Auric, Poulenc and Taillefer—was just becoming a center of furious debate. Under the impression that many of the debaters didn't know what they were talking about, the Six planned to show their wares in a spectacular concert. The selected conductor was unable to fill the engagement. Arthur Honegger knew of Golschmann's interest in modern music, and Golschmann was engaged. It was a grand occasion. Golschmann was at once identified with the new movement. He was brought into contact with Igor Stravinsky, and through him invited to conduct the Ballet Russe in the following year. In that year, also, the Concerts Golschmann were continued (under sponsorship of M. Verley, who had more francs) with the presentation of 17 original works and a contest which led to the composition of Honegger's Pastorale d'Ete.

At 25, Golschmann was indeed a conductor—with orchestra.

He returned to the United States in 1925 to conduct the Swedish Ballet. Invited to lead the New York Symphony at an extra concert, he was promptly engaged for six concerts in the following year. There were other engagements in Glasgow, Oslo, Lisbon, Bilbao, Bordeaux, Madrid, and then—when, for the third such happy chance in his career, another conductor failed to come—his first engagement in St. Louis.

Golschmann abhors friction, dreads hurting people, with that rare form of sensitivity which extends to the feelings of others. In his four years in St. Louis, changes in personnel have been inevitable, but he fills the role of executioner with uncommon discomfort. His friendliness—for it is an active quality rather than mere inert patience—is not inexhaustible. There was the rehearsal when after many-too-many repetitions of an original composition the composer ventured, "At that point the 'cellos answer the horns."

"In music we do not have questions and answers," said Golschmann. "We have forte, mezzo forte and piano. Now, what will you have?"

At rehearsals with Eugene List in the Shostakowitch concerto last season, the boyish pianist's mother, out in front, complained at one point that the orchestra smothered the piano.

"Your mother," said Golschmann equably, turning to List, "says that the orchestra is playing too loud. But Shostakowitch says 'fortissimo.' What do you say?"

HE LIKES America and Americans. He is easy to approach, hard to disconcert—fortunately. In "casual and charming but frequently trying" Spain he was informed in an intermission, with the Choral Symphony to follow, that the baritone couldn't sing that day; he'd have to find another. In Lisbon a member of the orchestra said he wouldn't be able to attend the general rehearsal.

"No—why not?" asked Golschmann.

"Because I have something to do."

"I see," responded Golschmann, disarmingly. "Will you be able to come for the concert?"

On the St. Louis Symphony's recent extended tour, a personage welcomed it in a Southern town with an enthusiasm that warmed Golschmann's heart. He murmured an appropriately modest response, wondered why this flattering reception?

"At last," beamed his host, "we'll get to hear the 'St. Louis Blues' as it ought to be played!"

In spite of that, Golschmann cites the tour as further evidence for his contention that music education in the United States has gone far beyond Europe, at least in wide dissemination. Everywhere, he says, he found student orchestras, music clubs and similar signs of swarming musical life. Maybe, he stipulates, there's even too much, in the way of over-training children with no special gift. Perhaps it would be best to train the average fundamentally in solfege, and leave advanced instrumental training to those above average.

Musical standards are so high in this country that youngsters are

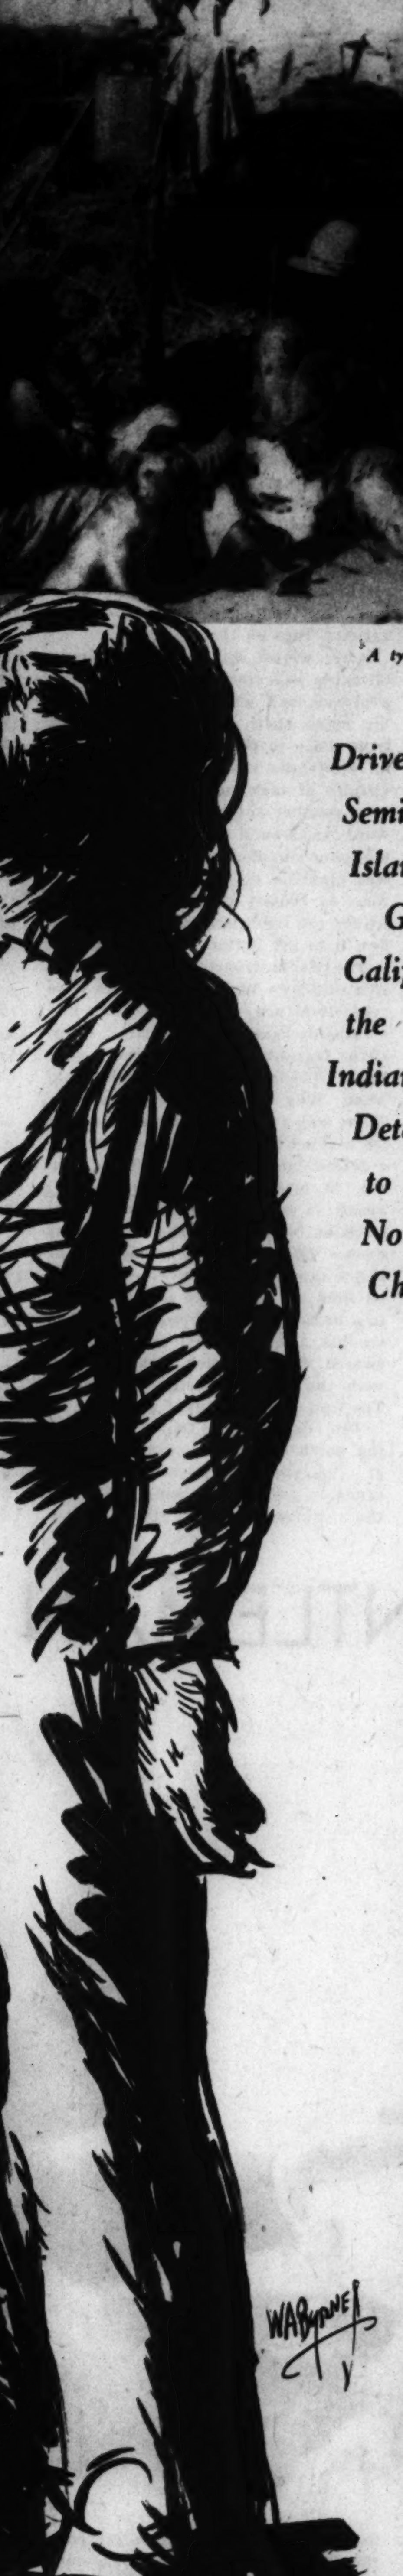
Why a WHOLE TRIBE is Sworn to RACE SUICIDE

Driven to a Semi-Tropical Island in the Gulf of California, the Seri Indians Have Determined to Have No More Children.



Seri father making a cradle from a piece of driftwood.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

SAN DIEGO, California.

HERE in 1936 the "curse of the Caucasians" has driven a tribe of North American people into one of the strangest suicide pacts in all the history of the world.

Nearly 100 women and men—all that remain of the once powerful Seri Indians of the Southwest—periodically are dancing in moonlight around the scalp of a white man hanging on a post, and swearing thereby that they will beget no more children.

The Seri live on semi-tropical Tiburon Island, about 35 miles long and 15 wide, in the Gulf of California. Once a proud, primitive tribe of warriors and hunters, they were literally driven to their sea haven by the advances of white men. But the island proved not haven enough; the whites want it, too, and soon they will have it.

Complete extermination now is courted by the Seri, to make a strangely tragic chapter in the world's racial history. With them it is a measure of desperation, a final, terrible protest against the relentless progress of a lighter-skinned people. They do not expect their protest to do them any good.

Their intention, rather, is to end their suffering and humiliation as soon as possible, especially to protect any more hapless children from having to bear what they have borne.

"There is one step which the whites cannot prevent us from taking," mumbles Juan Thomas. "It is our last step.

"For 300 years we have retreated before the whites. We have nowhere else to move to, now.

Thomas, or Tomas, is the wrinkled chieftain of the Seri. He is wise with the experience of years, saddened with the fate that has hounded his people and continues to hound them.

It is Juan who leads his tribesmen in the pact of racial suicide.

Somebody, from somewhere, has preserved a scalp from a white man. It obviously dates back several years, because there has been no warfare of late, no open enmity between the two races. But this remaining scalp is treasured as a symbol of a past glory.

When Juan issues the call, the great men of the tribe assemble. It is a pitiable group—children, clinging to memories—but they obey the call. Scantily clad, but brilliant with the body paint that means everything to them and nothing to outsiders, the Seri begin their weird, mystic rites in the night.

There are chants that no other Indian knows, chants that no white man can ever understand or imitate.

There are dance motions and rhythms vaguely suggestive of the Hopi Snake Dancers, who live hundreds of miles to the northward, and who likewise have known the pressure of white men's cavalcades.

But the Seri's dance is a wilder ritual. It has not the reverence of the Hopis (who dance as a religion), but shows a defiance that, of late, is a mockery and a sham. It is a savage, stirring ceremony withal.

Men carry their bows and arrows, and appear to imagine that they are preparing again for a sally into war. There is a chanting of voices, a throbbing of tomtoms, a rattling of pebbles in dried gourds, all in a savage rhythm.

When the night dance is done, the pledge is made anew—"We will have no more children."

It is their sacred plan, now, to prevent all births on Tiburon, so that the entire Seri population shall disappear. If a few young people disobey the rule or break the promise, they will be banished to the mainland of Mexico. There, more surely than if they stayed on Tiburon, the white race will "swallow" them. Seri babies may be born there, but within a generation or two they will mingle with the Latins, and soon the Seri as a tribe will be unknown.

Juan Tomas, chieftain of the Seris.

Most of the Seri are beyond 30 years of age already, and that is well past middle age, for Indians. It is almost old age for the Seri, because longevity is not a rule there now. White man with his "civilization" has brought strange new diseases, too.

Not many white men have ever seen the Seri, because of their isolated location, but a few earnest students have gone in. Tales of the dangers encountered there are but tales, for the Seri are hospitable, such as they are—squalid and sad.

E. D. Newcomer, who has lived with many tribes and families of Indians, learning their language, their customs, their histories, and photographing them, has recently made an intimate study of the vanishing Seri.

"The suicide pact is fantastic to consider," says Newcomer, "but when you know their feelings you can hardly blame them. It is one of the most tragic bits of racial history I have ever known.

"The Seri once were a fierce, proud people. When Spaniards came into the Southwest, soon after Columbus sailed, they found many Indian tribes that are virtually unknown now. In what is now Sonora, Mexico, they encountered the Seri.

"Three centuries or so ago, the Seri would have scoffed at the thought of giving away before the white or any other race. But it was inevitable that they should lose. As far back as history goes, the lighter-skinned people have marched onward—usually westward—conquering the dark-skinned.

"We have seen it in our own United States Indians. Right or wrong, our Latin and Saxon conquerors have braved their tomahawks and arrows, and defeated them.

"The Seri have found the same fate in store. White men want land, gold, anything that is of commercial value. They will stop at nothing to get it. They have pushed the Seri back, back, until there is nowhere else to push them.

"On a nominal 'reservation,' they haven't enough to live on, and nowhere else to go for more food and shelter. Tiburon is very limited as to resources. An island, its main resource is fishing—fishing, for a people that once were inland folk, skilled in the hunt and the chase."

But Newcomer also says that the Seri needn't have made their strange suicide pact, except for whatever spiritual comfort it may give them. Disease and starvation soon would have exterminated them anyway.

In Seri land, you do not arise at dawn and have your orange juice and your cereal with cream and your delicious eggs with bacon and waffles. At noon you do not have roast duckling or prime rib of beef au jus, with side dishes of vegetables, and a dessert of apple pie. And at night you do not stuff in meats and fruits and vegetables and sweets and milk and wines and teas and coffees.

On Tiburon Island, the daily menu for Monday is this:

Breakfast—Raw fish.
Lunch—Raw fish.
Dinner—Raw fish. Possibly varied with some dirty unwholesome grease from fish that have been drying in the open sunshine.

That is the Monday menu. The menu for Tuesday right on through every day including Sunday, is likely to be exactly the same.

Rare and precious variety is bird eggs, sea fowl, an occasional land animal luckily shot down with arrows.

Never is any of the food cooked, for cooked food is distasteful to them. Never is any appreciable quantity stored against the white man's proverbial "rainy day." If there is no food on, say, Thursday, then the family just waits until Friday to eat. Fortunately the warm waters of the great California gulf abound in fish.

"Another consideration," says Newcomer, "is the fact that the isolation of the Seri has of course meant inbreeding. Physical denegeration is inevitable.

"Poor food and inadequate food has taken its toll. Eye diseases, intestinal diseases, and lung diseases, are adding to the losses and misery.

"Of course you must not regard the island as in the grip of a virulent epidemic. It is a slow process. But most social diseases are slow, and all the more dangerous therefor.

"In recent years the wiser members of the tribe have seen the inevitability of their passing. That I suppose accounts for the suicide pact. They just didn't want to have more babies to have to go through suffering, and have so little in life that is good. I cannot help but respect them for it, tragic as the whole thing is."

The Mexican Government has done what it can to aid the Seri, but there is not much to be done. The Indians are crushed, spiritually as well as mentally and physically. Of course there are exceptions among individuals, but they are the more conspicuous because of their rarity.

MANY of the younger ones do not realize the seriousness of the situation as yet. "Many," however, is a relative term, since the entire tribe numbers less than 100. The exact population was given as 83 a short time ago. Unless a miracle saves them, they will all be gone in another 50 years, possibly within 25, the ethnologists say.

Influence of the white people is shown in some of the Seri customs, especially in dress. Plain dresses are worn by the women, and are made of cloth from Mexico. Old shirts, old sombreros, old trousers, are worn by some of the men. Younger men and children are likely to be seen wearing nothing but a loin cloth or "G-string," sometimes not even that.

As in Mexico, burdens are carried on the heads of the women. Fishing is done in peculiar log dugouts or canoes, fashioned rather crudely, but surprisingly easy to handle, even so.

On the whole, if the Seri should all vanish tomorrow, the total value of their estate would be negligible, save possibly for the land. Their personal possessions are interesting, but intrinsically not worth much. Their houses, made of grass and limbs thatched much like that of some other Indians, are likewise interesting but worthless to white men.

"But white man wants our island," the tribal leaders moan. "They will get it, whether we strive or not. That's why we dance the dance of death. We heap our curses on a white scalp, sometimes on a white man's skull, but it does no good. Our own gods have deserted us, and the white man's gods are in control."

RENTAL LIBRARY' of PICTURES by St. Louis Artists

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

WITH gratifying disregard for one of the most whiskery of popular traditions.— the well-known impracticality of the artist— the St. Louis Artists' Guild has appropriated the rental library idea to a scheme calculated to provide local painters with an expanded yet intimate audience and to give local home-makers the use of nearly a dozen varied art works for something like the price of one night out, with cover charge.

The Rental Library of Pictures is just getting under way with an exhibition at the organization's galleries, 812 Union boulevard, which will continue until May 4. Since virtually all the working members of the guild are participating, the show represents essentially every current local trend.

From the works shown, subscribers may select one canvas a month for eight months for a total fee of $10. If one should find it difficult to part with a selection at the end of the 30 days, provision has been made to allow him to keep it for a second month. And if he then finds it impossible to give up, the artist is not expected to be exactly deaf to suggestions about permanent ownership.

On the back of each picture is a detachable card, with a short biography of the artist and information on the particular work, all to further the main object of getting acquainted. And in order to prevent cumbersome growth of the new audience, it has been limited, for the initial period, to 100 subscribers.

Advantages of the scheme are so obvious as to make discussion of them or even enumeration almost superfluous. In the first place, persons who could not previously go in extensively for original pictures are now enabled not merely to have an unsatisfying once-over at an art exhibition, but to take their favorites home and really get the feel of them. By the same token, the artist gets, if hardly a larger audience, certainly one more intimate and direct, with freedom from any superficial requirement of catching the eye of gallery-goers. For that audience, pictures need not shout for attention.

Another sort of subscriber is spared the perennial "but how" of the prospective buyer—"but how will it look in my home?" He can see exactly "how," and he can shop around among the rental pictures with eight selections to determine precisely what he wants and where it can best be hung on his own walls.

The range of possible selection goes beyond such requirements, though there is attention to such practical details as size. Oils are 12 by 16 inches to 24 by 30; water colors and pastels from six by nine to 20 by 24. Of more essential importance, the sponsors believe, only those pictures—or batiks—were accepted which represent the best style of the participating artists and their most definitely individual contribution to contemporary tendencies. Likewise in the interest of giving the subscribers a comprehensive view, about one-third of the works included are exhibition type, while two-thirds are designed primarily for the home.

"It is important to the artist that his work is not merely offered, but received, welcomed with understanding," says Peter Mariner of the Artists' Guild. "The best feeling an artist can have is to be sure the work in which he has invested unusual and individual talent is known to those for whom it was intended. A created work is then meaningful. The artist is no longer alone, blindly believing in himself; his personal convictions are substantiated by an appreciative public.

"The library encourages this closer relationship between the public and the artist. And the artist needs it. Only when it is successfully established may his full capacities as an artist find most complete expression."

A Canadian BABY HOAX and its TRAIL of TRIPLE MURDER

you think of my baby?"

The jury received the case at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. In the midst of its deliberations it sent back to Chief Justice Barry for additional instruction. That night it returned its verdict. Mrs. Bannister was acquitted of two charges—of forcibly seizing the child and of unlawfully taking the child with intent to deprive its parents—but found guilty of harboring the infant with intent to assist the kidnaper. Passing of sentence—the maximum under such a conviction is three years and a half—was deferred.

Then the other Bannister youth, Daniel, was put on trial. Again the story of grim tragedy, sordid intrigue and shameless deception was unfolded before a jury. And again the verdict was guilty. Daniel, it was charged, had participated in the murderous raid on the Lake cabin, and afterward had lost a, homemade knife in his flight. The knife had been found and was exhibited in court.

In the trials of the two youths virtually no evidence was offered by the defense, which apparently regarded as useless any attempt to disprove the prosecution's version of the kidnaping and murder. Murray Lambert, counsel for all three of the accused Bannisters, did, however, try to minimise the boys' responsibility in addresses to the juries. He said both Arthur and Daniel were mentally subnormal. In the case of Daniel, the jury evidently felt that the death penalty was too severe, for, although finding him guilty of the murder of Lake, it recommended mercy.

In the case of Mrs. Bannister, also, there was little testimony for the defense, Lambert seemingly relying principally on a lack of Crown evidence to prove the more serious charges. Frances was the main witness against her mother, and she refused to testify that Mrs. Bannister concocted the plot to kidnap the Lake baby or even knew of it.

When the third trial had been finished, Chief Justice Barry pronounced the three sentences. It was a difficult task for him, a severe strain on his composure. He is 77 years old and about to retire, and in all his years on the bench he never before had had to sentence a person to death. But when the stolid Bannister brothers stood in the dock before him in the final act of this court drama, the jurist resolutely sentenced them to be hanged June 20.

There is a possibility that they will escape that fate. An appeal has been filed on behalf of Arthur, and the Judge said that the jury's recommendation for mercy for Daniel would be referred to the Governor-General in Council.

Mrs. Bannister was ordered to prison for three years and a half. Justice Barry told her she was fortunate in not having been found guilty of a more serious charge than that of harboring the kidnaped infant.

Whether Frances, the Crown's star witness against her mother and brothers, will be tried for kidnaping had not been announced at the time of the sentencing. She was still in the hands of the police. Her sister, Marie, was at liberty—the only one of that family group so situated.

The orphaned Betty Lake was still a ward of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, but it was expected that a satisfactory home would soon be found for her. No one seems much concerned about the fate of the cherubic-looking doll with which started, provincial authorities insisted, the deadly New Brunswick baby hoax.

The MUSEUM DIRECTORS SAY IT'S ART

bird, it is nevertheless pleasing to look at and highly ornamental."

Fortunately for the Modern Museum in the present case, the tariff laws provide no such annoying technical trap for paintings. Pablo Picasso had submitted a few which would stump the understanding of the most enthusiastic art enthusiast. "Bather by the Sea," to the casual observer, looks like a cubist conception of a Ku Klux Klansman giving a brother the high sign; "The Painter and His Model" is scarcely more intelligible. Even more outlandish is "Amorous Procession," by Francis Picabia, of Paris, which resembles a patent lawyer's drawing of a mechanical invention.

It is plain that if you go in for abstract art, the correct thing to do is to wait until the artist explains his work first. Then you render a proper appreciation.

Proponents of the form admit they are pretty much at a loss to tell just where they are going. They agree only that imitation of nature's outward appearance is mere slavery.

Alfred H. Barr Jr., director of the museum, gives this explanation: "Sometimes in the history of art it is possible to describe a period or a generation of artists as having been obsessed by a particular problem.

"The artists of the early fifteenth century, for instance, were moved by a passion for imitating nature. In the early twentieth century the dominant interest was almost exactly opposite. The pictorial conquest of the external visual world had been completed and refined many times and in different ways during the previous half-millenium.

"The more adventurous and original artists had grown bored with painting facts. By a common and powerful impulse they were driven to abandon the imitation of natural appearance.

"'Abstract' is the term most frequently used to describe the more extreme effects of this impulse away from nature. Pure abstractions are those in which the artist makes a composition of abstract elements such as geometrical or amorphous shapes. Near-abstractions are compositions in which the artist, starting with natural forms, transforms them into abstract, or nearly abstract, forms. He approaches an abstract goal, but does not quite reach it. . . . Abstract art today needs no defense. It has become one of the many ways to paint or carve or model. But it is not yet a kind of art which people like without some study and some sacrifice of prejudice."

Anyway, the museum is going to ask Congress to amend the customs regulations so that qualified artists, not customs inspectors, may pass on what is art and what is not.

likely to find a musical career tough sledding, he believes. So, he adds, a young man of judgment will not set out to become a second Heifitz; if he's clever, he'll take up the double bass—or the oboe, for competent wood-wind players are hard to find.

And he attributes those high standards in large measure to American musical criticism; not, true enough, to its quality, but to its quantity. Criticism here is practiced so widely—however loosely—that, he says, it does spread the idea that there's a difference between tackling a slow movement too slow or too fast or just right; and does lead, however haphazardly, to a critical viewpoint among audiences and an ultimate sifting among musicians.

Every American, he points out, knows who Toscanini is, and more than that, knows he's a person of importance. Musicians here are honored, he says; in Europe, just a part of the scenery so far as the man in the street is concerned. Hence, when he has to write his occupation on a Paris register, he always hesitates a moment before putting down "chef d'orchestre;" wonders if he oughtn't to call himself a grocer, a retired dealer in silks—or, with some warrant, something like automotive connoisseur.

Automobile shows are his weakness. He has the incorrigible's phobia against anything closed or anyhow not convertible; the incorrigible's sense of inherent awkwardness in sedan or even phaeton. Once when a musician with a similar weakness—Wiener of the Wiener-Doucet piano team—was in St. Louis, they took a half-day off for a spree in the Pierce-Arrow showrooms.

"Now this," said Wiener, after prolonged obeisance before a town car, "is something to stand and look at."

"What," asked Golschmann, "do you think we've been doing?"

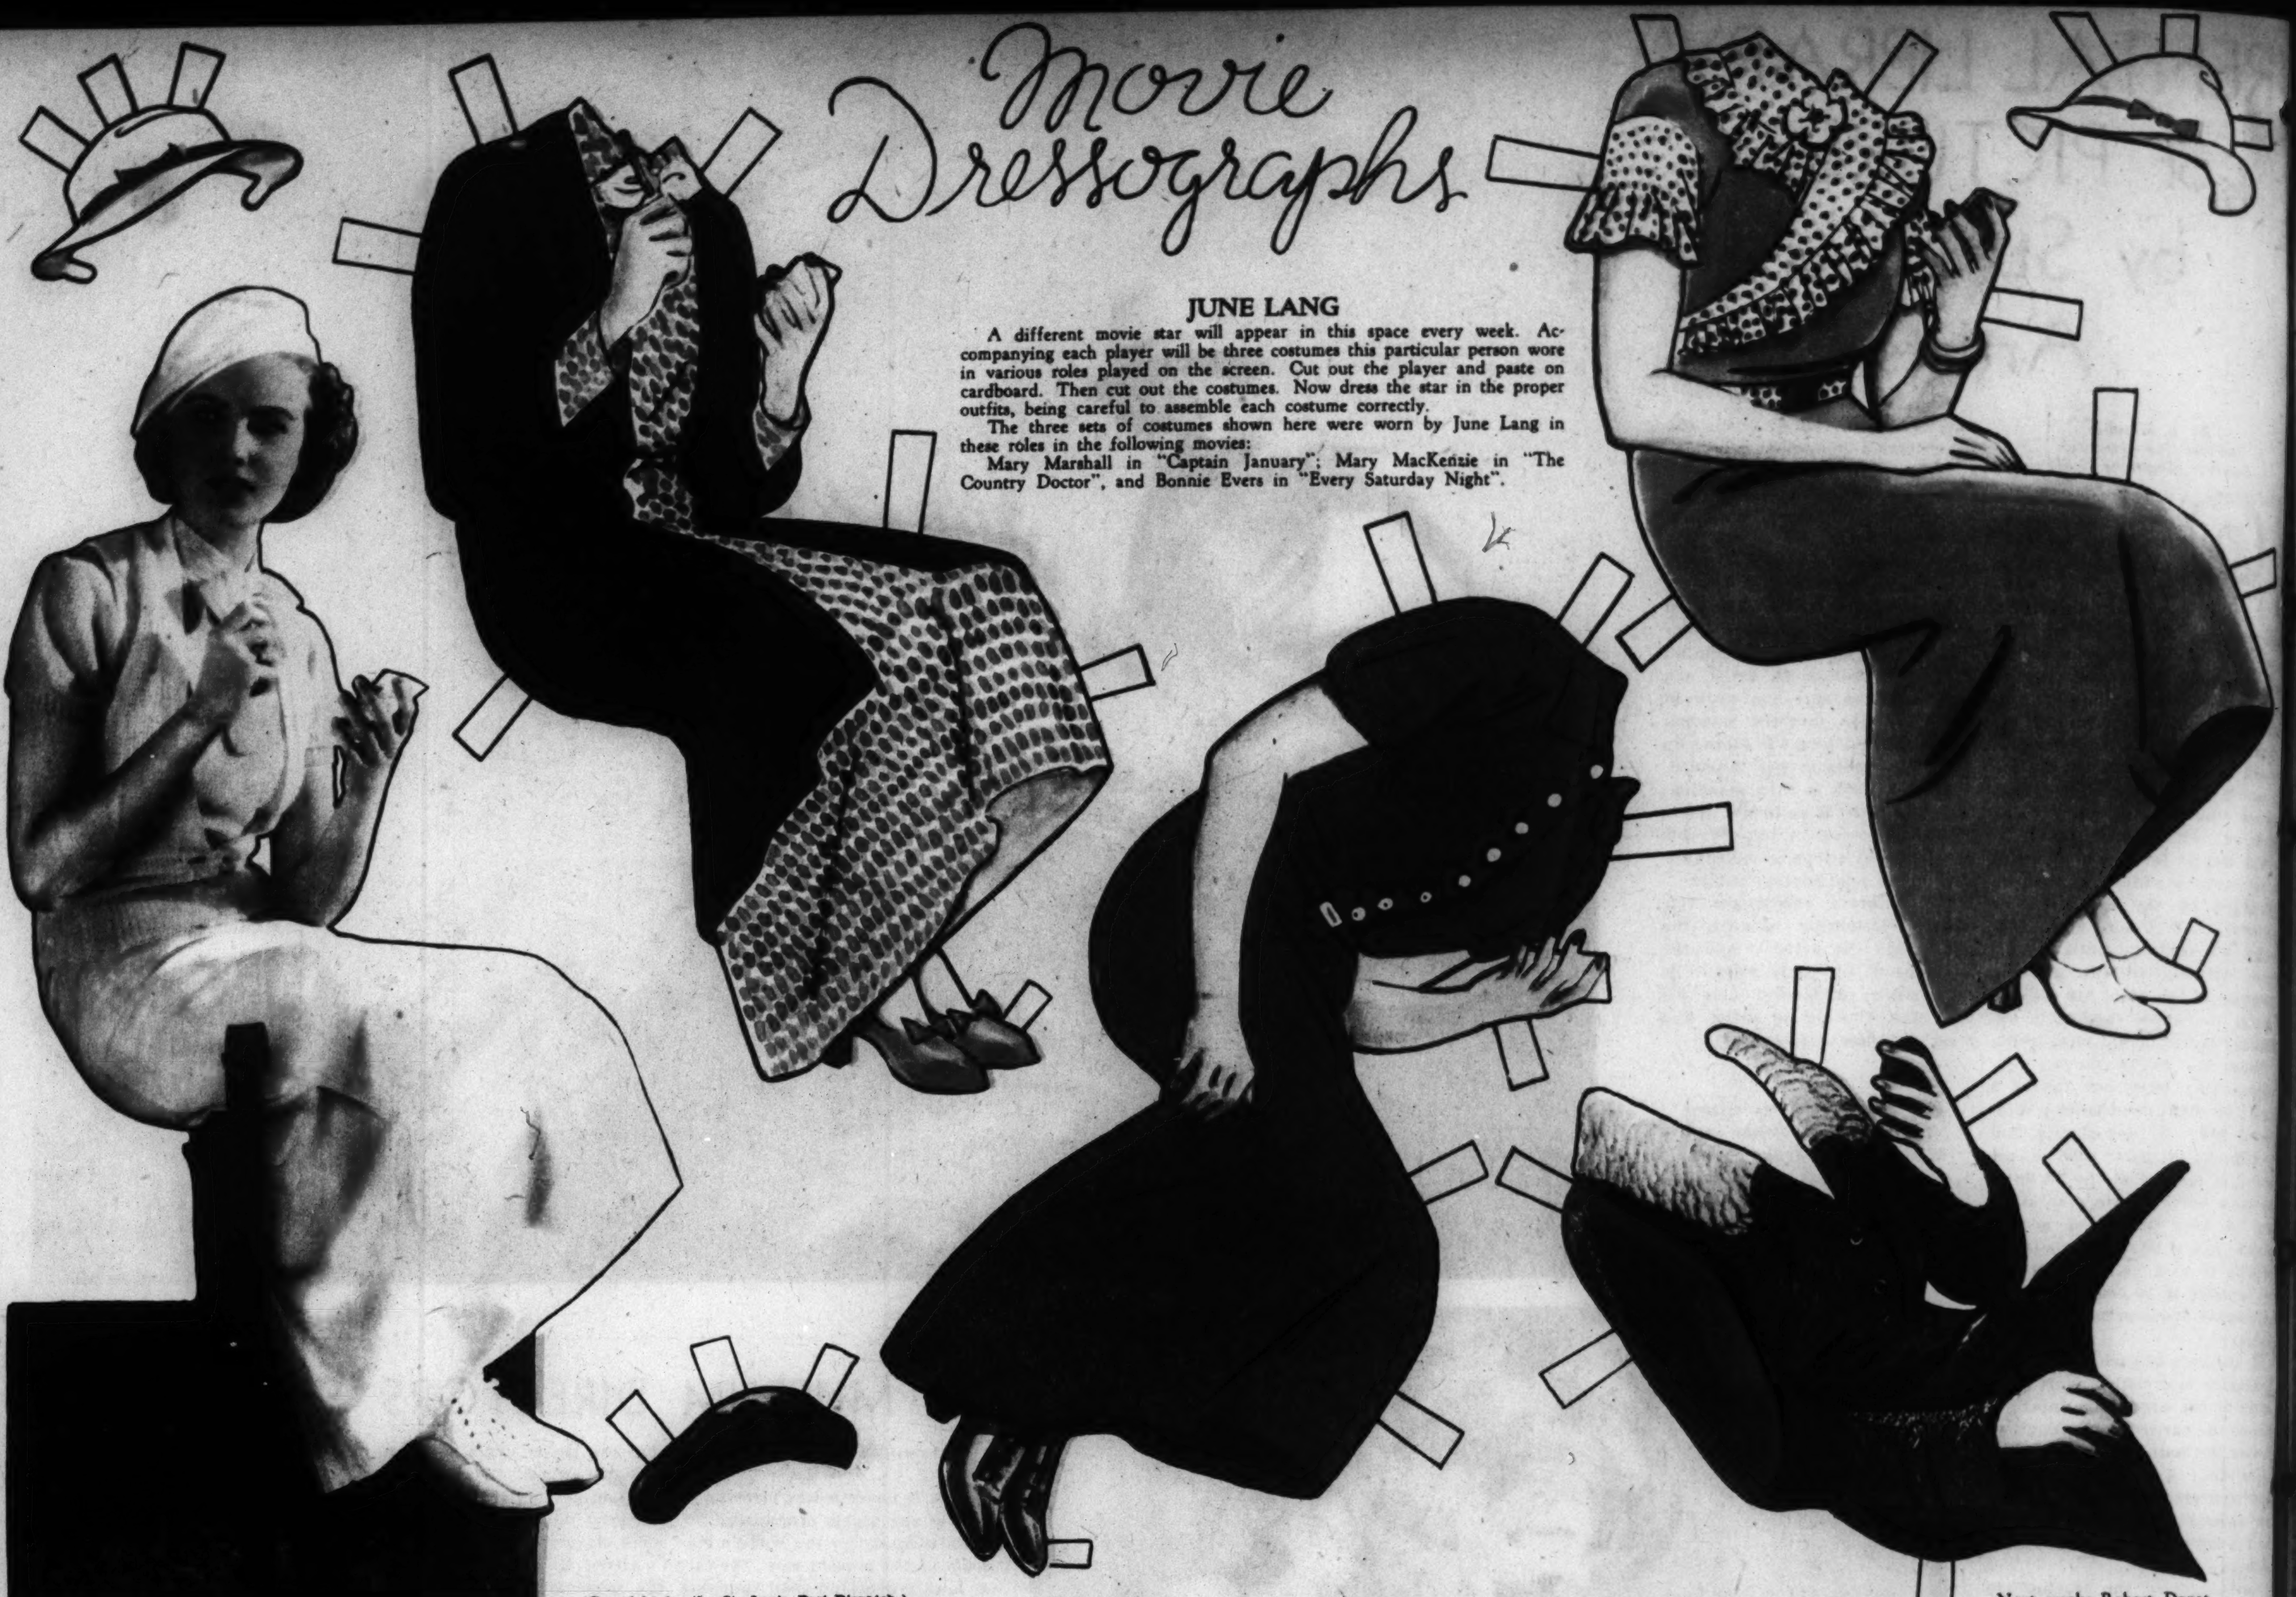
He spent four months buying a 1932 Chrysler; probably as long in choosing his current Packard. He ships it to Paris every summer. He couldn't do without it abroad. Possibly he pines for it on the sea; when things get dull in Paris, he strolls around to the garage to watch it being greased.

"Good-bye to that sick feeling—I spared 3 minutes of my time!"

Since I discovered the three-minute way, my troubles with constipation, with harsh "all-at-once" cathartics, are over. I can certainly spare three minutes of my time—three minutes chewing a delicious chewing gum like FEEN-A-MINT—when it makes such a difference. With FEEN-A-MINT there are no unpleasant after-effects, no cramping. I take it—my husband takes it—and how the children love it! FEEN-A-MINT—the three-minute way—is only 15c and 25c a box.

"Three minutes of chewing make the difference."

Movie Dressographs



JUNE LANG

A different movie star will appear in this space every week. Accompanying each player will be three costumes this particular person wore in various roles played on the screen. Cut out the player and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress the star in the proper outfits, being careful to assemble each costume correctly.

The three sets of costumes shown here were worn by June Lang in these roles in the following movies:

Mary Marshall in "Captain January"; Mary MacKenzie in "The Country Doctor", and Bonnie Evers in "Every Saturday Night".

OLD SWAG AND SHORTY

THE CHARACTERS

OLD SWAG—A daring old robber rat.
SHORTY—Old Swag's equally daring accomplice.
CHIEF OF POLICE RIP—An excited old raccoon.
BERT TILLON—A famous ferret detective.
DUNKER—Bert's constant companion.

Old man Moon sees many strange things as he travels across the sky at night. But, of all the strange things he has seen, none could compare with what he is seeing tonight. Two desperate robbers are trying to break into the Hickory Hollow jail. Old man Moon holds his breath and pauses to watch them as

THE PLAY BEGINS

OLD SWAG—(One of the robbers, whispering.) What do you see, Shorty?

SHORTY—(Who is looking through the keyhole.) Sh-h-h-h-h, not so loud. I can't see much of anything; it's too dark in there.

OLD SWAG—(Whispering more softly.) Can you hear anything like someone snoring?

SHORTY—I don't hear a sound. I'll bet there isn't anyone in there. Wait, I'll knock on the door. Be ready to run. (So Shorty knocks on the door, first softly, then, when there is no answer, he pounds on it with all his might. And when there isn't any response to this, he is convinced there is no one in the jail. So now Shorty goes over to talk with Old Swag.)

SHORTY—Gee, this is going to be a cinch. We'll break down that old door in a jiffy.

OLD SWAG—I hope we find some old police uniforms. We can put them on and go out and arrest everyone and lock them up in jail. Ha! Ha! Ha! (The rats pause to laugh and old man Moon watches them. And what he saw them do he won't be able to tell, because jolly old man Sun came up and chased Mr. Moon away. After jolly old man Sun was shining for a while he saw a terribly excited raccoon running as fast as he could. He watched him and saw him disappear in the door of Bert Tillon where we now find him.)

CHIEF OF POLICE RIP—(It was he the Sun saw.) Puff, puff. Someone broke down the jail door last night. Puff, puff. Can you help me find out who it was? Puff, puff. (Bert assures him that he and Dunker will be over to look at the door after they have had their breakfast, and the Chief leaves. And a little later Bert and Dunker set out.)

DUNKER—Ha! Ha! Ha! Imagine anyone breaking into jail. Ha! Ha! Ha! I'll bet it just rusted off its hinges from lack of use.

BERT TILLON—Hm-m. You're an optimist, Dunker. Something tells me you are in for a big surprise.

The Rajah lavished jewels on a coconut shell

Frank McHugh, Warner Bros. Star, in "Snowed Under"

"HIS HIGHNESS SMOKES A FORTUNE." Hindus marveled at their rajah, who decked his coconut water-pipe with rubies. The reason? No pleasure in the East is accounted greater than "low-temperature smoking."

Kings' ransoms have been spent on "low-temperature smoke"

So greatly did an Indian rajah treasure his coconut water-pipe, that he decked it with rubies of fabulous worth.

A Persian shah, Muzaffar-ud-Din, spent $400,000 for his!

And a mandarin in old Pekin had an artist spend a lifetime decorating one "smoke cooler" with gold!

Why all this extravagance? Since man first learned to enjoy tobacco, he has prized among his finest possessions any invention that would give him "low-temperature smoke."

For that is the secret of tobacco's supreme enjoyment!

Kings' ransoms have been spent in search of it. But who wants to cart around a water-pipe—with or without the jewels?

John Chinaman "air cools" his smoke with a long, thin stem.

Now it's done—in a cigarette

What Muzaffar-ud-Din spent a fortune for, you can buy for 15¢—in a package of the "low-temperature" cigarette—SUPER-MILD SPUD.

It isn't just another cigarette—it's another kind of smoking. "Low-temperature smoking"—with advantages you've never enjoyed before.

No tongue-bite. No throat-parch. No dry, dusty sting. And a clean, moist, fresh-tasting mouth—though you light 'em morning, noon and night.

SUPER-MILD SPUD has three things never before combined in a cigarette. Vintage tobaccos—up to 10 years old. Moisture "sealed in the leaf." And menthol! SPUD originated the menthol treatment of tobaccos—and still holds the secret of its effective use.

DOUBLE; REDOUBLE

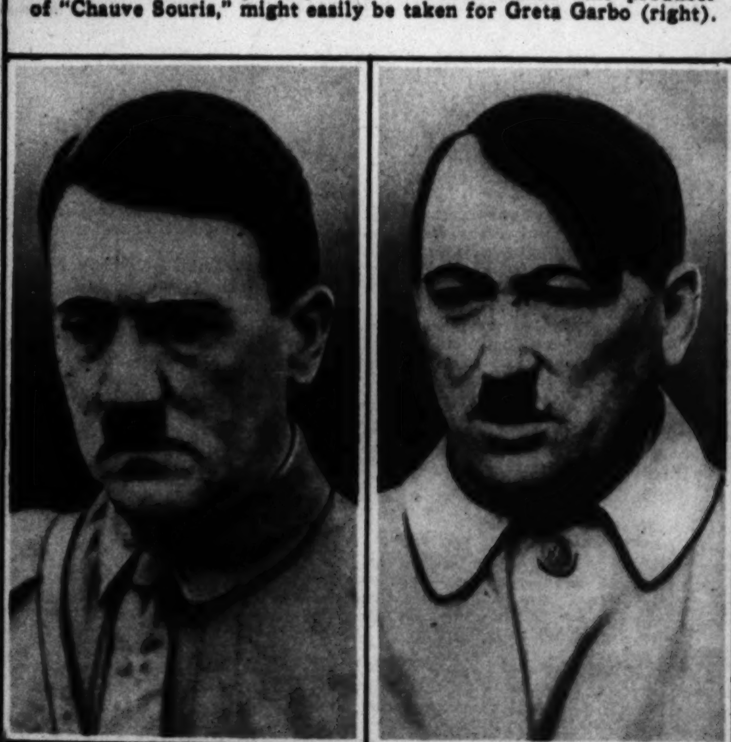
Among examples of celebrities who are almost indistinguishable from obscure men none is more startling than the resemblance of M. George (right), a Paris newspaper messenger, to the French statesman, Pierre Laval. Both affect white ties.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has two doubles, both of whom are constantly beseiged by autograph collectors. Mrs. Merle Protzman (left) is a French instructor at George Washington University in the capital; Mrs. Charles H. Kirk (right) lives in Pittsburgh, is a great admirer of the First Lady and is called Eleanor.

Merle Oberon, the film actress (left), might very well be impersonated by Barbara Beck, a New York dancer.

And Elena Komisarjevska, wife of Nikita Balieff—the producer of "Chauve Souris," might easily be taken for Greta Garbo (right).



An Associated Press photographer snapped the unidentified French workman at right, because he thought for a second he was Adolf Hitler. The man explained he was frequently picked out in crowds and told of the resemblance. The photograph was made at Nice.

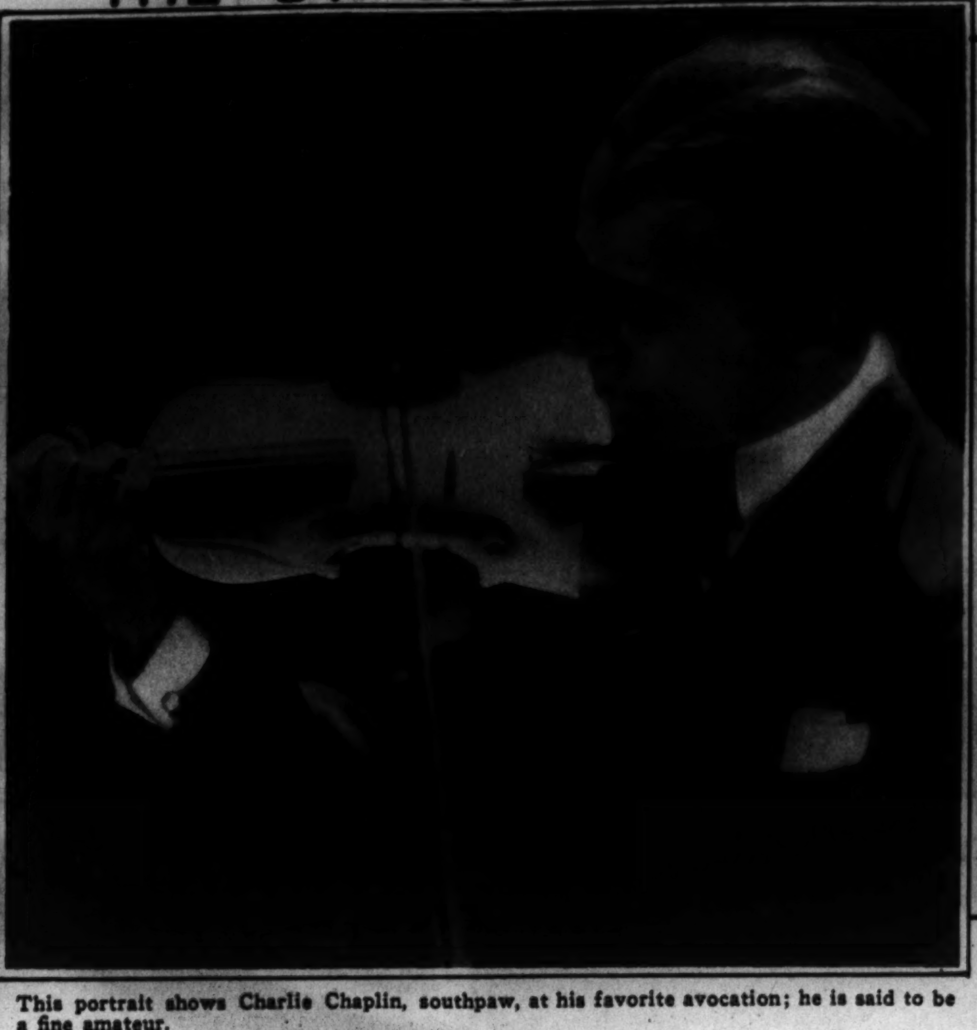
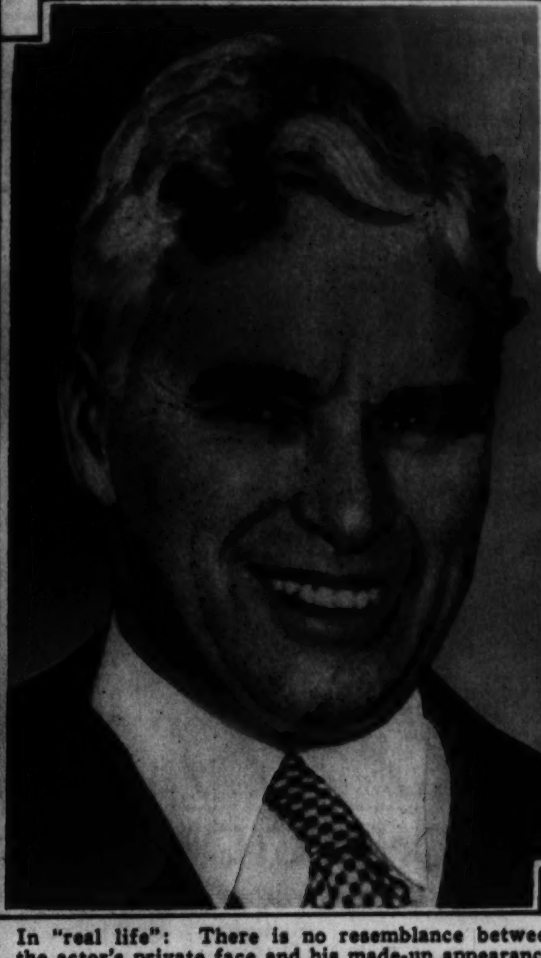
CHAPLIN—VETERAN OF 45 YEARS

—Associated Press photos.

Charlie Chaplin, who celebrated his forty-seventh birthday last week, has been behind footlights or before Kleig lights since the age of two. This photograph shows him as he was in 1917 when his pantomime was making him world famous as a comedian.



This portrait shows Charlie Chaplin, southpaw, at his favorite avocation; he is said to be a fine amateur.



In "real life": There is no resemblance between the actor's private face and his made-up appearance, which is so simple and effective that serious critics consider him the greatest mime in English-speaking countries.

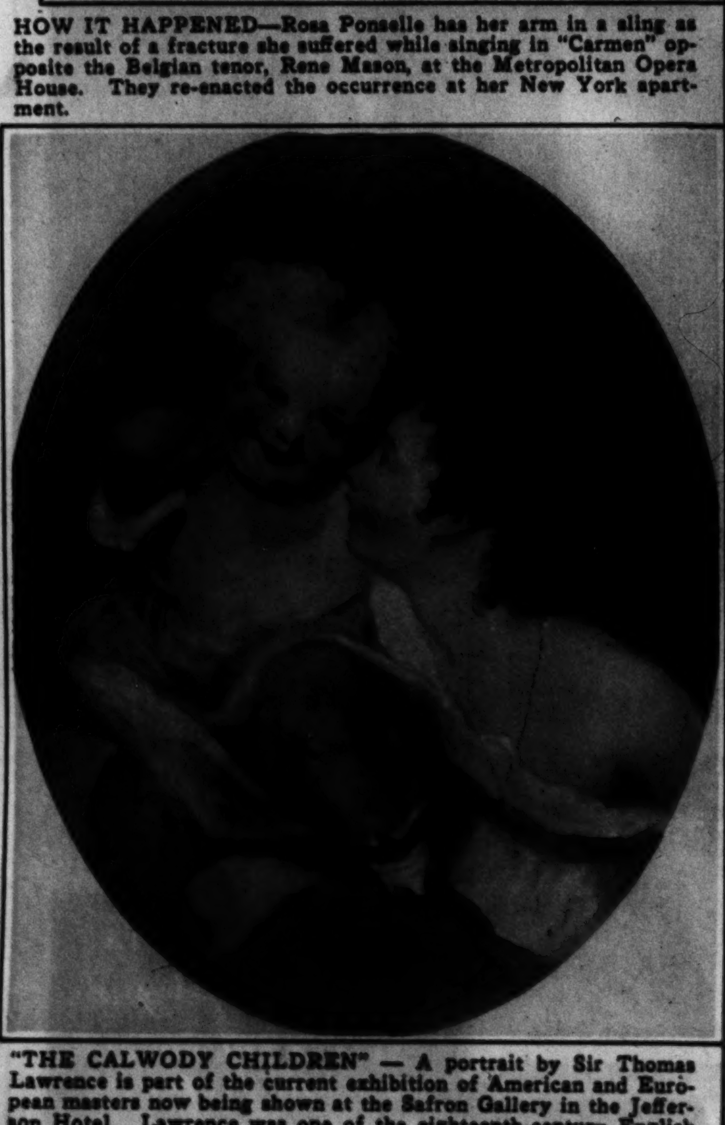
HOW IT HAPPENED—Rosa Ponselle has her arm in a sling as the result of a fracture she suffered while singing in "Carmen" opposite the Belgian tenor, Rene Mason, at the Metropolitan Opera House. They re-enacted the occurrence at her New York apartment.



"THE CALWODY CHILDREN" — A portrait by Sir Thomas Lawrence is part of the current exhibition of American and European masters now being shown at the Safron Gallery in the Jefferson Hotel. Lawrence was one of the eighteenth-century English portraitists.

The Dawn of a Great Beauty Discovery!

Now Science gives you the benefits of

"Filtered Sunshine"

in Woodbury's Facial Soap to bring new Loveliness to your Skin

NATURE endows the Sun with certain gentle, nurturing rays that have a marvelous power of enhancing the skin's loveliness.

At last a way has been found to capture these benign rays—separate them from those which parch the skin—and to irradiate the gentlest qualities of Sunshine into an ingredient of Woodbury's Facial Soap.

Now, Winter or Summer, every time you wash or bathe, Woodbury's is ready to give your skin the glorious benefits of this kindly Sunshine element.

Now a finer Beauty Soap than ever!

The world has long waited for the benefits of Sunshine in Soap! Today this great achievement is here! Here to stay...in the beauty soap that women everywhere cherish as an aid to skin loveliness.

You know Woodbury's Facial Soap! You've known and loved it for years. The way its tonic lather brings new radiant bloom to the complexion. The way Woodbury's helps to prevent and correct the common skin faults.

The half-century record of this world-famous soap is written in bold letters in the annals of dermatology! Both in laboratory and clinical tests, Woodbury's has proved its superior benefits for your complexion!

New Discovery of Science

How fitting then, that a great new discovery has contributed the qualities of "Filtered Sunshine" to this recognized beauty formula!

Everyone knows that Sunshine, in careful measure, is a natural skin beautifier. And now by a marvelous new process, an exclusive patented process, the useful rays are irradiated into an ingredient of Woodbury's Facial Soap, which is readily absorbed by the skin. An important scientific work, by Woodbury skin scientists and a leading American university!

Now the identical formula which produced such amazing results in the International Half-face Tests gives you this added luxury...the benefits of "Filtered Sunshine" in every cake!

Formerly 25c—
Now only 10c a Cake

Today the same full-size, long-lasting cake of Woodbury's that for years sold at 25c, is only 10c a cake! Now with its added Sunshine element, use it freely for your beauty bath, and to make your complexion "A Skin You Love to Touch". Bathe the baby in its gentle lather. Let all the family enjoy its benefits!

You can get the new Woodbury's at all toilet goods counters, and at the better grocers.

DON'T LET ADOLESCENT PIMPLES MAKE YOU FEEL DESERTED

LIFE is apt to look pretty blue to a boy or girl afflicted with pimples.

After the beginning of adolescence—from about 13 to 25, or even longer—many young people have trouble with their skin. At this time, important glands develop—and final growth takes place. Changes occur throughout the entire body, and the skin gets highly sensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin. Pimples pop out!

Fleischmann's fresh Yeast helps to overcome adolescent pimples. It clears these skin irritants out of the blood. Then—the pimples disappear!

Eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast every day, one before each meal—plain, or dissolved in a little water—until your skin is clear. Start today.

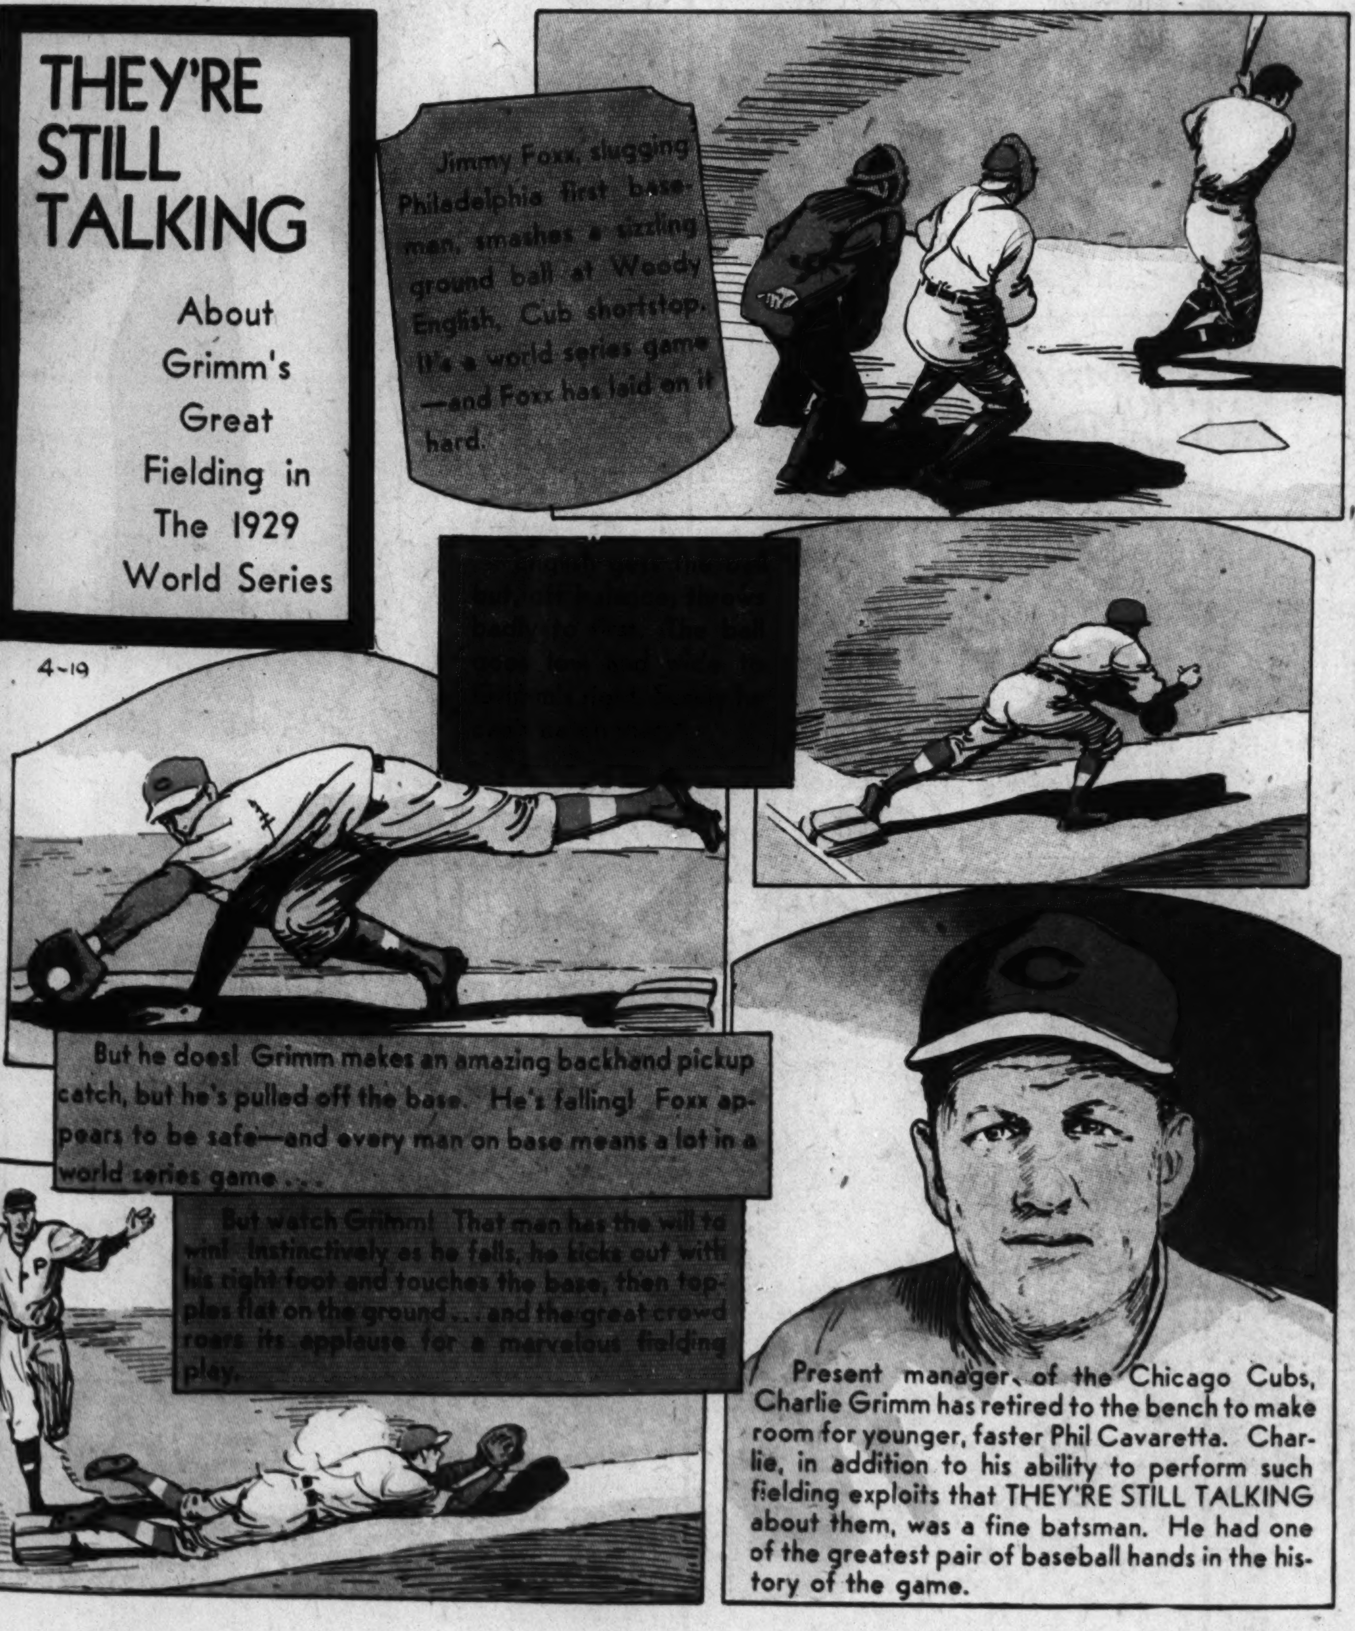
THEY'RE STILL TALKING

About Grimm's Great Fielding in The 1929 World Series



Jimmy Foxx, slugging Philadelphia first baseman, smashes a sizzling ground ball at Woody English, Cub shortstop. It's a world series game—and Foxx has laid on it hard.

[illegible]

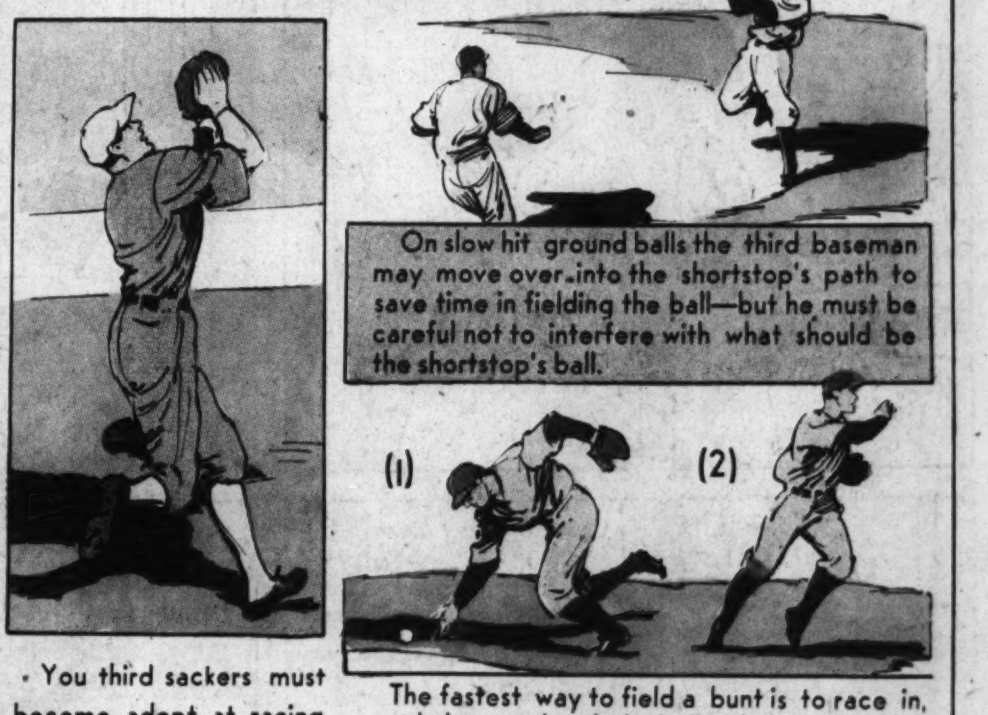
But he does! Grimm makes an amazing backhand pickup catch, but he's pulled off the base. He's falling! Foxx appears to be safe—and every man on base means a lot in a world series game . . .

But watch Grimm! That man has the will to win! Instinctively as he falls, he kicks out with his right foot and touches the base, then topples flat on the ground . . . and the great crowd roars its applause for a marvelous fielding play.

Present manager of the Chicago Cubs, Charlie Grimm has retired to the bench to make room for younger, faster Phil Cavaretta. Charlie, in addition to his ability to perform such fielding exploits that THEY'RE STILL TALKING about them, was a fine batsman. He had one of the greatest pair of baseball hands in the history of the game.

Baseball . . . . By NED BRANT

Third Base (The Hot Corner)



On slow hit ground balls the third baseman may move over into the shortstop's path to save time in fielding the ball—but he must be careful not to interfere with what should be the shortstop's ball.

• You third sackers must become adept at racing back for fair or foul balls and even up against the grandstand for fouls.

The fastest way to field a bunt is to race in, reach down and grab the ball with the bare hand, straighten and throw in your stride—but it takes practice, and then more practice.

Political Pressure fo Capacity 'Inevita Groups Unite in ing Arms Makers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April Senate Munitions Commit ommended in a majority r day the nationalization of industrials plants to produ ships, guns and powder peace-time needs of the ar navy.

Supporting the majority were Chairman Nye (Rep.) Dakota; Clark (Dem.), M Pope (Dem.), Idaho, an (Dem.), Washington. The view was presented by Vandenberg (Rep.), M George (Dem.), Georgia, a bour (Rep.), New Jersey.

"The committee majority, port said, "recommends ment ownership of faciliti quate for the construction warships by the Navy Dep also all gun forgings, pr and armor plate, and of adequate for the produc powder, rifles, pistols and guns necessary for the partment. . .

"The majority believes War and Navy Departmen produce from their own ra employ sufficient able tech to operate these plants suc ly."

Minority's Point of Vi

The minority said that Government plants are "there will be inevitable lo litical pressure to maintai plants at full capacity pro regardless of actual defense and the result will be to en armament rather than d ment.
